GIANTS VICTORS, 5-4; 58,000 SEE YANKS LOSE STIRRING GAME

Stengel's Home Run in Ninth Inning Wins First of World's Series.

YANKEES ARE OUTPLAYED

RUTH HITS THREE-BAGGER

In the greatest game of baseball ever played between championship teams the Giants yesterday defeated the Yankees, 5 to 4, before 58,000 people at the Yankee Stadium and drew first blood in the 1923 world's series. With the score tied at the start of the ninth inning, the veteran Casey Stengel of the Giants drove a home run to the fence in left centre field, and the run that he carried with him around the bases was the run that counted most of all.

The size of the crowd, of course, broke all existing records for a world's series. According to the official announcement of Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis, 58,807 actually paid their way into the Stadium, and at least 3,000 others were there who had not paid. The old record in series attendance was 42,-020, the crowd that saw the Boston Americans and the Brooklyn Nationals play in Boston in 1916.

The total receipts also reached a new high level, $181,912, exceeding by a great margin the record sum of $125,147 which was paid to see the Yankees and Giants in their final battle last October. Not even yesterday's great crowd, however, filled every seat in the Stadium, which means that more records may be set before the series is over.

Game Beat the Record.

But the game, not the crowd, was the thing. It was a great specimen of baseball unfolded itself, inning by inning, gate receipts and attendance records faded into the background.

To say that this contest was a bitterly fought battle would be to utter a platitude. In a way it was a game of much poor baseball. Technically it was not a contest of the highest order. Yankee ineptness and Yankee blundering were blended with Giant smartness. But even when they made mistakes the Yankees fought grimly and tenaciously, and when the last man was out the Giants had won a game that for sheer nerve and raw courage has no parallel in the one and only national sport.

It took faith, hope and determination to win behind the pitching that the Giants got yesterday. John McGraw's first selection, Solemn John Watson, was hammered into submission in the first two innings, and Bill Ryan, who followed him, got out of one hole only to get into another. Time after time, inning after inning, the Giants rescued their pitcher with defensive baseball that was almost miraculous. Brilliant stops, impossible catches and wonderful throws tumbled on the heels of one another. When Ryan at last seemed to be cornered, Frisch or Kelly or Groh would perform a seeming miracle and the crisis had been met.

Decisive Stroke in the Ninth.

In this fashion the Giants passed through to the ninth inning, and there was dealt the offensive stroke which came as the climax of all the defensive brilliance that had gone before. Bullet Joe Bush was pitching as the successor of Waite Hoyt, who was batted out in the third inning, and there were two out when Casey Stengel stepped to the bat. It was "Casey at the Bat" all over again, but this time the great Casey did not strike out. He waited Bush out patiently, worked the count to three balls and two strikes and then hit the next pitch on a sharp line to left centre.

The ball struck between Witt and Bob Meusel and rolled to the fence. Witt was going like the wind after that pellet, but not much faster than old Casey Stengel was going around the bases. With one leg injured and the other not as young and spry as it used to be, Casey ran the race of his life. Out at the fence Witt was gathering the ball in. He turned and flung it to Meusel, and Meusel turned and threw it toward the plate.

Stengel Beats the Ball.

By now Stengel was rounding third, badly winded but still going strong. It was a race between man and ball, but the man won easily, for Casey slid into the plate and up onto one knee in a single motion. Then he waved a hand in a comical gesture that seemed to say, "Well, there you are," and the game was as good as over.

The game was ended and so was Stengel, for almost immediately the hero retired to the club house, Cunningham taking his place in centrefield during the Giants' half of the inning. That dash for glory around the bases was Casey Stengel's work for the day, and it was enough.

But no team ever had a closer call than the Giants. Their pitchers were pounded for twelve hits by the Yanks, including a triple by Babe Ruth, another by Dugan and three two-baggers. With this formidable show of batting power the Yanks made just four runs, one less than the Giants made with their more modest allotment of eight safeties. It was the old, old story again, Yankee foolishness, Yankee faltering and Yankee blundering trying to cope with the steady, sure-fire if not baseball of their rivals.

LATEST MARK FALL FINDS BERLIN DAZED

6½ BILLION TO THE DOLLAR

Signs of a Coming Currency Crisis When Paper Marks Will No Longer Be Accepted.

By CYRIL BROWN.

BERLIN, Oct. 10.—An audible gasp with the quality of a groan went up from the business section of Berlin shortly after 1 o'clock today when news spread that the mark rate had been officially fixed at 3,000,000,000 to the dollar.

A prosperous German business man when the telephone flashed the news turned ashen pale. "We are busted," he said in the Berlin vernacular.

Everywhere else in Berlin I found the real thing in 100 per cent. pessimism—"weltuntergang stimmung" as the Germans say. Translated into the American vernacular, many Teutons of all classes said today: "We are finished, down and out; it's all over but the shouting."

Hardly had the bad news come from the Boerse that the mark was officially 3,000,000,000 to the dollar when Frankfort crashed in with 3,600,000,000, and during the afternoon and evening in Berlin paper marks went begging at 4,000,000,000 to 5,000,000,000 marks to the dollar. It seems as if paper marks had ceased to be Germany's principal and most profitable export commodity. One has the impression the foreign markets are saturated with this made-in-Germany article, and yet rarely has German manufacturing and organizing genius given a more brilliant demonstration of its championship prowess than in making paper marks in this crisis.

Five and ten billion bank notes will be issued in the next few days. The 5,000,000,000 notes were slated to be an esthetic violet, the 10,000,000,000 notes an elegant mauve and they still may be when the originally planned issues materialize. Meanwhile, caught in an avalanche of depreciation, the Reichsbank printers will issue provisional 5,000,000,000 and 10,000,000,000 notes in plain black print on white with only the figure in color. The work is progressing favorably on designing and printing 20,000,000,000, 50,000,000,000 and 100,000,000,000 mark notes which will be available when needed. Designers, printers and pressmen are working overtime.

The masses of the German people still show splendid ingrained discipline and heroism by continuing to accept paper marks for goods and services rendered, although the German people have at last realized that the paper mark is no longer money. Knowing it to be worthless, the people still do business with the paper mark because of the force of habit and also the instinctive feeling that there must be some medium of exchange even if worthless.

The question is how long this honest gambling psychosis will endure. The next foreseeable development is that Germans generally will cease to regard the paper mark as a medium of exchange and act accordingly. One is tempted to predict this currency crisis within ten days.

A physical forerunner of this crisis is witnessed in all parts of Berlin this afternoon. In every butcher shop there were clamorous or patient scores waiting a turn to enter and exchange their paper marks for meat and sausage, even at the rate of half a billion per pound. A few bought as much as one pound. All other food shops were rushed like bargain counters.

Department stores, too, were crowded. Everybody who had a paper mark was standing from under and scrambling on to the bandwagon of concrete values of food and merchandise.

At a railroad station in Tough, North Berlin, I saw a goulash cannon, a soup cooking field kitchen operated by the PARIS, Oct. 10.—Dr. Von Hoesch, German Charge d'Affaires, called on Premier Poincaré today and announced that the German Government was ready to negotiate for resumption of work in the Ruhr. M. Poincaré answered that there was nothing to negotiate about; that the Germans had only to put the Ruhr workshop back in operation as it was before the French occupation and that any local difficulties would be adjusted by General Degoutte on the spot.

The French Premier asked the German diplomat to say to his Government that once passive resistance had ended and the Ruhr had returned to work the Reparation Commission would consider any proposal Berlin had to make.

The response of M. Poincaré deserves some explanation, for it represents much more than his traditional evidence of firmness toward Germany. In his proposal Dr. Von Hoesch suggested the formation of a commission composed of delegates of France, Belgium and Germany which should sit in the Ruhr to regulate all issues arising from cessation of passive resistance and the operation of the Ruhr under Franco-Belgian direction.

Two French Objections.

There are two French objections to such a commission. In the first place, General Degoutte is actually making agreements on the spot with the Ruhr industrials, and in making them he is supreme, and not bound to lend himself to German manoeuvres. Secondly, since England has notified the French of her wish to take part in any reparation negotiations, it is highly probable that England would wish to be represented on any commission which is to control the Ruhr, from which reparation payments for the next few years will largely come. But England's official position remains that Ruhr occupation is illegal, and the French do not think the task of getting the Ruhr to produce for them would be facilitated by British participation at this stage.

M. Poincaré's program is, first of all, to get the Ruhr to work making coal deliveries to the Allies and shipping products which may be taxed. He wishes to get this job completed, signed and sealed before the matter of general reparations is taken up. In that way he not only will take away from Germany any power to bargain on what she would do in the Ruhr, but will oblige the English to accept Ruhr occupation as a fait accompli, to stand for some time to come, whatever paper arrangements may be made with the Reich.

His action today is viewed as entirely in line with that policy. He tells the Germans in the Ruhr to arrange with General Degoutte, representing the French and Belgians, for the resumption of industrial operation, and once that is accomplished to address themselves for a general reparations settlement to the Reparation Commission, the common agent of all the allies.

It is evident to the French that Germany's action today was an effort to intervene officially in arrangements being made at Düsseldorf by General Degoutte with the German industrials. The German Government has not yet ordered the Ruhr and Rhineland paywar men back to their jobs, and in view of the attitude the Germans have shown since President Ebert's ungraciously worded proclamation of the end of passive resistance the French are extremely shy of taking chances of gumming up their game.

It is understood that M. Poincaré informed Dr. Von Hoesch today that France would have absolutely nothing to do with the dispute between the German industrials and workmen over the eight-hour day, that being a matter to be settled by the Germans among themselves. It will be recalled that Stinnes and Thyssen tried to get General Degoutte to declare that the eight-hour

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10. — The Civil Service Commission has compiled figures showing that the number of civilian employes of the Government on June 30, the close of the fiscal year, was 548,531. On June 30, 1916, the close of the fiscal year prior to the entrance of the United States into the World War, the number was 438,057.

The peak of civilian personnel was reached at the time of the armistice, November 11, 1918, when the number was approximately 917,760. Since then there has been a gradual reduction. At the end of the fiscal year 1920 the number was 691,116; 1921, 597,482, and 1922, 560,963.

The number of civilian employes in the District of Columbia on June 30 last was 66,290, and outside of the District, 482,241. Of these 27,469 in the District of Columbia and 54,052 outside were women.

Most of the executive branches of the Government have had heavy increases in the number of civilian employes since the United States entered the World War. The Interior Department is a notable exception. Its civilian force of 19,547 in 1916 has been reduced to 16,-493 in 1923. The Post Office Department has the largest civilian personnel, it having increased from 250,855 in 1916 to 235,822 in 1923. The Treasury Department has the largest percentage increase. Its civilian force in 1916 was 30,629. On June 30, this year, it was 51,150.

Several administrative offices were created as a result of the war and these have helped to swell the total of civilian employes.

MRS. STOKES CRIES 'LIAR' TO WITNESS

TURMOIL DELAYS COURT

Mrs. Stokes's Mother Threatens to Kill Chauffeur Henshaw —Even Stokes in Tears.

When a chauffeur formerly employed by Mrs. W. E. D. Stokes testified yesterday at the trial of the divorce suit against her that the relations between Mrs. Stokes and himself had been "improper," Mrs. Stokes jumped to her feet and cried "you're a liar."

"Make him take it back, Mr. Untermyer," she pleaded in tears to her counsel. "You know it's not true. He lies. If you don't make him take it back, Mr. Untermyer, my brother will."

"You ought to be hung," shouted Mrs. A. S. Miller, Mrs. Stokes's mother, seated at the back of the court room, to the chauffeur. "I'll kill him" she added, to the spectators.

Later, under Mr. Untermyer's cross-examination, the chauffeur explained that the impropriety of his relations with Mrs. Stokes lay in the fact as charged by him that she had given him money to obtain or "frame up" divorce evidence against her husband.

Courtroom in Uproar.

In the meantime it had taken counsel and court attendants five minutes to quiet Mrs. Stokes and her mother. Mr. Stokes, heretofore, impassive at the trial, shed a few tears.

The chauffeur was Elmer E. Henshaw of Dobbs Ferry, now employed by W. H. McGee. He told Justice Mahoney and the jury that he had been chauffeur for Mrs. Stokes between March, 1916, and February, 1917. At Mrs. Stokes's direction, he said, he stopped at 13 East Thirty-fifth Street five or six times. Each time, he said, he waited for an hour or two for Mrs. Stokes. The address, other witnesses had stated, was that of Edgar T. Wallace, oil promoter, whom Mr. Stokes named as co-respondent.

After Max D. Steuer, trial counsel for Stokes, gave his witness over to Mr. Untermyer for cross-examination, it developed that a diary which Henshaw said he had always kept had disappeared shortly before he made a statement to Daniel F. Nugent of counsel for Stokes, ten days ago. He expected to find the books, he said, somewhere in the courtroom.

"You say I stole them?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

"No, sir."

"Or somebody in my behalf?"

Asked Mrs. Stokes for Job.

Mr. Untermyer questioned Henshaw about a letter he wrote to Mrs. Stokes, Feb. 26, 1918, in which he said he would gladly work for her again.

"How did you come to write this letter?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

"I was very friendly with Mrs. Stokes," Henshaw replied.

"What do you mean?"

"Just what I say. I was very friendly with Mrs. Stokes."

"Did you mean to imply anything wrong?"

"Yes, I did," replied the chauffeur in a loud tone.

It was at this point that Mrs. Stokes called Henshaw a liar, and for a few minutes the courtroom was in a turmoil. When quiet had been restored Mr. Untermyer continued to question Henshaw.

"How long are you married?"

"Thirteen years."

"Do you mean to have the jury understand that you had committed adultery with Mrs. Stokes?"

"No, sir," replied Henshaw.

Make Him Explain Says Mrs. Stokes.

"Make him explain what he meant," interjected Mrs. Stokes.

"Not at all," Henshaw replied. "I didn't say anything about adultery. You said that."

"How much has this man paid you?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

"Have you not intimated to the Court and jury," said Mr. Untermyer, "that while there was no adultery the relationship between Mrs. Stokes and yourself was of improper character."

"Yes, they were," replied the witness.

Mrs. Stokes again jumped up, crying: "It's a lie and you know it. You were paid by my husband to lie." Weeping

MURPHY ALARMED; DEMANDS FULL VOTE

FEARS HEARST OPPOSITION

For the first time since he has been leader of Tammany Hall Charles F. Murphy has made a personal appeal to the district leaders to get out a full registration. He sent a telegram yesterday to every man and woman Assembly district leader in the city urgently requesting them to see to it that every voter is registered this year.

While it was denied at Tammany Hall that Murphy is worried over the ticket this year and does not like the way the registration is going, it was rumored that he is not at all satisfied and fears the effect that the opposition of William R. Hearst may have upon the Tammany judiciary candidates. Hearst has violently attacked the Tammany candidates in his newspapers lately, and Tuesday night an anti-Tammany judicial slate was put in the field at the last moment under the designation of the Citizens' Independent Party.

While the ten Republican candidates for the Supreme Court are named on independent petitions to run under the emblem of the party, it was said yesterday that the formation of the new party is to serve as the vehicle for Hearst's continuance in the political field for the next three years at least, or until after the next Mayoralty election in 1925. Leader Murphy is said to have become alarmed at the renewal of Hearst's activity and to have decided to wage a determined fight this Fall to defeat the candidates supported by Hearst.

Aims at Downing Hearst.

According to rumors at Tammany Hall, Mr. Murphy has decided to accept battle with Hearst and to make an effort to defeat the Hearst candidates so thoroughly that the publisher will be discounted if he attempts through his new party to continue in politics.

This is the telegram Mr. Murphy sent to his district leaders:

"You are earnestly requested to use every effort to secure a full registration in your district. In order to uphold Mayor Hylan's splendid Administration and to secure an Assembly that will aid Governor Smith in carrying out his progressive policies, as well as to give every elector opportunity to elect a splendid ticket and the right to approve the appeal of the police and firemen for just compensation, and to support at the polls the meritorious home-rule amendment, as well as to authorize needed funds for a soldiers' bonus and for proper care of our helpless wards in State institutions, every man and woman in your district entitled to vote should be appealed to to see that his or her name is on the registry list."

That Mr. Murphy's personal appeal to the district leaders has a direct connection with the Tammany judicial ticket was evidenced by a statement issued by James J. Hoey, who is manager of the Democratic Judiciary Committee, which will direct the campaign of the ten Democratic Supreme Court candidates. The statement sets forth that while reports received from all Democratic sources indicate that the first two days of registration are entirely favorable in Democratic sections of the city, the Democratic campaign managers have issued requests to every organization worker to redouble his or her efforts to bring about a record-breaking registration in all Assembly districts. According to the statement, an analysis made by the Democratic leaders shows that where the Democratic vote is heaviest the registration up to the present time has been nearest to that of last year.

Hoey Professes Satisfaction.

"All reports that we have received from Assembly and election district workers indicate that registration, on the part of Democrats and Independents is as heavy this year as during the first two days of last year's registration," continued Mr. Hoey. He added that the ten Tammany judiciary candidates are to work as a unit and have already engaged campaign headquarters at the Commodore Hotel. The headquarters will be the centre for the judiciary campaign.

"Reports received from our workers, who are urging a large registration, are to the effect that they have found not only antipathy but absolute hostility among independents and a great number of Republicans toward the Hearst-Koenig alliance," said Mr. Hoey. "This resentment, particularly among Republicans, will undoubtedly be reflected at the polls. Many of the Republicans who have already registered have announced that they are doing so for the purpose of rebuking this Hearst-Koenig fifty-fifty ticket. All of our efforts during the remainer of the week will be devoted to getting out the largest number of voters that it is possible to bring to the registration places. After that we shall conduct an aggressive, dignified campaign for the election of Legislators who will uphold Governor Smith and for a clean judiciary."

CORRIGAN ADMITS NO PROOF OF GRAFT AGAINST ENRIGHT

But Testifies That In His Private Opinion Commissioner Is Corrupt.

HE EXPLAINS TELEGRAM

Sought to Modify Message on Which Libel Proceedings Were Brought.

ENRIGHT AGAIN TESTIFIES

Swears He Had Only One Bank Account—Counsel May Sum Up Today.

Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan brought his defense of the criminal libel action started by Police Commissioner Enright to a sudden and dramatic close yesterday when, as the final witness in the proceedings before Judge Thomas C. T. Crain, he declared that when he gave out a telegram containing a reference to "Enright and his graft collectors" he believed that Commissioner Enright was a grafter.

The Magistrate's appraisal of the Police Department head was not volunteered. It was brought out as the result of a direct question by Assistant District Attorney Pecora on cross-examination. Magistrate Corrigan denied that in giving out the telegram he sought to give expression to his private thoughts. On the contrary, he asserted that he felt that the publication of the telegram was unjust and unfair to Mr. Enright, and added that he had believed it understood that the offending words were to be struck out of the message before publication.

Nevertheless, Magistrate Corrigan declared, he believed that he had submitted some "pretty good proof" of graft during the proceedings before Judge Crain. Pressed by Mr. Pecora to specify the proof, he replied:

"I think that when you get to Room 205, Police Headquarters, you are getting pretty close to some."

"Do you think that is fair proof that Enright took graft?" asked Mr. Pecora.

"I think that it is a fair inference," said Magistrate Corrigan.

"Room 205" Brought Up.

Room 205, according to the testimony of the hearing, was the private office of Commissioner Enright at the time of the so-called Petrucci case, on May 28, 1921. It was from there that Detective William Morrison testified that he received a telephone message warning him to "lay off" after he had stopped a truckload of liquor, which the driver said belonged to three high police officials.

Magistrate Corrigan, under direct examination by John D. Lindsay, his counsel, swore that while he believed that widespread corruption among the police was the inevitable consequence of the Mullan-Gage State Prohibition law, he had no legal proof that Commissioner Enright was personally involved. He said he had assiduously avoided personalities.

The reference to Commissioner Enright in the telegram, Magistrate Corrigan also said, had not struck him at the time he gave it out. In fact, he asserted, his intention was centred on the suggestion made by Assemblyman Cuvillier, the sender of the telegram for a legislative investigation of the police situation. When he did notice the allusion to Commissioner Enright, he said, he called up the representative of one newspaper and asked that the phrase be struck out and that the other newspapers be notified.

"I told him I would not take any responsibility for it," he said.

Counsel May Sum Up Today.

With the testimony of Magistrate Corrigan both the defense and the prosecution rested. Judge Crain adjourned the proceedings to 10:30 this morning, when the counsel may sum up, if Judge Crain so allows. It is possible that briefs will be submitted. While there is nothing to prevent a decision by Judge Crain today as to whether Magistrate Corrigan and Assemblyman Cuvillier shall be held for the Grand Jury, it is believed that he will defer such a decision for several days at least.

Assemblyman Cuvillier, who has been present at only a few of the sessions,

PARIS, Oct. 10.—Women in the French capital use an average of 1 kilogram (more than 2 pounds) of face powder yearly, according to the reckoning of persons interested in the industry.

Since women use 2 kilograms yearly, the total yearly consumption by the women of Paris is 1,000 tons.

It is also estimated that 1,000 tons of perfumery are consumed here annually. There is no average consumption of lipsticks and eyebrow pencils. Most of these are not completely consumed, but are tossed out of handbags.

ROCKEFELLER GIVES $1,000,000 TO ZOO

Remainder Promised When an Additional $1,000,000 Is Raised Independently.

A gift of $1,000,000 by John D. Rockefeller Jr., to the New York Zoological Society was announced yesterday, following a meeting of the Executive Committee of the society. Half the amount is immediately available for use in meeting the society's general expenses and the remaining $500,000 is pledged by Mr. Rockefeller on condition that the society raise independently of the Rockefeller gift an additional $1,000,000 for endowment purposes.

Announcement also was made of a gift of $100,000 from Edward S. Harkness and of $50,000 by the estate of Mrs. Frederic Ferris Thompson.

The Rockefeller gift is made toward a $3,000,000 endowment fund which the society started to raise last January when it was seen that it would have to meet a large deficit and that the appropriations of the Board of Estimate would be inadequate to liquidate past obligations and carry on the work of the society without curtailment. The Executive Committee yesterday announced its determination to push the drive to raise the contingent fund.

The $1,000,000 pledged by Mr. Rockefeller is the largest gift ever made by an individual to the society, according to Dr. William T. Hornaday, director of that organization. He said the next largest gift was that of Mrs. Russell Sage, who willed to the society a bequest of $750,000.

Mr. Rockefeller's interest in the Zoological Society has increased ever since he became a member of the Board of Managers. He came forward with assistance immediately after it was disclosed to him that the society was facing large deficits without means to meet its obligations.

Dr. Hornaday explained that the next step toward raising the $1,000,000 fund with which the society must meet the Rockefeller gift would be taken through Madison Grant, Chairman of the Executive Committee. Mr. Grant will appeal to the society's friends to make contributions and to help in other ways to fulfill the requirement of Mr. Rockefeller with respect to the second half of his gift.

Regarding the $500,000 which Mr. Rockefeller gave outright, Dr. Hornaday said he wished to make it clear that "no strings were attached to the gift." He explained that with all the difficulties encountered in the maintenance of the Zoological Gardens it was necessary to ask the city for an appropriation of $310,000. Included in the items for which money is needed is that of repairs, amounting to $30,000 a year.

"The wear and tear on the animal buildings, which are visited by 2,500,-000 persons each year, is enormous," said Dr. Hornaday. "There is heavy wear on our furnaces because we have to be exceedingly careful in maintaining even temperatures for the animals. Their replacement cost is great. The iron work in the buildings is damaged severely by rust, and that is another heavy item in the list of repairs. We have to be unusually careful about making repairs to the iron work because we must depend upon it for the security of visitors and of the animals."

Dr. Hornaday said that the Zoo would be relieved of a large part of its embarrassment by the generosity of Mr. Rockefeller. He estimated that the interest on the first half of the fund would amount to $25,000 or $30,000, and that, he explained, would be "spread over the society's general expenses." The principal is to be left untouched.

GET LOOT AFTER MURDER

ESCAPE IN WAITING AUTO

Two were shot and killed and $15,600 in cash was stolen yesterday in one of the quickest and most daring daylight hold-ups staged in this city in many months.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon, in the rear of Rothenberg's Fourteenth Street dry goods store, four robbers held up two guards conveying the money from the store to a bank. Fifty feet away in Thirteenth Street is the Julia Richman High School for Girls and the street is seldom free of traffic. Despite the odds against them, three of the bandits got away. One was left stretched on his back in the middle of the street, a bullet through the left temple. Near by, with bullets through his heart and jugular vein, lay one of the guards, twenty-one years in the employ of the Rothenberg store.

The approach of the robbers, the murder, the theft and the escape took not more than five minutes. Fifteen shots were fired in the crowded street. Three stray bullets flew through windows of a manufacturing firm across the street. One shot grazed the arm of a mechanic as he stood at his lathe.

Killed Defending Money.

The guard who was killed defending the bag of money was Alexander E. Orliker, 36 years old, father of two young children. The slain robber was Herman Lipschitz, alias "Lefty Rooks," alias "Lefty Louis," catalogued at Police Headquarters as a general all-round thief and desperate "stick-up" man. The police caught the license number of the car in which the escaping three confederates of Lipschitz got away. Last night they were close behind a man named "Russell," who registered with Lipschitz at a hotel on Oct. 2 as visitors from Boston.

Orliker and David I. Vogel, 58 years old, of 1,643 Lexington Avenue, twenty-five years a guard for Rothenberg's, received from the cashier of the store part of the day's receipts, about 2 o'clock. The receipts were in cash and were stowed away in a new light tan valise with two handles. For years both the men had received the money at that hour and, riding in one of the firm's delivery wagons, had taken it for deposit to the National City Bank branch, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street.

Up to two years ago Vogel, a stocky little man, had scorned carrying a revolver on these trips. His employers, however, finally prevailed upon him to go armed as did Orliker, and so when he left the cashier's cage for yesterday's trip he slipped a .38 calibre automatic pistol into his coat pocket.

Outside at the curb, scarcely six feet from the rear door with its storm-door inclosure, waited the automobile delivery truck with its chauffeur, Frank Schemitch of 127 Edgecombe Avenue, Manhattan. It was Vogel's custom to use a chair as a stepladder to lift the bag well into the body of the delivery truck. Schemitch was waiting at the curb with a chair.

"As I came out of the door," said Vogel later, "I was in front with the bag, and Orliker was right back of me. I noticed nothing out of the way and went to the rear of the wagon to put the bag inside. I had just put it on the floor of the truck and was giving it a little shove so that it would rest well up toward the front, when I heard a shot. I thought, of course, that it was the sound of a tire blowout. I heard a grunt, however, and turned.

"Orliker, with his gun out, was firing at a man who was walking across the street. This man had a gun in his hand and he was firing back at Orliker. I remember that when we came out of the store I noticed a sedan with a shiny black body across the street from our truck. Three men and a chauffeur were in the other machine and it was facing west or toward Sixth Avenue. Its engine was running.

"Instinctively I leaned toward Orliker, who was almost at my elbow. The man in the street fired and a bullet went so close to my face that I could feel it. I think that bullet killed Orliker, although he was bleeding from the face before that. Orliker fired at the same time, and I fired twice at the man in the street. I don't know if my bullets or the last shot fired by Orliker hit, but the man doubled up and fell in the middle of the street.

"In the meantime, and when everything was happening so quickly, one of the other men from the car ran to the front of our truck. He stepped up to the seat, and, leaning over, grabbed the money. He was a short, fat man with a heavy black mustache, and I seemed to be about middle-aged. He got the bag and ran with a pal back to the machine, where the chauffeur of the sedan seemed to have some trouble getting going.

"Finally the machine got going and started toward Sixth Avenue. Usually the street would be cluttered with trucks and automobiles, but as luck would have it the street was almost empty.

"I ran into the street and after the automobile. I fired two shots at the

3 Are Killed, 5 Injured on the Submarine S-37 In San Pedro Explosion Laid to Short Circuit

SAN PEDRO, Cal., Oct. 10.—Three men were killed and six injured in an explosion on the United States submarine S-37 late today.

The explosion occurred in the after compartment of the submarine as she lay off San Pedro breakwater. Naval officers said that a short circuit had probably ignited hydrogen gas.

The dead are:

IGNACIO ABOZA, 25, cook, of Manila.

HUBERT R. POINTER, seaman, second class, Sherman, Texas, gassed.

V. J. BOAR, seaman, second class, gassed.

The explosion occurred soon after 3 o'clock. Lieutenant T. R. Glutting, commanding the S-37, was the first man to enter the hold after the explosion and directed the work of removing the injured. They found that the after compartment, in which Aboza and Gartner were trapped, was a mass of flames and could make no attempt to rescue them. The other men were hoisted to the deck with ropes, but Dean died later.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—In a report to the Navy Department on the accident to Submarine S-37, Vice Admiral Wiley, Commander in Chief of the Pacific battle fleet, said the submarine was tied alongside the mother boat Beaver, and was recharging batteries in the after-battery compartment. The compartment was hermetically closed to quench the flames that followed the explosion and prevent their spread.

Croker Jr. Wins Suit Against Dead Father; Gets $157,605 Judgment; Vindicated, He Says

Ashbel P. Fitch, referee in one of four suits brought against the late Richard Croker, former Tammany chief, by his son, Richard, yesterday awarded to the son a judgment of $157,605.44, with interest from Sept. 20, 1921, for money loaned. Mr. Fitch's report will be filed in the Supreme Court today by Frederick R. Lyman of McComb & Ryan, counsel for the son.

Mr. Fitch was designated referee in the four actions by Supreme Court Justice McAvoy in 1921. The suits had followed a dispute between Mr. Croker and his son regarding the son's management of the Croker estate in this country. Hearings before Mr. Fitch were interrupted by the death of the elder Croker in Ireland in April, 1922.

The action decided by Referee Fitch yesterday was based on loans aggregating $156,236.73 which Richard Croker, Jr. alleged he gave his father between 1906 and the beginning of the trouble between them. The referee decided that the son had faithfully and honestly executed his agency of his father's estate here and had made a proper accounting of moneys and properties entrusted to him as agent. He also awarded to the son the custody of a warehouse at 535 East Seventy-sixth Street until the judgment is paid.

In commenting on the decision last night at his home, 118 East Fortieth Street, Mr. Croker said:

"The entire litigation arose after the second marriage of my father in 1914. Two years after his marriage he took from me the management of his affairs and turned them over to his second wife.

"I am greatly pleased with the result of the trial, since the referee's decision disposes of the charges my father was misled into making against me during the latter years of his life. My only regret is that my father did not live until the conclusion of the trial, for I am certain he would have accepted the decision of the conscientious and experienced referee and would have frankly admitted that the charges made by him against me were entirely unfounded.

"Replying further to a statement in which it is asserted that my father's death was hastened by litigation commenced by his children, I would say that in the winter of 1921, in the midst of pending litigation in this city, my father was induced to leave New York and go to Ireland in order that he might get be enlightened as to the truth of the matters at issue. His Winters for many years had been passed at Palm Beach because of the fact that he could not withstand the severe Winter climate of Ireland. As a result of the change in 1921, he contracted a severe cold, from the effects of which he died.

"The results obtained in the suits brought by this city speak for themselves. That litigation requires no apology or justification."

was. Two men, hanging on the sides of the fugitive automobile were firing at me and up and down the street. I don't see how we escaped. The machine went around the corner of Sixth Avenue and went north."

Schemitch said that after Vogel and Oriliker came out of the store and were putting the money in the truck he saw three men coming across from a sedan. "Each man had a gun in his hand," he said. "One went for Oriliker, one for Vogel, and the third went toward the front of the truck—I guess he went for the money. One of them said: 'Stick up your hands!'

"Somebody fired two shots, and I ran to the entrance of the store. I don't know what happened out there after that, but as I was telling the bosses about the holdup I could hear the shots outside."

Officials of the store called Police Headquarters and the reserves of two precincts were sent to Thirteenth Street. There was no excitement among the hundreds of women shoppers inside the store, and the shots from the street outside were put down to automobile tire trouble by the few who heard them. Inspector John D. Coughlin and Captain Arthur Carey, in charge of the Homicide Bureau, with a score of detectives, hurried to the scene.

Harry Farkash, adjuster for Rothenberg's, told the police that he had passed the scene of the holdup about five minutes before, and that he had noticed two young men standing back of an enclosed freight elevator about ten feet from the door through which Oriliker and Vogel passed. He was taken over to the crumpled body of Lipschitz and identified the dead man as one of the two he had seen. The second man, he said, was undersized and wore a blue suit and a gray fedora.

Traced to a Hotel.

Police photographs were taken of the scene and detectives were equipped with hasty fingerprints of the dead robber, then unidentified. While detectives were on their way down to the Rogues' Gallery Inspector Coughlin and Captain Carey searched the robber's pockets. In one of them they found an unpaid bill from the Hotel San Rafael, 65-67 West Forty-fifth Street, made out to "Frank Kramer."

Detectives who went to the hotel learned that on Oct. 2 "Kramer" and a man named Russell registered there, giving their home as Boston. Yesterday morning they went out, promising to be back in a short time. When the men arrived they had a great deal of luggage, and detectives who searched the room which the men shared jointly, found a large sample case, such as salesmen use. A quantity of clothing, a complete opium smoking layout, and ammunition for a .45 calibre revolver were found in the sample case.

Searching at the scene of the robbery, detectives failed to find any clue to the men who escaped, but did come across ample evidences of the reckless-ness with which shots were fired in the crowded street. Obliquely across from Guthenberg's store is the plant of Kiely & Mueller Co., Inc., 34-38 West Thirteenth Street, makers of steamfitters' supplies. Two window panes on the ground floor had inch-wide bullet holes in them, and in a window on the second floor a larger hole gaped.

It was on the second floor that Andrew Menieff, a machinist, was struck. He was at work when he said he felt a tug at his left sleeve and found that something had torn a hole in it. He hastily stripped his arm and found a slight furrow where a bullet had grazed.

At Police headquarters, detectives reported that the fingerprints of "Kramer" corresponded with those of Lipschitz, 26 years old, whose police record goes back to 1916 when he was 19 years old. The detectives said that Lipschitz's "hangout" was in Second Avenue, between Third Street and Fifth Street, and that he was a former "pal" of "Kid Dropper," who was killed a few weeks ago, and of the notorious "Johnny Spanish."

Record of Dead Robber.

The first criminal entry against Lipschitz was early in 1916 when he was arrested on a charge of picking pockets. He then gave his address as 89 Madison Street, but the last known address for him was the Everard Baths, in West Twenty-eighth Street, near Broadway. He escaped the pocket picking charge, but a short time later went to the penitentiary on conviction of attempted grand larceny.

In June, 1917, he was charged with assault and battery and was sent to the Manhattan State Hospital as insane. He was discharged as cured from that institution on Jan. 14, 1918, and a month later he was on his way to Sing Sing to serve from two to five years for robbery. He was released after serving one year and seven months and almost immediately was picked up at Coney Island on a charge of picking pockets. This charge was reduced to disorderly conduct and he got off with a $10 fine. He defeated an indictment for felonious assault on June 21, 1922.

On Aug. 12 last Lipschitz was arrested in connection with the murder of Louis Frencesse, who was shot to death in Fisher's Restaurant, East Broadway and Market Street. He was held without bail but obtained his liberty on a writ sued out by his attorney.

NO DELAY IN CRIME TRIALS.

Court's Plan to Speed Cases Brings Quick Plea of Guilty.

Judges Rosalsky and Koenig in General Sessions yesterday served notice on holdup men in this city that they will aid District Attorney Banton in the quick trial and disposition of persons indicted for crimes of violence. The prosecutor announced last week that, to prevent a possible recurrence of the crime wave which confronted the authorities in 1921 and 1922, he would push to quick trial all indictments founded in crimes of violence.

The announcement of the court came when James O. Connor was arraigned in the morning before Judge Rosalsky on an indictment charging attempted robbery. Joseph Shalleck, his counsel, asked for an adjournment, explaining that his client had been indicted only two weeks ago for a crime which was alleged to have taken place within the last three weeks.

When District Attorney Banton objected the Judge said:

"We are going to give the District Attorney every assistance we can in bringing this type of case to speedy trial.

Turning to Mr. Shalleck, he added: "I am very glad that we have a District Attorney who can bring such cases to trial in so quick a time. I am certain that the citizenry also must feel a greater degree of safety because of it. I will not adjourn this case, but send it to Judge Koenig's part of this court, where it can be tried at once."

Shalleck then indicated that he was about to withdraw as counsel for Connor, which would mean that the case would have to be delayed until the defendant obtained new counsel, but Judge Rosalsky officially ordered him to continue as Connor's counsel.

The case was called before Judge Koenig shortly after, when the lawyer again endeavored to obtain a postponement. Judge Koenig cut short his plea for time, however, with this statement: "This case will go to trial right away. The sooner the better in such cases."

The trial progressed for two hours, when through his lawyer, Connor pleaded guilty to the indictment. He was remanded to the Tombs for sentence next week.

OFFICIALS SEEK WEBB MEDICINES

MEYER TOOK ONE BOTTLE

Physician Says There Were No Others—Three Witnesses Before Grand Jury.

The Westchester County Grand Jury investigating the circumstances of the death of Mrs. Gertie Gorman Webb on Sept. 25 at the Westchester Biltmore Country Club suspended its work yesterday until Monday and the authorities began an effort to establish the fate of medicine bottles and pill boxes believed to have been in the sickroom at the time of death.

According to the scant information that the officials permitted to percolate through their well-laid efforts to insure secrecy to the investigation, several bottles and some pill boxes were on a stand at the bedside of Mrs. Webb. The authorities, it was said, entering the room after Dr. William J. Meyer, attending physician, had refused to sign a certificate of death, failed to find any trace of the medicine containers.

The officials, it was said, were endeavoring to ascertain whether the medicines, no longer of any use, were thrown away or poured down a drain pipe. The search for the missing articles is in charge of Coroner Edward F. Fitzgerald and members of his staff. They reported yesterday that their quest had been utterly without success.

Dr. Meyer Took One Bottle.

Dr. Meyer insisted last night that there was only one bottle inside the sickroom at the time that Mrs. Webb died. He told the authorities that he took that bottle to his home so that he could steam off the label. He was positive in his statement to the authorities that no other bottles or boxes were there.

Lee Parsons Davis, former District Attorney of Westchester, one of the attorneys engaged in looking after the interests of Charles Webb, husband and heir of the dead woman, was asked about the quest for the missing bottles. He said that Mrs. Webb was examined at Roosevelt Hospital, Manhattan, a short time before her death and that this examination had shown no traces of slow poisoning. He pointed out that after Mrs. Webb's illness had taken a serious turn her husband had been excluded from the sickroom.

The lawyer said that Mr. Webb was willing and anxious to aid the authorities in definitely determining whether his wife was poisoned or died from natural causes, as found by the physicians who made the autopsy.

Friends of Webb joined Mr. Davis in insisting that the husband had not been permitted to see his wife for some time before her death, and that under no circumstances, therefore, was he in a position to know what became of the bottles and boxes which the authorities apparently believe were removed from the room.

The Grand Jury reconvened at 1 o'clock yesterday and continued its investigation until 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Three witnesses testified. They were Mr. and Mrs. William T. Hunter of Devon, Pa., and Dr. Davenport West, a physician attached to the visiting staff of Roosevelt Hospital. Mrs. Hunter was an aunt of Mrs. Webb, and she and her husband and her son, Edmund Webb, 21 years old, were named as beneficiaries in one of the wills executed by the dead woman. Dr. West was the physician in charge of Mrs. Webb at the hospital during a brief stay there before she left for the Westchester Biltmore Club.

It was reported that Dr. West's treatment of Mrs. Webb at the hospital had had a marked effect on her and that within a short time her condition had improved to the point where Dr. West suggested that she could safely go into the country for a period of convalescence. He suggested that she go to some hotel in Westchester County, so that in the event of an unforseen relapse she would be near at hand to receive medical attention from a doctor familiar with the history of her case.

At the club Mrs. Webb met Dr. Meyer, who had been introduced to her by mutual friends, and the White Plains physician detected what he believed to be a relapse in Mrs. Webb's health. Friends of Mrs. Webb charged that Dr. West subsequently was refused admittance to the sickroom.

Meyer Denies Excluding West.

Dr. Meyer, in addition to making his statement in regard to the number of bottles that had been in the sickroom, took occasion to say that he neither knew nor ever saw Dr. West. Dr. Meyer said that he had not known that Dr. West called at the Westchester Biltmore Country Club shortly before the patient expired. He added that no one had ever requested him to permit the Roosevelt Hospital physician to enter the room of Mrs. Webb.

Both of the Hunters were at the bedside when Mrs. Webb breathed her last and, it was understood, they told the jurors yesterday what they had heard and seen in the last hours of the dead woman. The session before the Grand Jury was characterized as "interesting," but the details of the testimony could not be ascertained because of the precautions maintained by District Attorney Arthur Rowland, who is presenting the case.

Mr. Rowland said that he expected to have the last of the witnesses before the Grand Jury by Monday, although recent developments in the inquiry, requiring deeper search, might prevent this. "I am going to examine everyone who knows anything about this case," he said. "The Grand Jury will get all the facts, so that it can act intelligently and in a judicious manner."

During the session of the Grand Jury Mr. Rowland conferred for fifteen minutes with Supreme Court Justice Joseph Morschauser. The District Attorney refused to discuss the nature of the conference and the Justice said that it was not related to the investigation.

"I have nothing to say at present," said Justice Morschauser when reporters pressed questions on the case. "The matter is in the hands of the Grand Jurors, and they have not asked me for any instructions. It seems to me, from what I have read in the newspapers, that the Grand Jury is giving the matter its careful and thorough thought, and all matters that require the attention of a Grand Jury are matters of public importance when the safety and welfare of the community are involved."

Among the witnesses to be called before the Grand Jury on Monday, according to District Attorney Rowland, are Mr. Webb, Harold J. Crookes, an architect and a friend of Webb; Mrs. John McIntyre, wife of Judge McIntyre of General Sessions; Mrs. Irving E. Burdick, wife of an attorney; George V. McNally, a business representative for Mrs. Webb; Frank J. McMahon, a real estate operator, and Mrs. Beatrice Kounts Brown.

While officials were in conference in the prosecutor's office this evening three physicians and four attendants from Bloomingdale Asylum at White Plains entered the Carpenter House, across the street from the District Attorney's office, and seized a man who had registered at the hotel an hour before as A. H. Stone of Troy, N. Y.

The physicians said that the man, who appeared to be about 50 years old and was well dressed, had escaped from the institution several hours before. The White Plains officials were asked to make a search of hotels here, because the man had evidently much interest in the Webb case.

GORMAN ESTATE'S PROPERTY IS SOLD

Washington Heights Tract Belonging to Mrs. Webb's Mother Had Been Held at $850,000.

The remaining real estate holdings of the estate of Gertie A. Gorman, comprising one of the largest private holdings of vacant propery on upper Washington Heights, were sold yesterday through the United States Trust Company of New York, 45 Wall Street, acting as trustees for the estate. The late Mrs. Gorman was the mother of Mrs. Gertie Gorman Webb, whose death on Sept. 25 at the Westchester-Biltmore Country Club is being investigated by the Grand Jury at White Plains.

The property comprises a total of 100 lots, being various blocks and plots extending from Broadway to Amsterdam Avenue and having a 200 foot street frontage and nearly 5,000 running feet. It is the largest remaining tract available for improvement on Washington Heights, and was held at $850,000. According to L. J. Phillips & Co., real estate brokers, who negotiated the sale of the property, improvements contemplated on the property will represent an investment of more than $3,000,000. Negotiations for resale of several of the plots are understood to be pending.

The sale includes specifically the following parcels: The entire block from 189th to 190th Street, between Audubon and Amsterdam Avenues, size 179 by 370 feet, facing the Isabella Heimath Home and Public School 189; the northeast corner of Audubon Avenue and 188th Street, size 100 by 100 feet; northwest corner of 189th Street and Audubon Avenue, size 125 by 100. Plot on the north side of 188th Street, 100 feet west of St. Nicholas Avenue, size 100 by 100; north side of 189th Street, 100 feet west of St. Nicholas Avenue, size 100 by 99.9. Block front comprising the northeast and southeast corners of 188th and 189th Streets and Wadsworth Avenue, size 179 by 100. Both block fronts on the west side of Wadsworth Avenue, from 188th to 189th Street, the former 200 by 100 feet, the latter 179 by 100. Both block fronts on the easterly side of Wadsworth Terrace, from 188th to 189th Street, size 200 by 82 and 179 by 82, respectively, and the block from Broadway to Wadsworth Terrace, 188th to 189th Street, containing about fifteen lots.

These parcels are part of a large tract extending from Broadway to Amsterdam Avenue, from 189th to 190th Street, which was sold as acreage by the late L. J. Phillips, founder of the firm of L. J. Phillips & Co., to Edmund A. Smith, father of Mrs. Gorman, about forty years ago.

This is the second recent sale of realty made by the Gorman estate, through the same brokers, who sold about a year ago the St. Nicholas Avenue frontages on both sides of the avenue from 189th to 190th Street. The property subsequently passed into the hands of builders and has been entirely developed with dwelling houses.

YOUTH FIRST TO SEE SLAIN GIRL'S BODY

HE IS HELD AS WITNESS

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—A youth who saw the body of Emma Dickson, the Millville, N. J., high school girl, long before the authorities learned of her murder was arrested today in the Central Police Court here and held in $500 bail as a material witness. He will have a further hearing Oct. 17.

The prisoner, Ernesto Facenda, 20 years old, said he had seen the body of the 15-year-old girl in a clump of pines near her home at Bricksboro, N. J., on Sept. 17. It was not discovered by the police until Sept. 22.

This admission was drawn from the youth only after Lieutenant Belshaw and Detectives Sheller and Salvini and County Detective Frank Lore of Cumberland County, N. J., had crowded about him in his cell all night, questioning him constantly.

This morning he agreed to describe the sight he encountered while he was making his way to his mother's little truck farm.

Facenda first told the detectives he had witnessed the crime, but immediately contradicted this statement.

"I was walking along the road," said Facenda, "when I saw something glitter, and then saw it was the sun reflected on a girl's gold bracelet. I went to pick it up and saw that it had on it the initials 'E. D.' Then I looked down and there at my feet was a murdered girl. I dropped the bracelet and ran to my mother's house and hid."

Facenda, when he returned to work the next day, told his foreman what he had seen, but the foreman, after making inquiries if any murder had been committed near Millville, laughingly told the youth he had been dreaming. Later, Facenda disappeared from the shipyard where he worked, and when the body was discovered in the pine clump the foreman reported the matter to the local detectives.

SMITH OPENS FIGHT TO WIN ASSEMBLY

Special to The New York Times.

TROY, N. Y., Oct. 10.—The campaign to make the 1924 Assembly Democratic was opened tonight by Governor Smith, who attacked George K. Morris, chairman of the Republican State Committee, referring to him as the "P. T. Barnum of politics," and asserting that Mr. Morris is the Baron Munchausen of the Republican Party."

The Governor answered many of the charges made in the pamphlet put out by the Republican State Committee on Monday, which pictured him as "cold blooded, willful and guilty of deliberate misrepresentation."

Governor Smith spoke in a crowded hall. Other speakers were John J. Mackrell, candidate for Mayor of Troy; Edward J. Fitzgerald, Chairman of the Democratic City Committee; Ogden J. Ross, City Treasurer of Troy, and James V. Coffey, Chairman of the Democratic County Campaign Committee.

"The Republican Party will look the way a piece of rhubarb pie tastes to me when I get through with it," exclaimed Governor Smith.

"Your opponents," he continued, "don't seem to even appear sincere. They don't seem to have any more idea of progress than to pour out every year an annual volley of bunk, for which no one man in the party will shoulder the responsibility."

This was in reference to the Republican Committee's pamphlet.

"I claim," said the Governor, "that when the Democratic Party won last Fall the people put their unqualified stamp of approval on the principles in the Democratic platform."

"Just as they stalled the Administration in Washington; just as they held up everything here in 1919 and 1920, so they started right out on Jan. 1 to play the same old game. They think a Democratic Governor is an accident, and that all they've got to do is not to do anything, and prevent the Governor from doing anything, and they'll be back in again. The fact of the matter in the Republican Party is this—there is no such thing as a Republican leader in the State of New York."

FUR SHOP IS LOOTED OF ALL BUT FLOWERS

Horseshoes Labeled 'Success' the Only Things They Didn't Take.

When Schechner & Rosenberg opened their Lexington Fur Shop at 110 East Broadway yesterday friends sent them two floral horseshoes, each bearing the word "Success." Last night three thieves, with the aid of a touring car, stripped the store of more than $25,000 worth of furs, leaving only the floral horseshoes and one fur coat on a model in the show window.

The robbery was discovered by Mrs. Annie Schechner, wife of one of the proprietors. She saw one of the robbers taking the fur coat from the model between the floral pieces, and her cries caused the thief to drop the coat back upon the model and flee through a rear window with his confederates to Division Street and escape with the loot in their touring car.

The robbers had entered the yard of 107 Division Street, cut a wooden bar which had been installed in the rear window of the furriers' establishment for a burglar alarm and then carted the entire contents of the store back through the window to the automobile. Mrs. Schechner happened to be standing on the sidewalk across the street an hour after her husband closed the store and thus discovered the robbers at work.

By CYRIL BROWN.

Salvation Army, and a waiting line of hungry Berliners, 150 yards long, three abreast, in perfect order, all holding Salvation Army tickets certifying they needed free food publicly, but many apparently of the better middle-classes obviously still ashamed. Public feeding by the Salvation Army is being done on half a dozen of the principal squares of Greater Berlin. More open air soup kitchens are coming. The development is unmistakably toward mass feeding and food rationing.

Prices in Great Confusion.

BERLIN, Oct. 10 (Associated Press.)—The people of Berlin awoke this morning to find the dollar at 2,000,000,000 marks, and tonight went to bed with the knowledge that the mark fell to 6,500,000,000 in unofficial quotations late in the day, with little hope that the morrow will bring improvement.

Prices were as wild as the mark quotations, and shoppers who had to have food and other necessary supplies rushed madly from market to market in an effort to get some. There was a great variation in the price scales in various parts of the city, and utter confusion.

Although dealers generally quote prices on larger articles in gold pfennigs, they vary greatly in their quotations and use such a sliding scale in converting the gold price into paper price that the public is frantic. From hour to hour today the prices varied with rumors of the mark's further fall, and housewives were dazed by the staggering sums asked for foodstuffs.

Railway rates increased 50 per cent. today and will again go up 60 per cent. Saturday, which will not be an increase comparable to the decline of the paper mark in relation to the pound and the dollar. Beef for boiling, of the cheapest quality, was quoted this morning at 150,000,000 marks for a pound of twelve ounces, but none was available in the market at any such price. The people, especially the older persons, are wholly incapable of comprehending prices in billions. They stand in the shops speechless and can scarcely find words to discuss with each other conditions which shake the financial structure of the family.

A 24-ounce loaf of bread sold today for 80,000,000 marks, but the price tomorrow will be 110,000,000. Butter was 600,000,000 marks today for a 12-ounce pounds, but scarce. Potatoes brought 7,500,000 marks a pound and grapes 100,000,000 marks a pound.

7 Marks Worth 1 Ruble.

In yesterday's Wall Street market for German exchange one dollar would buy 5¾ billion marks. The rapidity of the recent depreciation in German currency is shown by the fact that on Tuesday the dollar would purchase only 2 billion marks, on Saturday 1 billion, a week ago 526 million, and a month ago only 47 million.

At yesterday's low price, the German paper mark was worth less than one-seventh of the Russian Soviet ruble, which was quoted by cable on Monday at 880 millions to the dollar. The Polish paper mark, which is now, next to the German mark, the most heavily depreciated currency in Central Europe, has been selling on the exchange market this week for about 60,000 times the price of the German mark. By its last report, Poland had outstanding 6,871 billion marks in paper money against Germany's 8,600 trillions.

LEGISLATURE DEAF TO WALTON'S OFFER

WILL NOT HEAR MESSAGE

Leader of the Opposition Says Executive Will Not Be Permitted to Address Assembly.

Special to The New York Times.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 10.—Governor Walton's proposition to resign his office; provided that the Legislature will pass a bill he has drafted for the control and unmasking of the Ku Klux Klan was received today with contemptuous treatment by his opponents in the Legislature. The big anti-Walton majority will not reply to the Governor's suggestion. As the program of the opposition stands tonight he will not be permitted even to read a message to the Legislature when that body convenes in extraordinary session tomorrow.

For the first time in more than two weeks the Governor appeared at his office in the State Capitol today, and for several hours was in conference with Murray Gibbons, his chief supporter in the House of Representatives; Aldrich Blake, his personal adviser, and others who are standing by him to the end. The Governor arrived at the Capitol flanked by armed guards. He entered in swashbuckler fashion, paying no attention to the crowd, in which were many of his friends.

N. W. Jewett, Grand Dragon of the Klan in Oklahoma, was dismissed with two codefendants when he appeared today before Leo B. White, Justice of the Peace, for a preliminary hearing on charges of rioting. Mr. Jewett also issued a signed statement in which he announced his support of the proposal to unmask the organization of which he is the State chief.

Report Governor May Quit Fight.

Of many rumors that abound here tonight the most persistent is that Governor Walton will resign his office within the next few days. One report is that he may resign tomorrow, immediately following the refusal of the Legislature to receive his message. Friends of the Governor are indignant over these stories. They maintain that he will fight to the very end.

The Governor's proposal to resign has not evoked any widespread sympathy. Many of his friends frankly admit that, in their opinion, he made a mistake, and that in offering to quit under fire he made a bad position worse. If he is innocent of the charges made against him, and if he can prove that Oklahoma, is in fact at the mercy of an "invisible government," he should, these friends say, battle to the end regardless of the outcome.

On the other hand, the enemies of the Governor declare that his latest action is an admission that he cannot prove his case before the bar of the Senate. W. D. McBee, leader of the Walton opposition, said:

"The fact is, Walton has made his own bed and he will have to lie in it. He will not be permitted to name any terms. He will have to resign unconditionally if he wants to avoid impeachment. In that event it would be up to the Grand Jury, although the investigation by the Legislature would continue as scheduled. His proposed bill is a final effort to fool the State and country. But it won't succeed. And when we have cleaned house, which we are going to do in quick order, we will take the Klan matter and pass laws to control it and unmask it which will meet the approval of good citizens everywhere."

"Is it true," Mr. McBee was asked, "that the Legislature will refuse to let the Governor read his message tomorrow?"

"It certainly is," he replied, "and if Walton entertains any such hope he had better reform his lines. He will appear before the Legislature when we send for him to answer the charges on which he will be tried there is, provided he does not tender his unconditional resignation before that stage of the proceedings is reached."

Republicans Drift Away.

All the signs are that the Governor's hopes of receiving sufficient Republican support to prevent his removal from office have failed to materialize. Several of the Republican Senators who, it was said, might swing to Walton, have indignantly refused to entertain any such suggestion.

The majority in the House plans to prevent Murray Gibbons, Speaker at the last session and a strong supporter of the Governor, from calling the House to order tomorrow morning. Mr. McBee, it is said, will be in the chair when the hour to convene arrives. A member of the House has been designated to "guard the gavel," with instructions to hand it to Mr. McBee at the right moment.

CORRIGAN ADMITS NO PROOF OF GRAFT

has not put in any defense. He has argued that the telegram was the privileged act of a member of the Legislature. Judge Crain ordered that Mr. Cuvillier be instructed to appear this morning.

Before Magistrate Corrigan took the stand the examination of Commissioner Enright, begun on Tuesday, was completed. The Commissioner was questioned further by Mr. Lindsey concerning his official acts with regard to the Petrucci case and other cases of alleged police misdeeds related to Mullan-Gage enforcement. Mr. Pecora's cross-examination involved less than a dozen questions.

As on Tuesday, the demeanor of the Police Commissioner was cool and he continued unruffled under the examination to which he was subjected. He characterized as "grand-stand plays" dismissals of policemen on charges when it seemed certain that the courts would reinstate them, and declared that no such practices were indulged in under his administration.

The Commissioner had hardly left the courtroom when Irving Gordon, brother of Harry A. Gordon, appeared with a bundle of documents, which he threw upon the counsel table. It developed that the documents were statements from 425 banks, taking in all those in the city, certifying that Commissioner Enright had no accounts with them. The statements of the five Registers in the city that he owned no real estate accompanied them. The certifications were obtained at the suggestion of Judge Crain.

"There are 9,000 banks and trust companies in the United States," said Mr. Lindsay. "There are hundreds of banks in the counties adjoining New York State. I maintain that this evidence is incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant."

It was finally received in evidence after Mr. Lindsay had agreed to stipulate that if the signers of the certificates had appeared as witnesses they would have testified in substance as their certificates indicated.

The declaration of Magistrate Corrigan that he believed Commissioner Enright was a grafter came suddenly while Mr. Pecora was cross-questioning him on his previous assertion that as a City Magistrate he had observed conditions in the Police Department which he thought should be "cleaned up."

"I was referring to a situation as which I believed that the police were not only not acting honestly in the enforcement of the Mullan-Gage law," said Magistrate Corrigan, "but I felt that perjury was being committed in cases being heard before me—I felt that justice was a mockery."

Mr. Pecora asked him whether he had any proof of police misdeeds.

"No, I think not," was the reply, "if you mean legal proof. If I had had legal proof I would have taken some action."

Mr. Pecora, in view of Magistrate Corrigan's admission that much of the material presented in the defense of the libel action was not in his possession at the time the telegram was published, asked that all of such testimony be struck out. Judge Crain said that he would allow it to stand.

Believes Enright a Grafter.

Then came this testimony:

Q.—Did you think on April 23d when you gave publication to that telegram that Enright was a grafter? A.—Yes.

Q.—What proof did you have? A.—I don't say I had any proof—I said I thought so. You didn't ask me if I had any proof; I thought so because of what I had seen, observed and heard.

Q.—What prompted your belief that Enright was a grafter? A.—It is impossible to give you all the specific reasons.

Q.—Give me as many as you can. A.—What I consider to be the manner in which he had administered the Police Department. I do not think that things could have gone on and reached the pass they did unless the Police Commissioner was either inefficient or corrupt.

Q.—Is the name of anybody who ever gave you any information in regard to this. A.—I can't give the name of anybody.

Q.—Then why do you believe that Enright was corrupt? A.—I know that Enright is the head of the Police Department. I believe the Police Department is inefficient and corrupt so far as the Mullan-Gage act is concerned to say the least. And I believe that could not be the case unless the head was either inefficient or corrupt.

Q.—Do you think he is corrupt? A.—Yes. I don't think he is inefficient.

Q.—You think he is efficient? A.—I think he is a good copper if he wants to be.

Q.—Do you think that you have submitted proof showing graft in this proceedings? A.—I think I have submitted some pretty good proof.

Q.—What proof? A.—I think that when you get to room 305 Police Headquarters you are getting pretty close to home.

Q.—Do you think that Commissioner Enright took graft? A.—I think that is a fair inference.

Q.—Didn't you in your answer in the civil libel action disavow under oath any desire or intention to impute corruption to Commissioner Enright? A.—I believe so.

Q.—Why did you make such a disavowal in the light of what you have just said? A.—That is anything to do with my private opinion. My private opinion is not in my answer. You asked me for my opinion, which I gave to you. It is the first time I have given it to any one.

Q.—Did you try in effect to give expression to your private opinion when you gave out that telegram? A.—Positive, certainly not. I have been very sedulous to keep personalities out of the matter.

Thought Telegram Unfair.

Q.—Do you think that the publication of this telegram was unjust and unfair to Commissioner Enright? A.—I think it is unjust and unfair to call people names or inflict my private opinion on the public. It never gets anywhere. As soon as I realized the situation I endeavored to correct it.

Q.—Did you ever, at any time, since the proceedings started, make any public statement that you thought the publication of the telegram was unjust and unfair? A.—I never had an opportunity.

Q.—This afternoon is the first that you have publicly acknowledged it? A.—I think I did in the answer in the civil libel suit.

Q.—But that did not receive wide publicity? A.—I thought it was published in the newspapers. I'm not certain about it. I was away on my vacation at the time.

Under direct examination by Mr. Lindsay Magistrate Corrigan testified that he was born in Newark, that he had been a member of the bar for twenty-two years and a City Magistrate for sixteen years. He said that he was slightly acquainted with Commissioner Enright and their relations had been pleasant. He said that as a Magistrate he had heard about 10,000 cases a year. He said that he was not in favor of prohibition and that he was particularly opposed to the passage of the Mullan-Gage law.

"When the Mullan-Gage law was under consideration I thought it would open a wide field of graft, and my experience since its passage has confirmed that opinion. My opinion was that fully 50 per cent. of the cases were decided in the corridors and not in the police courts. You know an officer can either make a case or not by his testimony."

Magistrate Corrigan testified that in saying as he did in Essex Market Court that "half of the police in New York were bootleggers" he "expressed himself rather forcefully," but explained that he was "very much annoyed" at the character of testimony before him. It was this statement that led to an investigation by Commissioner Hirshfield, which Magistrate Corrigan characterized as a "whitewashing" investigation.

Says Hirshfield Abused Him.

"Commissioner Hirshfield spent most of his time abusing me," he said. "I had a pretty tough deal down there."

On Mr. Pecora's objection the last declaration was struck out. This testimony followed:

Q.—In view of the results of the Hirshfield investigation, what did you do? A.—I wrote a letter to the papers in which I recommended, first, repeal of the Mullan-Gage law, and, second, an investigation of the Police Department.

Q.—Was this letter printed? A.—Yes, on April 21.

Q.—It was about then that you received the telegram from Assemblyman Cuvillier? A.—It was the following morning.

Q.—Tell his Honor the circumstances attending the receipt. A.—I was going out to play golf. I read it, paid little attention to it, and played golf.

Magistrate Corrigan was questioned in detail as to the circumstances of his giving the telegram to the newspapers.

Q.—What was your motive in giving out the telegram? A.—My motive in the whole matter was to clean up the situation in the Police Department and, if possible, have the Mullan-Gage law repealed.

Q.—Had you any malice against the Commissioner? A.—No.

Q.—Was the question of the Commissioner's personal participation in this situation uppermost in your mind? A.—Not at all. If you read my utterances at that time you will find that I made no personal charges against any one.

Harry A. Gordon, Commissioner Enright's personal counsel, cross-examined Magistrate Corrigan briefly, taking up, item by item, phrases from the telegram on which the libel charge is based. The examination follows:

Q.—Did anybody ever convey to you information that Enright is a graft collector? A.—I don't remember that any one ever did.

Q.—Can you give me the name of a single high official at Police Headquarters who has been blackjacking people to make them pay money in connection with the Mullin-Gage law? A.—No.

Q.—Can you give me the names of a single policeman who fought with any other policeman over the spoils from bootlegging? A.—No.

Enright's Personal Resources.

When Commissioner Enright was recalled to the stand yesterday morning Mr. Lindsay continued his questioning as to the reasons for the Commissioner's action in imposing light fines on policemen found guilty of offenses relating to Mullan-Gage enforcement. Then the examination turned to the Commissioner's personal resources.

Q.—You told his Honor that during the period of the Mullan-Gage act the only account you had was in the Mechanics Bank of Brooklyn. A.—That is all.

Q.—You testified before the Meyer committee in the Fall of 1921, six months after the Mullan-Gage law went into effect, that you had accounts in the Mechanics Bank of Brooklyn, the Harriman National Bank and the Chatham and Phenix National Bank and that the aggregate deposits in these banks were $100,000? A.—I think not. I never said that. My only bank account during the period of the Mullan-Gage act was in the Mechanics Bank.

Q.—You also had a safe deposit box? A.—Yes.

Q.—You knew that contents of safe deposit boxes are not subject to inspection? A.—I'd like to have you go and examine it. I have not seen it in two years.

No Stocks Given to Him.

Questioned about his stock holdings, Commissioner Enright said that none of them were given to him. "I bought them," he said. "I am sorry that they were not given to me because they are no good."

Q.—You have at times speculated in stocks? A.—What?

Q.—I mean your transactions with Mr. Ryan? A.—That was before the Mullan-Gage law.

Q.—So that there was no increase but a diminution in your bank accounts since the Mullan-Gage law went into effect? A.—Yes.

Q.—Up to July 12 had you observed any discussion on the part of the police to unduly aid the defendant Corrigan?

Mr. Pecora objected and the objection was sustained.

Mr. Lindsay tried to make a point about the opposition of the Corporation Counsel to the attempts to subpoena Police Department records. Judge Crain held that the city had a legal right to test the validity of the subpoena.

"When a step is taken with the purpose of impeding an investigation it should be inquired into," said Judge Crain. "In this case, however, the Commissioner, as an official, felt that it was his duty to resist the subpoena. I am confident that had I been in his place I would have resisted it."

Judge Crain declined to admit as evidence a general order of the Police Department dated July 12. It contained letters exchanged between the Commissioner and Mayor Hylan in which reference was made to the Crain inquiry.

"Your Honor knows," said Mr. Lindsay, "that police witnesses have shown an unwillingness to testify on their appearance here. This is an act on the part of the complainant to guide the whole force—those who had been witnesses and those who may have been witnesses."

Mr. Lindsay turned to the retirement of Captain Patrick Randles after he had testified at the Crain inquiry. Commissioner Enright admitted that an investigation of Captain Randles had been ordered.

"The point was," he said, "that the Chief Inspector was under suspension and out of the department. The Chief Inspector says that Captain Randles did not put him in possession of all the facts. I ordered the Second Deputy Commissioner to make an investigation to find out the truth."

LEACH DEFENDS ENRIGHT.

First Deputy Police Commissioner Takes Responsibility.

John A. Leach, First Deputy Police Commissioner, took the place of Commissioner Enright as the speaker before the Flatbush 12:45 Club at Oetjens's Restaurant, Church and Flatbush Avenues, Brooklyn, yesterday. He explained he had been suddenly called upon by Enright to appear because the Commissioner was still engaged at the police inquiry before Judge Crain in Manhattan.

"The Commissioner is being cross-questioned and pilloried for acts for which I am responsible," said Leach. "Commissioner Enright knows nothing about these cases; I do. So, while I am representing him here, he is representing me."

Commissioner Leach declared that "some people" seem to think that policemen should be dropped from the force "on their say-so." He explained that it takes five years to make a man into a fully efficient policeman. "You have got to give them that length of time to know if they are making good or not," he said. Under the Enright regime, he declared, great care is taken in dismissing policemen. Evidence of this was contained in the fact that while 150 policemen have been dismissed, not one has been reinstated upon appeal to the courts.

"The oft-buried allegation that high officials of the police are protecting vice and serious crime has been thoroughly investigated by me and I can find no evidence of any kind that any high official is interested in this regard," Leach said.

FIGURES BIG FRAUD ON GERMAN PEOPLE

NOW IN HANDS OF THE FEW

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUESSELDORF, Oct. 9.—Representative A. Piatt Andrew of Massachusetts gave the representative of THE NEW YORK TIMES today some of his impressions of German finance. Mr. Andrew, before his election to the House was an assistant professor of economics at Harvard and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

"No one can visit Germany today," said Mr. Andrew, "without great sympathy for the rank and file of the German people, unwitting victims of one of the most colossal frauds the world has seen since the time of John Law. The period of feverish buying and spending through which Germany has been passing during the last year is, in many respects, not unlike that which occurred in Europe in 1720, and now, as then, the net result is a complete and chaotic redistribution of the country's wealth. Those who were shrewd and foresighted and who enjoyed Governmental favor have absorbed the greater part of the wealth of the country. Some have grown immensely rich. The majority of the German people, however, have grown rapidly poorer.

4,000,000,000 Marks for $7.

"I have paper money in denominations of fifty and a hundred million marks, amounting in all to over 4,000,000,000 of marks, which I purchased yesterday at the Dresdner Bank in Essen in exchange for seven American dollar bills. A few years ago these notes were worth a billion dollars. Next month they will probably be of no value at all. One curious thing about this paper money, which was paid me by one of the leading banks of the Ruhr, is that, although authorized by the German Government, it has been issued by factories, foundries and mines of that district, such as Krupp's, Thyssen's and the like, and issued without security of any kind and without any limitation of amount.

"I visited the Krupp plant at Essen day before yesterday, and was shown over a considerable part of it by one of the officials. I had expressed great wonder and admiration at the incredible variety of things manufactured in this single establishment, when the amiable Krupp official accompanying me added, with evident pride:

"'This is not all Krupp's has produced. We even have our own printing presses and print money to pay the wages of the employes.'

How Germany Has Stored Up Capital.

"That chance remark is the key to the situation in the Ruhr. What Krupp has been doing Thyssen has been doing, and all the other great industrial mining magnates in the Ruhr. It is indicated by the paper money issued by scores of Ruhr firms which I obtained at the Dresdner Bank. It is evidenced also by the scores of mines and coke ries and foundries which I saw in traveling through the Ruhr, which are producing nothing today, but in whose plants one sees vast new chimneys and factory walls rising in process of construction.

"In order to prevent Belgium and France from getting reparations the German industrialists in the Ruhr ceased to turn out merchandise, but have turned their employes into new construction work, into work adding to their capital. And to pay their employes during the long period when income has not been forthcoming they have, with the authority of the Government in Berlin, printed and issued fabulous quantities of unsound and unredeemable paper currency.

"This policy seems to have been followed, not only in the Ruhr, but throughout the length and breadth of Germany. The National Government has built, extended or improved canals, railroads and public works. The municipalities and other local governments have built schools and other public buildings. Great corporations have built new factories and large foundries, improved docks, constructed ships, erected immense apartment houses, stores, office buildings and long rows of dwellings. On almost every street in German cities, and especially in industrial towns, one sees building operations going on.

Unemployment Staved Off by Paper.

"There has been no unemployment, no shutting down. The whole German people has been feverishly active adding to the country's capital, but not creating immediate income or produce that could be taxed, and the workers have been paid in currency that likewise could not be taxed for reparations, since it has little or no value beyond the German frontier. They have been paid in currency printed and issued without limit by their employers, irrespective of whether the employers were national and municipal governments or owners of factories, foundries or mines.

"I shall not speak of the wisdom of this policy as a means of preventing or reducing reparations payments to the countries whose territory was devastated during the war. I speak only of its effect upon the German people. No one can measure the suffering and injustice this policy has wrought upon helpless and innocent groups of German citizens. The very Germans who were most loyal to their country during the war have suffered the utmost, for with the degradation of the currency every bond in Germany has been made worthless, including the bonds issued by the Government for the prosecution of the war. Now purchasers of German war bonds can ever hope to get anything in return except worthless papers.

"Safe" Investments Wiped Out.

"Ordinarily, Government and municipal bonds are considered the safest form of investment and are purchased by trustees of hospitals, schools and charitable institutions, by widows and people who on account of age, ill health or other circumstances have retired from active affairs. The value of all such investments in Germany is today wiped out, and the institutions and people who held them are left penniless. By the same token the vast aggregate of deposits in savings banks of working people and others in humble circumstances have also been shorn of all their value.

"As wages have not been raised in proportion to the falling value of the currency, the working people generally find themselves not only confronted by the annihilation of all that they have ever saved, but also by a fabulously mounting price level to which their wages are very slowly and inadequately adjusted. Car fare of a newspaper today costs 10,000,000 marks, and everything else in proportion. In a fortnight they will probably cost twice as much, but wages are readjusted only once a fortnight or perhaps a month, and then but partially.

"What is true of the wage earner is even more true of salaried men and women—clerks in offices, banks and stores, teachers in schools and universities, clergymen and Government officials. Their pay, being for longer periods, is still more tardily readjusted, and their wage is still further behind in the dizzy upward flight. The collapse of the value of money has brought them not merely hardship, but humiliating poverty and often abject misery.

Wealth in the Hands of the Few.

"On the other hand, what the many have lost the few have gained. By no means as some have been made poor, others have been made rich. For the real wealth of Germany remains today all that it was before. In fact, it has been steadily increasing through additions to the country's capital in new buildings and construction, which have gone hand in hand with the country's diminished consumption. The old factories, foundries and mines, ships and docks, office buildings and stores, mill and farms are still there, and somewhat larger than before. Only their ownership has changed. Their owners are no longer encumbered with mortgages, bonds or promissory notes, for with the depreciation of the currency all debts have been wiped out. The land-owning classes, whether those who owned great country estates or those who owned land and buildings in mining companies, need think no more about paying capital or interest on their bonds. Whatever income formerly went to the bond or mortgage holders will hereafter be retained by the stockholders.

Business men and manufacturers who have carried on or extended their business with borrowed money now own the properties they have controlled with virtually nothing to pay for other people's money that they borrowed. Stockholders in all sorts of enterprises have not only gained in this way, but they have also reaped another profit, because the prices of goods which they sell have risen far more rapidly than the wages and salaries they pay.

Banks Among Biggest Profiteers.

"The larger banks also have been great profiteers. Not only have they had peculiar facilities for purchasing foreign money and securities and thus taking advantage of the falling exchange, but they have charged fabulous rates for loans and given relatively low interest on deposits. In Essen yesterday the leading banks were lending at the rate of 5 per cent. per day, or 150 per cent. per month; and, although this meant that they were charging for money at the rate of 1,800 per cent. per year they were paying only a rate of 18 per cent. per year for deposits, or one-hundredth of what they charged.

"The owners of large department stores also profited from the situation. The largest dry goods stores, haberdashers, booksellers, jewelers, hat shops —even hotels—sell what they sell at prices adjusted to the daily fluctuating exchange. Goods are marked with basic prices, and when sold their prices are multiplied by a co-efficient, which varies each day according 'the value of the mark.' Thus, in a restaurant, on the menus and wine cards the same prices may appear from day to day, but at the top of the card appears the co-efficient of the day—commonly called the 'multiplication,' or 'Schulszahling.' In a restaurant where I lunched yesterday the prices of the menus would have seemed moderate, even according to old-time standards, till one observed at the bottom of the card that the 'multiplication' of the day was 91,000,000. The bill for a very fair meal for two persons amounted to one and a half billions, to which I added four hundred millions as a tip, making a total cost of about $3."

MINERS MAY ACCEPT TERMS.

Owners Seek Only to Make 8-Hour Shift One of Actual Work.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUESSELDORF, Oct. 10.—The failure of the attempt to abolish the eight-hour day was due to strong resistance on the part of the miners expressed in joint proclamation signed by the leaders of the four trades unions, posted throughout the Ruhr yesterday and published in the newspapers this morning.

The men's leaders unanimously condemned the scheme irrespective of political tendencies, the manifesto being signed by the great Socialist Union, the Christian Socialist Union, an association called the Hirsch Junker and the Polish Miners' Union. These four unions were also backed by three employes' associations.

What the miners objected to even more perhaps than the actual attempt to increase the length of the working shift is the fact that so grave a decision was taken without first consulting them. This was contrary to all precedent.

In announcing suspension of their plan the owners said the question would be further discussed next Wednesday at the weekly meeting of the men's delegates and the owners at the Labor Ministry in Berlin.

It is thought likely that the change will then be accepted, it being realized by the men themselves that output must be increased. Before the war the average daily mine output was 930 kilos. In 1922 it was 500 kilos. These figures illustrate the difficulty of the position today. It must also be remembered that what the owners really want to do is to apply the eight-hour shift strictly. At present the time is counted from the moment the miner enters the cage and descends the shaft until he again steps from the cage. The owners wish to count only the time employed in actual work.

RUHR PLANTS REOPENING.

Essen's Hostile Chambers of Commerce Now to Work With French.

ESSEN, Oct. 10 (Associated Press).—Progressive resumption of work as an outcome of the cancellation of the orders for passive resistance is reported in various industries throughout the Ruhr and the Rhineland, but it is obvious, say observers of the situation, that it will be many months before most of the plants and mines are operating at full capacity.

Many factories have been closed for months, while others have been operating one, two or three days weekly. The direct negotiations between General Degoutte, the French Commander, and Hugo Stinnes and other German industrialists, designed to assist in clearing the situation, however, have acted as a stimulant, and today there is a general trend among the industrialists and trade unionists to get back as quickly as possible to the conditions prevailing prior to occupation.

Among the plants which are to put all hands to work is the great Krupp concern, many branches and departments of which have been idle for months. It is announced that the Krupps will start up all their shops immediately, giving employment for six hours daily, instead of eight hours as previously, to 53,000 workers. The shops will be closed Saturdays and Sundays. Plans are being made for full time resumption as soon as transportation and other questions are cleared up.

The Essen Chamber of Commerce, which has been one of the strongest opponents of the French since the period of occupation began, is reported now to be ready to open negotiations with the occupation authorities and to assist in doing its share toward clarifying the situation. The officials of the Chamber, it is said, soon will follow the leadership of Hugo Stinnes and go to Duesseldorf for a conference with General Degoutte.

OPPOSES GERMAN DYE LOAN

Herty Doubts French Will Release Plants Now Held.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 10.—Dr. Charles Herty, President of the Synthetic Organic Chemical Manufacturers' Association of the United States, said tonight that he hoped that Director Bosch of the Badisch Analin und Sodafabrik would not be successful in his mission to America to raise money for the German dye trust. He added:

"American bankers are always looking for business but I cannot conceive of any being willing to take such a risk as lending money to a German dye corporation, in view of all that these plants mean to the French and Belgians in making war and in view of the uncertainty, pending conference with the reparation commission, concerning the renewal of delivery of reparation dyes.

"I find from conferences here that the French have their eyes wide open to the threat inherent in these plants against their future security. The French and Belgians have the whole situation thoroughly in hand and judging from Poincaré's past record and statement this morning to the German Emissary, they don't propose to let the situation ever again get out of their hands.

"As to American manufacturers failing a prey to the machinations of Dr. Bosch, I know our manufacturers well enough to predict that they are not yet ready to buy gold bricks.

"If Germany should begin a ruthless commercial warfare to recover the American markets, she would have to make financial sacrifices. On the surface she appears not to have the necessary funds. Therefore there would be no commercial war unless outsiders help the Germans."

Former Premier Gets Another Big Welcome—Carries Out Program, Though Hoarse.

Special to The New York Times.

TORONTO, Ontario, Oct. 10.—In an address this afternoon that was heard by 4,000 people, crowded into Massey Hall, the largest auditorium in the city, and by 75,000 others who "listened in" at places where it was being broadcast by radio, David Lloyd George, Great Britain's war Premier, sounded the warning that the world had not seen its last war.

His large audience a minute later responded with cheers and prolonged applause when he declared that the British Empire had entered the World War in order to remove a war peril that had hung over the world for a generation. The British land forces, and, most of all, the British Navy, he said, made it possible for the Allies to carry to a successful conclusion their huge task of defeating Germany, and it was about time that some recognition and acknowledgment of that service came from nations which but for that would be vassal States today.

"The British Empire's effort was colossal; its contribution was gigantic and beyond the dreams of the most sanguine advocate of the empire," he added. "And I want to say that what the British Empire did once it can do again and will do again for human liberty. The nations should know that."

There were cheers and cries of "Hear, hear," as with all the emphasis which he could muster Mr. Lloyd George made this confident prediction. Sir Robert Borden, who was the War Premier of the Dominion, and Newton W. Rowell, who occupied the same position in the Government of the Province of Ontario, took part in the demonstration, one of the most stirring of the many that have marked the meetings addressed by Mr. Lloyd George since his arrival in Canada.

A British League of Nations.

Another utterance that evoked applause was his reference to the British Empire as a league of nations that was making good, and setting an example which the League of Nations itself must follow in order to become a success. The League of Nations, he added, was the only agency for peace in the world today, such as it is.

"You," he said, referring to Canada, "are now a nation in a league of nations, the only effective league of nations today—the British Empire. The other League of Nations will succeed only when it accomplishes what the British Empire has already achieved."

Twice during the day the British statesman warned his audiences that the peril of war was hanging over the world again. Both warnings were given in Massey Hall, one at the mass meeting and the other at an address he delivered there in the forenoon before the World Brotherhood Conference at its final session. On that occasion, too, Sir Robert Borden and Mr. Rowell were also present. The brotherhood is a peace organization.

"You answered the call, but you have not answered the last call," he said, addressing the brotherhood. "I am an old watcher on the tower and I can see great storm clouds rising ahead. It is a mistake to think that the archangel's trumpet lies in rust until the last day of doom. We heard it in 1914, and we may hear it again."

Tells of Toronto's War Help.

This was Lloyd George's biggest day since his tour began. He made his appearance at Massey Hall after having filled half a dozen speaking engagements, one of which was at the City Hall, where he received the freedom of the city from Mayor Maguire. In responding to the address of welcome by the Mayor he warmly praised the patriotism of the city which sent 60,000 men overseas to fight the battles of Great Britain, one-sixth of its entire population.

On his way from Government House, where with Dame Margaret, his wife, and Miss Megan, his daughter, he is the guest of the Governor General, to the various places where he attended ceremonies or addressed audiences he was cheered to the echo by huge crowds in the streets.

Apparently the decision reached at Montreal to curtail severely the program for his visit to this city was thrown to the winds. He did more than the big task set before him in the original itinerary. As a result of much talking his voice was quite husky when he spoke at Massey Hall late in the afternoon.

Again Mr. Lloyd George reviewed and warmly acknowledged the contribution of the Dominion of Canada to the victory that crowned the big war. He went further and gave statistics to show what the British Empire had contributed to the cause of the Allies.

Great Aid From Dominions.

Where France had looked for six divisions as the utmost which Britain would send over to fight on French soil, Canada alone, Mr. Lloyd George said, had sent almost three times that number. All together the overseas Dominions had sent 1,000,000 men to the front, and every race under the British flag sent its quota to help.

"Even Irishmen came to the colors," he said amid laughter; "some Irishmen. And India, that we were told was in revolt, sent 1,200,000 to the flag to help us.

"We have not said much about it; I think it was Carlyle who said one of the English people that they could do great things but could not describe them. Whether that is true or not, it is undoubtedly a fact that the British as a whole have not the gift which other races possess of making it clear how great their achievements are. It is a weakness of character which I hope they will not take the slightest trouble to cure.

"According to the casualty lists the British Army lost 900,000 lives and the total casualties of the British Empire were 3,000,000. We spent 10,000 million pounds sterling. What is that in dollars? Dollars fluctuate so much I do not know.

"I am glad I do not have to figure it out in marks. Shortly before I left some person sold me 100,000 marks for twopence. I have been reflecting ever since that I was cheated, because I find that these marks were only worth a half penny.

Says British Navy Saved France.

"I have said so much about the British army that I think I should say something about the navy—the navy which held the seas during the war. What would have happened had the British fleet stopped at home? What would have happened if the fleet had stayed in its own harbors for a year, or even for half a year? What would have happened had the fleet stayed in harbor for even six weeks?

"France would have been completely isolated, and her African army, which was a very gallant one, and fought very well, could never have landed on the shores of France to aid that country. As a matter of fact that contingent of the army of France would have been entirely cut off from participation in the European war.

"But for the British fleet the combative power of France would have collapsed in the first few weeks of the war.

"The contribution made by the British Empire was a gigantic one. It is surprising to every one—even the most sanguine believer in the Empire before the war. The world had better know that what the British Empire did once she can do again. [Cheers.] And she will do it again if her freedom is imperiled."

At this point Mr. Lloyd George warmly praised the mothers of Canada for the sacrifices they had made during the war when they sent their sons overseas.

"The task of the British Empire is a great one. It is to teach the world to keep out of war. Are wars done with? I wish I could say so. I wish I could. You cannot tell. I had hoped that the end of this last war would have put an end to war, that the world would have recognized the futility as well as the wickedness of force.

"I see Europe arming and filling up with ammunition of the most devastating sort. I am afraid that unless something intervenes there may be in the world again a catastrophe, but not like the last one. The last one was terrible. The last was full of horror and devastation, but it will be nothing to what will happen in another war.

"Human ingenuity has been employed in the development and the perfection of machinery of destruction. The next war may well destroy civilization unless something or somebody does something. This is why I want the British Empire strong.

Before going to Government House Mr. Lloyd George, accompanied by Dame Margaret and his daughter, drove to the Christie Street Hospital for wounded veterans, where he spoke briefly and chatted with some of the inmates. Dame Margaret and Miss Megan also spoke to many of the men.

Dame Margaret Addresses Women.

Dame Margaret, who is much interested in women's organizations and social reform movements in England, made her first speech of the tour today. It was before an audience of 1,000 women who gathered at the King Edward Hotel. She told the women that the problems which confronted their sex in England were very similar to those with which they themselves were called upon to deal.

"You know," she said, "we are very slow in starting good works over in Great Britain, but once we start them I think we do them rather well."

The Lloyd George special train will leave here tomorrow morning for Niagara Falls, where the former Premier will do some sightseeing. Tomorrow evening he will start for Winnipeg.

STRESEMANN'S BILL UP FOR VOTE TODAY

If It Is Passed New Financial Legislation Will Be Introduced.

BERLIN, Oct. 10.—At 10 o'clock tomorrow the Reichstag is scheduled to vote on the third and final reading of the law conferring extraordinary and near-dictatorial powers on the Stresemann Cabinet, and the outlook is that it will speedily pass by the necessary two-thirds majority.

Immediately thereafter the Stresemann Government will lay before the House a number of measures, including the project of a new mark note bank.

It is further expected the Government tomorrow will be able to agree on and deliver a reply to the Stinnes ultimatum. Stinnes continues to be the popular storm centre. The Social Democrat Party anxiously considers demanding that Stinnes be placed on trial for treason before the political Supreme Court at Leisic. The Communist organ Rote Fahne, reappearing after two weeks' suppression, boldly headlines "High Traitor Stinnes," while Georg Bernhard, the St. George of the Democratic Vossische Zeitung, specialising in trying to slay the dragon Stinnes, refers to the recent Ruhr activities of Stinnes and associates as "rebellion of the Archdukes."

The trouble centre is breeding in Breslau. Many Communists and other trouble makers were arrested there during the day, according to a late night telephone report, indicating the probability of riots and bloodshed tomorrow.

day should be abolished to increase Ruhr production.

The Journal des Débats tonight says the Ruhr situation is one affair, being the business of the French and Belgians, and that reparations generally is another affair, being the business of all of the Allies. It says France awaits the elimination of all obstacles Berlin placed in the way of the French and Belgians in the Ruhr before she permits general reparations negotiations.

The Temps says M. Poincaré's answer does not at all bar the way to general negotiations, but brings them nearer by keeping Germany to the straight and narrow path and preventing her wandering into the bushes.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 10.—The Cabinet met this afternoon to consider the situation in the Ruhr. It was decided in accord with the French Government that there is no reason to set up the Franco-Belgian-German Commission desired by the German Government, in order to facilitate restoration of normal economic conditions in the Ruhr.

The two Governments consider such a commission would serve no useful purpose since the Franco-Belgian authorities in the Ruhr have full powers, are in close touch with their Governments and will do everything possible to facilitate resumption of work.

Moreover, the Reparation Commission alone is qualified to deal with the question of deliveries to be made by the Reich.

Berlin and Mine Owners in Accord.

BERLIN, Oct. 10 (Associated Press).—Negotiations between members of the Reich Government and representatives of the Ruhr industrialists regarding measures which may be taken for the resumption of work in the occupied areas were begun yesterday, it was stated today.

Hugo Stinnes and the other Ruhr industrialists who conferred last week with General Degoutte at Duesseldorf received a clean bill of health from the Government during the Reichstag debate on the authorization bill to give the Chancellor sweeping authority in dictating economic measures. Dr. Sollmann, the Minister of the Interior, formally announced that Herren Stinnes, Voegler and Kloeckner had called on Chancellor Stresemann before leaving for Duesseldorf but were unable to reach him because he was then engaged in disentangling the governmental crisis.

The Chancellor was apprised of the purposes of the industrialists' mission, however, continued the Minister, and a report was also made to him by them of the outcome of their discussions with the French commander in the Ruhr immediately upon their return to Berlin.

Minister of Defense Gessler has withdrawn the decree imposing a censorship on military news.

EXODUS FROM BAVARIA.

Austria Objects to Migration There and Will Close Frontier.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Oct. 10.—Large numbers of people are reported crossing the frontier from Bavaria into Austria to escape to more tolerable conditions from the financial chaos in Germany.

They are described as partly wage earners, artisans, waiters and the like who find it impossible to live on what they get in Germany, and partly persons who for political reasons want to get out of the hands of von Kahr's régime.

In any case, their presence is not desired by the authorities in the Tyrol at Salzburg, as most of them are without means of subsistence and there are plenty of unemployed in Austria. Steps are being taken to close the frontier.

MAILED FIST SOBERS MUNICH.

Dictator von Kahr Shows No Quarter to Socialists and Communists.

MUNICH, Oct. 10 (Associated Press).—Munich is not the same old town it was since the mailed fist of Dictator von Kahr descended upon the social gaiety and the political exuberances of the native Bavarians.

Two weeks of iron rule have reduced the populace to a state of apathy and politics to a condition of monotony, for von Kahr has a firm grip on the situation and is showing no quarter to the Socialists and Communists, whose newspapers, placards and free speeches he has been throttling with a degree of thoroughness rarely encountered in an ostensible republic.

One hears less talk about "separation" nowadays than was the case two weeks ago. The Socialists are the real malcontents in Bavaria today. They are declared to be inwardly raging at von Kahr's suppression of them and their political aims. They also are said to be chafing under the feeling that their comrades outside the Bavarian frontier and in the Central Government apparently are impotent to come to their rescue.

Von Kahr's efforts to popularize the prices of beer and milk have temporarily foundered on the rapidly sinking mark, however. Retail business is virtually at a standstill, because of the money depreciation and the mounting of prices for food and other necessities, and unemployment is showing an increase weekly.

FILL AMERICAN ORDERS NOW.

Ruhr Manufacturers Resume Shipments to the United States.

ESSEN, Oct. 10.—The orders placed by American firms with Ruhr manufacturers last year and which have been tied up owing to the occupation complications are beginning to move toward the United States in consequence of the ending of the passive resistance.

The German manufacturers now are at liberty to pay the 10 per cent. export tax imposed by the French, which tax will be added to the bills paid by the American firms, thus necessarily increasing the price of the goods when they are retailed in the United States.

The completed orders include machinery and tools, iron and steel, millinery materials, velvets, silks and satins and various other dress goods, some of which were intended for delivery last Spring.

Bleeding Gums

THE very first symptom of pyorrhea must be checked. Otherwise, the infection spreads to the root sockets which hold your teeth in place. Then the teeth fall out or must be pulled.

Pyorrhocide Powder is the dentifrice prescribed by dentists since 1908 as an aid in checking as well as preventing pyorrhea. It has a tonic and healing effect upon the gums. It corrects bleeding gums—strengthens tender gums—hardens soft gums. It keeps the teeth white and clean.

Use Pyorrhocide Powder daily—see your dentist regularly—and you can avoid pyorrhea. The economical dollar package contains six months' supply. All druggists.

$200,000 PICTURE LOST BY COUNTESS

LED TO SEIZURE IN ANTWERP

Had Entrusted It to Agent for Authentication, Owner Said—Painted 300 Years Ago, She Asserted.

Word of the arrest in Antwerp of a Greek who had in his possession a Dutch painting from the United States brought information yesterday that Countess C. V. Valetta of Athens, now in this country, had asked the police months ago to search for the Greek and the canvas. A dispatch from Brussels, telling of the arrest, said it was thought the picture was the property of J. P. Morgan, but this was denied in New York.

The Countess, who is visiting relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Doarman of 500 Sixth Avenue, Astoria, told yesterday part of the history of the painting which is called "A Woman Reading," and is said to have been painted more than 300 years ago by Peter de Hoeck.

Countess Valetta said she believed the canvas to be worth $200,000. It came into the possession of her family, she said, during the French Revolution, when a French noblewoman gave it to the Countess's grandfather who had gone to the French woman's rescue in a struggle over the possession of the island of Chephalonia, off the French coast.

The painting had been in her family ever since that time, the Countess said, and she brought it with her when she came on her visit to the United States about eight months ago. Three months later she decided that she might want to sell it and concluded to send it to Holland to a Dr. de Groot, an authority, to have it authenticated. She got Themistocles Apostolatas, an agent, she said, to agree to take it to Holland with him.

Apostolatas, she said, sailed with the picture. Several months went by and the Countess heard from neither the Greek agent nor from Dr. de Groot. Becoming alarmed in the absence of any word from the other side, she communicated her fears to the New York police and to the Greek Consul General here. Word was sent to Holland that the painting might have been stolen and the Dutch authorities were asked to watch for Apostolatas. The Long Island City Detective Bureau got official word yesterday of the Greek's arrest.

Gas Kills Three Children.

Special to The New York Times.

LA PORTE, Ind., Oct. 10.—Gas ended the lives of three small children of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kulkstra of Michigan City, Ind., today after one of them had innocently turned it on in a room in which the windows and doors were closed. The father and two other children were sleeping in another room at the time. The dead are: Henry Jr., 4; Jim, 3, and Sander, 18 months. The father was overcome, but is expected to recover.

bitterly. Mrs. Miller also voiced her indignation and proceedings were again halted.

"The day before Mrs. Stokes came back from White Sulphur Springs," Henshaw went on when directed to explain his charge, "I received a telegram from her stating that under no consideration should I let any one take the babies. I went back to the hotel and the next night she arrived from White Sulphur. She took me up to her room and explained she had had some trouble with Mr. Stokes and if he tried to take her babies she would start separation proceedings. I was at that time between two fires, driving for Mr. Stokes and looking after her babies. I didn't know what to do.

Swears He Agreed to Get Evidence.

"I agreed at that time to work in Mrs. Stokes's behalf, to secure evidence against Mr. Stokes, and if necessary to frame Mr. Stokes up. She would furnish me money. She advanced money. In my opinion the improper conduct was giving me money and framing up Mr. Stokes so she could get a separation."

"I never gave him a cent in my life," Mrs. Stokes said to Mr. Untermyer.

Here the Court ordered recess for luncheon, as Henshaw left the stand Mrs. Miller said:

"Let me at him. I haven't a gun, but I can scratch his eyes out." Court attendants swarmed about her once more.

At the afternoon session Henshaw said that Mrs. Stokes asked him to bribe Mr. Stokes's cook and butler for evidence. If necessary, according to Henshaw, he was to "frame" Stokes by sending some one to his apartment. Mrs. Stokes told him, he testified, that he would be paid for these services by her step-brother, Rowland Miller. While he agreed to do as he was asked, the chauffeur said, he never actually carried out his promises although he received some money.

Henshaw replied affirmatively. Under redirect examination by Mr. Steuer, the witness said he was much more friendly with Mrs. Stokes than with her husband, having taken care of her babis, linens, silverware and trunks.

"Is it because you were more friendly with Mrs. Stokes than with Mr. Stokes that you have told this story?" inquired Mr. Untermyer.

"No," replied Henshaw, "I have another reason for that."

Neither attorney asked the reason, and Henshaw was excused.

The trial will continue this morning.

SAYS STOKES PAID NEGRESS.

Maid's Identification of Mrs. Stokes False, Mother Declares.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—In an affidavit obtained today by Sheridan A. Bruseaux, a negro, head of the Keystone Detective Agency, Mrs. Elise Bailey, a negress, declared that her daughter, Nell Rose Miller, had received between $800 and $1,000 to make a false identification of Mrs. W. E. D. Stokes. The money, Mrs. Bailey stated, had been furnished by agents of Stokes.

"When I read in the papers all the lies that will be going on and knew what Rose would be tellin'," Mrs. Bailey explained, "I just made up my mind to go to New York and tell all I know."

Mrs. Miller, according to her mother's affidavit, "had been persuaded to attempt to identify Mrs. Stokes as being the same woman that she served in Wallace's apartment, and whom she had heretofore said was Mrs. Stokes; that she had been persuaded into the case and into identifying the woman as being Mrs. Stokes when, in fact, the woman was not Mrs. Stokes, in her opinion, but was another woman whom she knew and who resembled Mrs. Stokes."

Bruseaux sent the affidavit to New York tonight.

This advertisement is on behalf of a corporation which has a specially developed and highly meritorious product with the Ford principle of manufacture, that of one standard chassis for all models, thereby assuring quantity production at lowest possible cost; includes special adaptation not only to the delivery needs of retailers everywhere, but for light passenger service.

There is an open market for this type of car as world-wide in extent as that of Ford, with an estimated minimum volume of business of at least 100,000 cars per annum. The selling price is low enough to compete with Ford or other price schedules, with all the advantages which accrue from a lower cost to operate.

An automobile executive is wanted of high capacity to serve as President of the Corporation on salary or commission basis; one who has in a large degree the Ford touch of genius in the matter of production and distribution.

TSAO KUN SWORN IN; NEW WAR IN CHINA

CALLS ELECTION A FRAUD

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PEKING, Oct. 10.—China broke all world records today in the matter of putting through transactions of national importance in quick time. The city was decorated in the first place in celebration of the twelfth anniversary of the establishment of the republic and further ornamentation was prepared in honor of Tsao Kun, who arrived at 7 o'clock by train from Paotingfu and was received by a whole division of troops as a guard of honor.

At 9:30 A. M., Tsao Kun was ceremoniously inaugurated as President while a salute of 108 guns was fired.

Eleven o'clock witnessed the promulgation of the national Constitution, which Parliament off and on has been preparing for twelve years and which was suddenly completed as a part of the tactics which resulted in the Presidential election.

At 12 o'clock the new President swore his oath before the Parliament which so faithfully elected him.

At 2 o'clock he received congratulations on his election from the Manchu Emperor and the Ching nobles.

The diplomatic body was not invited to attend any of these ceremonies, nor were representatives of the press, so it can only be said of them that they appear to have been concluded without incident and with very little manifestation of public interest.

According to the Chinese press, Chang Tso-lin, the Mukden war lord, has addressed a circular telegram to all the high officials at Peking and in the provinces, and to all important public bodies, in which he expresses himself as "pathetically moved by a sense of righteousness" because of the notorious character of the Presidential election, "which pollutes every ear."

The President in his inauguration address modestly disclaims abilities equal to those of his predecessors, but promises to do his best. Recognising the condition of the country and the necessity for financial retrenchment, he deprecates internal strife and says he will work for unification and will hold all officials responsible for the protection of foreigners.

It yet remains to elect a Vice President. The matter is likely to arouse no little contention, and to appoint a new Government is not an easy task, considering the impossible financial position and the necessity of furnishing a plain answer to the foreign note on the Linching kidnappings.

Sun Yat-sen Declares War.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 9 (Associated Press).—Sun Yat-sen, South Chinese constitutionalist leader, has issued an open declaration of war against Tsao Kun, President-elect of China, according to a telegram received here from Dr. Sun today by Wang Ching-wei, his personal representative. Dr. Sun said:

"I have issued an order for the organization of a punitive expedition against Tsao Kun and for the arrest and punishment of all members of Parliament who participated in the election. I have also telegraphed to Marshal Tuan Chi-jui, Marshal Chang Tso-lin and General Lu Yung-hsiang, inviting them to join me in the suppression of the enemy."

Coincident with the announcement of Sun's action seventy-four members of Chinese Parliament met here today and repudiated the recent election of Tsao Kun on the ground that it was the result of bribery.

Sun Yat-sen issued circulars denouncing the election immediately after it was held last Friday. Chang Tso-lin issued a statement just before the election saying he would support it if it were fair and legal, but that he would oppose it if "an unqualified person" were chosen. Lu Yung-hsiang and Tuan Chi-jui have not made public statements.

A statement was issued today at the headquarters in Canton of Dr. Sun saying that telegrams from all parts of China were urging him to assume the leadership of a nation-wide movement to oust Tsao.

A lengthy meeting of Sun's "cabinet" was held yesterday, attended by high military leaders and leading civil officials, at which it was decided to address a manifesto to the foreign powers denouncing the election. The manifesto was issued today and handed to Sir J. W. Jamieson of Great Britain, senior consul here, and communicated to the diplomatic corps at Peking.

"There have been many sordid transactions in history, but none equals the shamelessness of this latest attempt to seize high power," the manifesto declares. "No people who tamely acquiesce to such an act can have the right to live as a self-respecting nation. The Chinese people as a whole regard the election of Tsao Kun as an act of usurpation and treason which must be resisted and punished.

"The people are determined to find concrete expression in a national government the formation of which is now being worked out by representative leaders of the nation."

DUBIOUS ON FARM LOANS.

Farm Official Points to Shrinkage of Wheat Grower's Dollar.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 10.—"Billions of dollars of farm mortgages, the hard earned dollars of city workers, are a perilous investment because the wheat grower's dollar has shrunk to about 50 cents, and his taxes, interest and expenses are just what they used to be, or more," Benjamin C. Marsh, managing director of the Farmers' National Council of Washington, said in a statement today on his way to the national capital after a three months' speaking tour in fourteen wheat and cotton growing States.

"Bank examiners in several Western States are not strictly enforcing banking laws, because they don't want to close any more banks," Mr. Marsh continued. "There is only one way out, and that is for the Government to help farmers, through a Government marketing corporation, to get a fair price for their products until they can pay off their debts in the same dollars in which they were contracted. Any other course is dishonest, and extending more credit is merely indirect dishonesty."

GREENE ATTACKS CRANE PURCHASES

Declares Only One of Sixteen Bought for the State Canals Was Ever Used.

USELESS AND IN THE WAY

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 10.—The purchase of nine cranes for barge canal terminals, which cost the State $183,597, was attacked by Colonel Frederick Stuart Greene, State Superintendent of Public Works, at the close of today's session of the investigation into alleged irregularities in the Canal Bureau of the department.

Colonel Greene charged that not only were the cranes useless, but they were "lumbering up the terminals." He declared to Commissioner Kellogg that out of the sixteen cranes purchased only one was ever used. That one was at the Troy terminal, where steel rails were loaded for the West, and where some scrap iron had been loaded on barges.

The cranes are the only equipment for the canals that were not purchased from the General Mill and Contractors' Supply Company, now under fire in the investigation. Two of the cranes, Colonel Greene said, were bought for a canal dry dock that is to be built near Rochester. This he characterized as "buying a saddle in the hope that some day you may have a horse."

Bought Under Abridged Contracts.

Several of the Cranes, Colonel Greene said, were purchased under what is known as abridged contracts—those that do not require publication of advertisements for bids and which are for expenditures of less than $10,000. The bids, Colonel Greene insisted, could be posted for ten days behind the superintendent's desk and fulfil all requirements.

One of the successful bids for an abridged contract to supply cranes was that of W. F. Wilms of Buffalo, who bid $9,998.

Reynolds King Townsend of Albany, a partner of the General Mill and Contractors Supply Company, took the stand and said he had been refused the company's books. His counsel, B. Jermain Savage, corroborated the testimony. The company began business with $100 which he contributed, Townsend said, and $500 contributed by Edward L. Swazey. Bradstreet's, it was testified, rated the concern at $33,000.

Colonel Greene presented bills for oil stain coats for the dredge employes. Another bill of the Empire State Dredging Company was for $45.05 for telephone calls that were not itemized.

Switching to the matter of cranes, Colonel Greene declared the one at the Mott Haven terminal was in the way. Five portal cranes, he said, originally were used at the Hog Island Shipyard, and six five-tone cranes were sold by the Government to W. F. Wilms of Buffalo. The cranes at Troy and Oswego cost $3,250, and three at Mott Haven, Buffalo and Syracuse cost $4,666.66.

Commissioner Kellogg announced that he would go over the evidence, and ordered an adjournment until tomorrow.

Bank Accounts Presented.

The bank accounts of J. William Grady, dismissed assistant deputy; Henry J. Castor, chief inspector, and the General Mill and Contractors Supply Company were produced and marked at the first session today.

Commissioner Edward S. Walsh took the stand to refute some of the testimony given yesterday by Henry J. Castor, chief inspector. Mr. Walsh denied that he had instructed Castor to take orders from Deputy James E. Doyle.

"Since the middle of January until the last week in September," he declared, "I have not spoken to Mr. Castor, due to the fact that I disliked, didn't like, his methods, and all the communication I had with him was through memorandum."

Commissioner Walsh said the activities of Castor, which were not to his liking, had nothing to do with the present investigation.

Mr. Walsh declared he had made no investigation as to the reasonableness of prices charged by the General Mill and Contractors' Supply Company, which he had certified as fair and reasonable.

"I didn't make any investigation," he said. "The auditor would put them on my desk and I would sign them, assuming that the price had been investigated."

Hired At $250 a Day.

Taking up dredging contracts, it was brought out that the State appropriation for this work was $500,000, and that dredges were hired at prices of from $65 to $250 a day. The bids were not advertised, he said, because of the restricted number of dredges that could operate on the canal.

Mr. Walsh suggested that the State should have a central purchasing agency.

Henry J. Castor testified about a requisition concerning which Miss Mary I. Connor, Commissioner Walsh's secretary, had sworn she had not told Mr. Casto rthat the article, a fuel-oil burner, should be purchased only from the General Mill and Contractors' Supply Company. Rupert P. Sturtevant testified he had not engaged in the disputed conversation with Miss Connor.

A large part of the session was taken up with bills which had been paid and which tended, Colonel Green contended, to show that the State had been overcharged for supplies furnished to the dredges and to other activities of the bureau. He said bills had been multiplied incorrectly, and in one instance the same bill had been paid twice, once in July and again in August.

Colonel Green insisted that the State had paid $8,000 more for $18,000 worth of supplies than it should. The bills included hardware, boots, soap and coal. One item was for an engine costing $1,045 for one of the dredges. The price should have been $787.50, he declared.

"I can understand renting a dredge and I can understand equipping it," said Colonel Greene, "but way the State should install an engine costing $1,045 is beyond me. That engine is made by the Sterling Engin Company of Buffalo and is sold by them for $787.50.

OGLETHORPE'S BODY IS FOUND IN VAULT

His Coffin and That of His Wife Are Almost as Well Preserved as When Laid to Rest.

PLATES REVEAL IDENTITY

Dr. Jacobs Asks Permission for Removal—Georgia Colonial Society Members Protest.

GRANHAM, England, Oct. 10—(Associated Press).—Resting in a lead-lined elmwood coffin, almost as well preserved as though it had been deposited yesterday, the body of General James F. Oglethorpe was found late this afternoon in a brick vault under the floor of the little parish church here, where it was interred 139 years ago. The body of Lady Oglethorpe, who died two years later, rests beside that of her husband in a similar coffin. Large bronze name plates give unmistakable evidence of the identity of the bodies.

Time and the elements have apparently placed only a light hand on the venerated Briton who laid the foundations of the present American States of Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi, for the only sign of decay in the coffins is a slight break in a seam at the head of the General's coffin, which exposed to view the inner wooden coffin and lead lining.

The Associated Press correspondent was the only correspondent admitted to the church. He was allowed to descend by means of a ladder, and with the aid of a flickering candle it was possible to make out the following inscription on General Oglethorpe's coffin:

"The Honorable General Oglethorpe. Died, First July, 1785."

The vault is built of large, heavy red bricks. It is about ten feet long, six feet wide and four feet high, and in massiveness is not unlike in appearance some of the mortuary chambers in the Valley of the Kings in Egypt.

Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, President of Oglethorpe University, was the first to enter the vault. He was followed by the Rev. Leslie Wright, the rector.

"You have made history," was the rector's remark to Dr. Jacobs after the coffins had been examined.

While the wooden fabric of the coffins is intact it is clearly most fragile, requiring the utmost care when the bodies are removed. Dr. Jacobs, who has spent two years in unremitting search, was visibly affected, and when he emerged said:

"The wish of ten million people in the southland is now realized. Their father and founder is located. I am sure the British ecclesiastical authorities will allow the body of the General to pass across the seas into the bosom of Georgia, where it will rest, honored and loved, a link between the land of his birth and the country to which he consecrated his life and fortune."

The tomb will be temporarily closed for one week so as to permit the Chancellor of the diocese to give notice to all the parishioners of the intention to remove the bodies to America. If no objection is raised the bodies will be taken from the vault on Oct. 15, while a solemn religious ceremony will be held in the presence of Ambassador Harvey, representatives of the British Government and high ecclesiastical authorities. The long journey to Savannah will begin soon after.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Oct. 10.—A protest "against the act of removal" of the body of General James E. Oglethorpe from England to the United States was forwarded today to the State Department in Washington by Georgia officials of the Society of Colonial Wars.

At a meeting held here last night a resolution was adopted and has been transmitted to Secretary Hughes with a request that it be forwarded to the British Government.

"We respectfully submit that the grave of Oglethorpe and his wife," the resolution said, "should not be disturbed."

DEMANDS $5,240,000 FOR 22,000,000 MARKS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—A suit to test the legal binding effect of information published by the Secretary of the Treasury in compliance with the act of Congress of 1873 relative to the supposed value of foreign currency in dollars and cents was filed today in the District of Columbia Supreme Court by Walter Holland, an attorney.

Holland says he bought a check for 2,000,000 German marks on Aug. 24, and another check for 20,000,000 marks on Aug. 27 from the American Express Company's branch in this city. The market value of the mark at that time was 40 cents a million, thereby making a supposed investment of $8.80. The express company, which is sued for a total of $5,240,000, admitted that Holland paid a trifle more than the market value, but refused to state the exact amount.

According to Holland's figures, the mark, based on information alleged to have been published by the Secretary of the Treasury, is worth a trifle over 23 cents.

Holland's declaration does not state whether his marks were to be paid in paper or gold. The last quotation on marks published in this city, according to a Washington bank, was 65,000,000 for a penny.

Thirty-six Were Children and Only One Was Killed at a Street Crossing.

COLLIER POINTS OUT PERILS

Deputy Police Commissioner Reports 17,223 Safety Lectures Given to School Pupils.

Barron G. Collier, Special Deputy Police Commissioner, made public yesterday statistics compiled by the Police Department showing that seventy-four persons had been killed in street accidents in this city in September, one less than in the same month last year. Of the victims thirty-six were under 17 years of age.

Mr. Collier sent a statement to the Board of Education in which he pointed out that eighteen of the children were killed while crossing the streets at places other than the regular crossings, only one at a street crossing and two while playing games in the roadway. Two children were killed while stealing rides on vehicles, four while on roller skates in the streets and one while riding a bicycle. Another was killed in a collision between vehicles.

He emphasized in the report the danger of crossing thoroughfares at points away from the crossings, and explained that police lieutenants had given safety lectures to 17,223 school children and conducted eighty-eight meetings for chauffeurs and drivers of automobiles. Policemen, he said, had reported 1,146 instances where they had given children warnings and 4,800 cases of persons found "jay walking" in the streets.

The summary of adult deaths in automobile accidents showed that four had been killed while crossing streets with umbrellas held in front of them, two boarding or alighting from street cars, four falling from moving vehicles and one falling from a vehicle jarred by defective pavement.

One fatal accident, it was shown, was due to a defective brake on a motor car, and fifty-three persons were injured in accidents from the same cause. Policemen attached to the Brake Inspection Squad of the Bureau of Public Safety, of which Mr. Collier is the head, reported that 1,696 motor vehicles out of 10,461 had been found in September to have had defective brakes and that 270 convictions had been obtained in the Traffic Court of drivers operating motor vehicles with unsafe brakes or steering gear.

HERRIOT, BACK HOME, PRAISES AMERICANS

Mayor of Lyons Full of Admiration for Us, Excepting Our Customs System.

HAVRE, Oct. 10.—Edouard Herriot, Mayor of Lyons and Socialist member of the Chamber of Deputies, returned on the liner Paris today from the United States full of admiration for everything American.

"The Americans are a magnificent race—beautiful women and fine men," he said.

His only criticism was of the customs system, which he described as "a regular inquisition."

M. Herriot thought the labor-saving tools developed in America, especially those for domestic use, should find a great market in France. One of the purposes of his trip was to persuade American manufacturers to exhibit their goods at the annual Lyons Fair.

McCORMICK RECONCILIATION

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Muriel McCormick, daughter of Harold F. McCormick, and her mother, Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, have ended an estrangement of two years' standing, according to friends and members of the family.

The mother and daughter have been at odds since the divorce obtained by Mrs. McCormick. At that time Muriel left her mother and since then has lived at her father's home when not traveling.

Since the divorce, Mr. McCormick has married Ganna Walska, and Mathilde McCormick, younger sister of Muriel, has married Max Oser, Swiss riding master.

FINED FOR ABUSIVE LETTER.

Maine Man Must Pay $10 for Note to Head of Legion.

PORTLAND, Maine, Oct. 10.—Emil Dick, superintendent of the Barker Mills at Auburn, was fined $10 in the United States District Court today after a jury had found him guilty of sending an offensive letter to Alvin M. Owsley, commander of the American Legion. The jury twice reported that it was unable to agree but was sent back by Judge Clarence Hale, being out a total of five hours and twenty minutes.

The letter used abusive language in attacking Mr. Owsley and declared the commander's stand in favor of the French occupation of the Ruhr was French propaganda.

WARD OUT FOR COOLIDGE.

Westchester Republican Leader Predicts His Election Next Year.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The nomination and election of President Coolidge in 1924 was predicted by W. L. Ward, Chairman of the New York Republican State Committee's Executive Committee, and party leader of Westchester County, after a call at the White House today. Mr. Ward was accompanied to the White House by Representative J. Mayhew Wainwright of New York, who formerly was Assistant Secretary of War, and later was the guest of President Coolidge at luncheon.

JUNKED WARSHIPS WILL BE KEPT HERE

Navy Department Tells All Foreigners That They Cannot Buy the Vessels.

MANY INQUIRIES RECEIVED

Government Will Make the Ships Unfit for War Use Before Disposing of Them.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—None of the American warships to be junked under the scrapping program of the Washington Arms Conference will be sold to any foreign nation or individual.

A number of inquiries, it is admitted, have been received by the Navy Department from abroad concerning the vessels to be sold for scrapping. Whether these requests have come from Governments or individuals was not disclosed, but the department is giving them all the same reply—that these vessels are to be sold only to citizens of the United States to be scrapped in this country.

Discussing the matter today, Captain Edmund W. Bennaffon, the officer in charge of the sale of the vessels, pointed out that a paragraph in the terms of sale provides that "it is agreed that any vessel or vessels on which this proposal is submitted will not be sold, transferred or mortgaged to any foreign Government or power or to any person not a citizen of the United States of America, and, furthermore, the work attending such scrapping, stripping and dismantling shall be done in the United States of America."

The terms on which the vessels will be sold provide that each bid must be accompanied by a cash deposit, certified check or cashier's check in a sum not less than one-tenth of the amount of the bid, also by a bond in a penalty equal to the amount of the bid, with two or more sureties to be approved by the Secretary of the Navy, or one acceptable corporate surety, conditioned for the payment of the remaining 90 per cent. of the bid within thirty days from the date of the award.

Alternate bids on the deferred-payment basis will be considered for the sale of the vessels.

Captain Bennaffon said that full opportunity for the actual inspection of all the vessels listed would be given and that bidders were expected to make a physical inspection of the vessels which they desired to buy before submitting bids, as failure to inspect would not constitute ground for any claim. The bids will be opened at the Navy Department Oct. 25, and Nov. 1, 8 and 30.

The work of rendering these vessels unfit for warlike service, as called for by the treaty limiting naval armaments, is being done by the Government at its own expense, and will be completed prior to the time when they are to be open for public inspection.

SAYS GOVERNMENT UPHOLDS GERMANS

DEFENDS WILSON'S ORDER

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 10. — The Chemical Foundation, Inc., answered before Federal Judge Morris today the Government's contention that the Alien Property Custodian's sale in 1919 of seized German chemical and dye patents was illegal because, among other reasons, those who acted as sellers also constituted the buying group.

Isidor J. Dresel, of counsel for the defendant in the Government's equity suit to cancel the sale, argued that the plaintiff's contention was based on a false premise in that, while the sale was effected by Francis P. Garvan in his capacity as Custodian to the Foundation, of which he was President, Mr. Garvan was merely carrying out President Wilson's instructions to complete a transaction previously contracted for by A. Mitchell Palmer, Garvan's predecessor as Custodian.

Recalling Senator Underwood's assertions in urging amendments to the Trading With the Enemy act that enabled the United States to possess and sell seized patents, Mr. Kresel expressed wonder "why the Government did not include Senator Underwood among the alleged conspirators."

Says Congress Authorized Sale.

Mr. Kresel said Congress felt that a public sale of patents might result in their return to "the very Germans from whom they wanted to take the property and that was why Congress authorized the President, if he deemed wise, to order a private sale."

"Congress was subordinating the interests of the Germans to the major purpose of preservation of our country and striking a blow at our enemy," said Mr. Kresel. "Congress gave the President power to consider the national interests in disposing of the property, yet the plaintiff says the President had no right to consider the national interests but should have gotten the last dollar for the patents.

"They don't want to stand in court and openly charge President Wilson with being a conspirator to despoil the Government, as they charge the others, but it must follow that if President Wilson had knowledge of what the others did, and it was under his direction and supervision that it was done, if any criticism is leveled at anybody, it must be equally leveled at the President. No act could be done by the custodian except under direction of the President under the law.

"Congress had in mind national defense and preservation of the country. The Government is blind to that now and can see nothing but the sacred trust for the Germans. That sacred trust for the Germans is paramount in the eyes of the Government today, even though the independence of the United States is at stake.

Puts a Supposititious Case.

"Suppose 'A' in a supposititious case was Mr. Thompson, who was a witness in this case. Suppose 'X' in my supposititious case was Herman A. Metz. Suppose the President knew through diplomatic channels that Metz had been furnished by Germany with unlimited amounts to bid any amount at public auction for the dye patents. He is supposed the President knew that. We do not know what he knew. He was not a witness here.

"Suppose he knew that, and the question came up as to whether there should be a private sale or a public sale of these patents, what was the President to do? Was he to say, 'Through a sacred trust for the Germans I must get the last dollar for this property. I must sell to Metz, although I know he is representing the Germans in buying this property,' or is he to be permitted to sell to Thompson, who, he knew, would never serve the Germans? Would it be carrying out the intent of Congress under the act of March, 1918, for him to sell to Metz or to sell to Thompson?

"Yet when he decides to sell to Thompson for less than Metz might be willing to give at public auction, he knows well that he won't get as much—that Thompson won't pay as much as Metz would pay. According to the Government argument, the President would have to sell this property to Metz—Metz—I need say no more than mention his name.

"Suppose during the war General Pershing had cabled to the President and said, 'Our men are dying because we have not got salvarsan'—and that is not imagination, either. Your Honor knows what the testimony in camera was as to the use of certain salvarsan. And suppose Professor Steiglitz came to the President and said, 'I will buy these salvarsan patents for $1,000,' and suppose Metz came to the President and said, 'I will buy these salvarsan patents for $1,000,' and suppose Metz came to the President and said, 'I will pay $1,000,000.' Now the President knew that Steiglitz knew how to make safe salvarsan, and that if he sold to Steiglitz our soldiers would get a pure product, safe for injection into human beings, and at the same time knew, as was the fact, that Metz made a poison and not a drug.

"Did President Wilson have the right to take the public interest into consideration and say, 'I'll sell this property for $1,000, and not for $1,000,000? Must the President say 'Ah, I must keep a sacred trust to the Germans?'"

Mr. Kresel said the acquisition of the patents by the Custodian and the foundation constituted "the one constructive thing that came out of the war, to which the country will look in future as the source of its national defense and the protection of its public health."

Says Wilson Knew the Facts.

Declaring that President Wilson knew how the Germans had obtained control of the industry here, knew the importance of the industry to national defense and public health, and was thoroughly informed of the situation developed in this country by the refusal of the Germans when the World War started to ship dyes to America, Mr. Kresel said:

"This shows the iniquity of asking the Court to substitute its judgment for that of a President when he decided he was acting in the public interest."

Judge Morris asked Colonel Henry W. Anderson, Special Assistant Attorney General: "Is the national faith and credit involved? I am not able to see that it is involved here unless you develop it in your further arguments. If there was a taking and a compensation was required by the national faith and credit, is not that a matter for the treaty-making authorities of the Government and not the Judicial Department?"

Colonel Anderson replied that that would be true if this were a lawful sale. He contended the sale amounted to confiscation without the authority of Congress.

Colonel Anderson asserted that, while the Government had quoted from the Federal criminal code in relation to its arguments in this case that one could not be buyer and seller in the same transaction while acting for a profiting corporation and while an officer of the Government, it had "nothing to do with any aspect of this matter." He said "the record showed that the Government confined its remarks entirely to the proceedings in this court," and that the criminal code had been referred to "solely as to its effect in the civil proceeding in this court." He declared he "never considered any criminal aspect of the matter."

50 RAIDERS DRY UP 22 YONKERS OASES

Capture Made Here When Barrels Are Being Unloaded From French Liner.

A drive against bootleggers in Westchester County was launched yesterday by fifty Prohibition agents under Divisional Chief H. Q. Merrick. At noon they made twenty-two simultaneous raids in Yonkers, arrested nineteen men and seized liquors valued at $20,000.

Evidence had been gathered by Izzy Einstein and Moe Smith, aided by "Izzy Jr.," a bloodhound recently sent to Einstein by a Georgia Sheriff. The dog, according to the Sheriff, acquired a "nose for booze" from his first owner, who was a moonshiner.

The raids were witnessed by thousands of persons who were on the streets at the noon hour, and who watched the prohobition agents coming out of raided places with prisoners and contraband. The liquor seized was loaded on two motor trucks and sent to the Knickerbocker Warehouse, First Street and the Bowery.

The prisoners were taken to Police Headquarters at Yonkers where they were locked up pending their arraignment before Commissioner Boyle today. While three agents were taking their prisoners in an automobile to Police Headquarters on Wells Avenue, Yonkers, the driver of the car was halted by Traffic Officer Edward Keenan who warned the prohibition agents that they were on the wrong side of the street.

The policeman says that the Prohibition agents became abusive. He said he ordered them to accompany him to the police station and that one of the agents struck him while aonther struck at him but missed. He compelled three agents with their prisoners to accompany him to the station and there he preferred charges of assault against Agents James Bruno, Emil Manzella and James Murtha. Judge Charles W. Boote paroled them in the custody of Divisional Prohibition Chief Brennan on the latter's promise to produce the defendants in court this morning for a hearing on Keenan's charges.

Liquor Found in Hides.

One of the places visited by the raiders was an establishment said to be owned by John ("Red") Monroe, a former lightweight prizefighter, 63 Main Street, but no liquor was found.

The discovery of thirty-seven cases of Scotch whisky, cognac, Benedictine and vermouth concealed in hides shipped in barrels was made yesterday by customs agents under Deputy Surveyor William R. Sanders when one of the barrels which were being unloaded from the French liner Chicago, was rolled too heavily by a stevedore against a steel girder of Pier 14, North River, and burst. The identity of the consignees was not disclosed by the customs authorities, who believe that they have found a clue to an entirely new method of smuggling liquor into the United States. Mr. Sanders said he expected to make some arrests as a result of the discovery.

A barrel marked "190 proof," which was discovered among barrels of potatoes on the truck of George Pitt, 27, who said he lived in Brooklyn, led to the seizure of the truck by Patrolman William Zitell of Stapleton, S. I., while the truck was waiting at St. George for the ferry. The truck was loaded with forty-two barrels of alcohol, valued at $18,500. It was consigned to the Herman Chemical Company, 232 Adams Street, Brooklyn. Truck and alcohol were turned over to the prohibition authorities.

A tenfold increase in the production of denatured alcohol in the last twelve years is disclosed by a survey just completed by James P. McGovern, counsel for the United States Industrial Alcohol Company, and made public yesterday by the American Chemical Society. Production increased from 3,313,478.83 wine gallons in 1907-1908 to 33,299,166.37 in 1922, according to the survey.

"The advent of prohibition," says the society's announcement, "presented an added, and perhaps more potent, reason why pure grain alcohol should be replaced as far as possible with tax-free denatured alcohol, and Section 10, Title 2, of the National Prohibition act provided for denatured alcohol 'by the admixture of such denaturing materials as shall render the alcohol or any compound in which it is authorized to be used unfit for use as an intoxicating beverage.'"

LOCATED in the heart of the upper east side residential section, opposite Central Park, the northwest corner of Madison Avenue and 89th Street provides an unusually fine site for a modern apartment house.

The plot fronts 100 feet, eight and one half inches on Madison Avenue and 164 feet, five inches on 89th Street—a desirable size for an apartment operation.

Lying within 275 feet of Fifth Avenue, and surrounded by the splendid homes of many well known residents of New York, the plot is especially attractive from a standpoint of future apartment rentals.

Builders who can demonstrate their ability to erect a suitable building on this site will find the price and terms to their liking.

DENY WIFE CAUSED MINISTER'S SUICIDE

ACCUSE HIM OF NEGLECT

Declare His Lack of Support Forced Footlights Career on Mother of Five.

Mrs. Mary Tupper Jones of 323 West Forty-third Street, widow of the Rev. William John Jones, an Episcopalian clergyman, who ended his life in a hotel in Kansas City on Monday night, did not break up her family life to be on the stage, but for six years strove to provide a livelihood for herself and her five children while the husband was contributing nothing to their support, according to Mrs. Jones's own story and to a statement made yesterday by Miss Edith Ellis, the playwright, an intimate friend of the family.

Mrs. Jones was prostrated yesterday but her daughter Isabel said on behalf of her mother:

"The clergyman did not leave the actress because of her stage life, but the actress left the clergyman because he made life impossible. My mother had never pressed for a divorce for fear it would wreck his career. The letter he left was a pitiful attempt to square himself with the world. It was a garbled account. No doubt when he saw that the family, after years of struggling, were at last beginning to make their way, he was stricken by the pangs of conscience and, in a fit of remorse and brooding over the past, took his life."

Miss Ellis said: "Mr. Jones himself wanted the divorce, but, as an Episcopalian clergyman, he could not remain in the church if his wife obtained a decree from him. She offered to let him bring suit against her if he wished, and he was supposed to be arranging this action when he decided to kill himself instead. I have known Mrs. Jones five years. Instead of attempting to disrupt her home, she has fought single-handed a bitter fight against circumstances."

Miss Ellis said that husband and wife last saw each other on Sept. 28 in Philadelphia, when Mr. Jones's last words to his wife were: "Mary, you are the noblest woman I have ever known. My faith in you has held me to whatever good there is in me."

GLEN ISLAND TO BE A PARK.

Westchester County Commission Acquires Title for $550,000.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Title to Glen Island was acquired today by the Westchester County Park Commission. The purchase price is $550,000.

Some time ago when the commission announced it would extend its $10,000,000 park program to Long Island Sound, the New Rochelle Chamber of Commerce advocated that a public park be established on Glen Island. After several months of negotiations and despite protests from local residents, who contended the acquisition of Glen Island for a park would be beneficial solely to New Yorkers, especially those in the Bronx, the commission decided to take over the site.

It is understood the commission will further extend its program by acquiring Rye Beach, now used as a popular Summer amusement centre. Negotiations are said to be under way for this acquisition.

Why this big apple goes to market -

-and this little one stays home

When you buy a cake of branded soap or a can of beans you expect as a matter of course that the quality will always be the same. And it will. For the manufacturer long ago learned the selling value of a standard. The merest chip in a cake of soap, a slight variation from standard in flavor of the beans — and they are never offered to the public.

The farmer is beginning to appreciate the sales value of the standardized product. At last he realizes that the public wants and will pay for quality. Where formerly he bent his efforts to high yields, he is now concentering, individually and collectively, on high quality, grading his products for market, meeting the standards that pay profits.

Thus radically has the farmer's idea of his job changed. For generations indifferent or blinded to the mysteries of distribution, he now appreciates, as his manufacturing brother of the town, that market should control production, that production should be gauged to fit the market.

The Country Gentleman has shown him the way. It has brought to him the selling point of view, that market consciousness without which no industry can permanently prosper. Its readers are accordingly prosperous — farmers who are in business to make money, and who are making money.

SIKES CHAIRS

Office Easy Chairs

Here's Looking at the Year 1934

You will probably be fitting your office chair a trifle more snugly then. The little blonde stenographer will have long since married and another will be in her place. Jimmy, the office boy, may have graduated into the dignified chief clerk.

But—

If the chairs in your office today are Sikes Office EASY Chairs, I'd like to bet that the year 1934 will see those same chairs still doing business at the old stand. Maybe by that time you will decide to have them refinished. (You will sort of hate to give up such faithful old servants and you will never believe that a new chair—even a new Sikes—can be quite so comfortable.) Well, suppose you do have them refinished and do us out of a sale? So be it.

The point is: I don't know just how long a Sikes Chair will last. I should say after twelve years it might look a little careworn, but it would still be in its prime as far as service goes. "Sikes" are made to last.

But durability is only a detail. The real feature of Sikes Office EASY Chairs is their comfort. That is what makes them the choice of office executives who know that a comfortable chair makes the man or woman who sits in it more efficient.

St. Paul Lawyer Tells Electric Railway Men There Is No Danger of Communism.

NICKEL FARE IS ATTACKED

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 10.—In summarizing the "radical" situation in the Northwest at the annual convention of the American Electric Railway Association today on the Million Dollar Pier, Charles E. Elmquist, the St. Paul lawyer and former Chairman of the Federal Electric Railway Commission, said:

"The elections of Johnson and Shipstead in Minnesota have been misinterpreted. Minnesota has not turned 'Red.' It has not symptoms of communism. Property rights will be protected and human liberties preserved there.

"The supporters of Magnus Johnson will not wave the red flag or try to destroy our present form of government. No better class of citizens than those who voted for Johnson and Shipstead can be found any place. They embrace all classes, including wheat, corn and dairy farmers.

"They voted their belief that an honest, hard-working dentist and an honest, hard-working farmer, who had legislative experience in their own State, would be more apt to vote their convictions than a widely experienced lawyer, like Frank Kellogg."

Electric railways throughout the United States have made tremendous progress by adopting the chief recommendations of the commission, Mr. Elmquist said. Among them were suggestions that companies improve their service and be frank with the public and that the public give railways fair fares.

Signs of progress which Mr. Elmquist said he noted since the commission rendered its report in 1919 follow:

Three hundred companies now are using advertising, whereas only thirty were using it three years ago.

More than $350,000,000 have been expended for extensions and betterment of electric railways in the United States.

The five-cent fare has become practically extinct, services at cost franchises are being used in fifteen cities, and five States have placed their electric railways under public service commission.

There are 934 less miles of electric railways track in the United States than in 1919, but 1,500 additional miles of transportation service have been added in bus lines.

Mr. Elmquist urged the continued use of advertising and publicity by electric railways to tell their story to the public.

"The possibilities of going back to the pre-war basis of five-cent fare," said F. W. Doolittle of the North American Company, New York, "is as remote, apparently, as is the possibility of returning to the $5 pair of shoes, the five-cent cigar or the one-cent newspaper, and largely for the same reason."

NEGROES QUIT TOWN ON ORDER TO GET OUT

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 10.—A large number of negroes, known as "newcomers" in the Stowe Township section, left there today after they had been ordered to "get out" by a vigilance committee last night. Wagons and trucks, loaded with negroes, passed through McKees Rocks, a suburb, from the township during the morning. The situation was quiet.

Industrial plants in the region felt the effect of the exodus before noon. A majority of the negroes who left were employed in steel plants.

The Stowe Township police visited a hollow near the West Park district before daylight to investigate reports that cabins occupied by negroes had been stoned. When they arrived they found most of the cabins empty and the windows shattered. It was in this hollow that an aged white man was shot to death and his 11-year-old granddaughter assaulted and wounded by a negro last Saturday night. The assailant escaped. According to the police of the township, the action of the committee came as the result of the slaying.

Separating into small squads, the vigilance committee, which is said to have numbered more than 200 men, visited all the negro families and the several negro workers' camps in Stowe Township and quietly issued the warning for each negro to depart. Police estimate the number of negro residents of the township at between 400 and 500.

After completing their self-appointed task the leaders of the committee reported their action to the police authorities, the latter said. Police say that they were aware of what the committee was doing, but did not interfere, as there was no violence. The negroes received the order passively and soon after the word began to spread they deserted the streets.

BURIED ALIVE 90 MINUTES.

Builder Rescued From Under Tons of Sand by Squad of Firemen.

After being buried alive for more than an hour and a half beneath tons of sand that kept pouring onto his living tomb as fast as it was shoveled out, Sam Shell, 27 years old, of Springfield Boulevard and 113th Avenue, Springfield, was rescued by Captain Sheridan and six men from Hook and Ladder Company 160 of Hollis, little the worse for his experience.

Shell was working on the foundation of a house he is erecting for his family when sand, which had been piled high on the edge of the excavation, began to pour in on him. A neighbor telephoned for help. Men from the fire company worked for an hour and a half while his wife knelt on the edge of the excavation and prayed for his safety.

COOLIDGE ACCEPTS POST.

Mrs. Oliver Harriman, National President of the Camp Fire Girls, received a letter yesterday from President Coolidge accepting the post of Honorary President left vacant through the death of President Harding. Mr. Coolidge is the fourth President to hold the post, Chief Justice William Howard Taft and President Woodrow Wilson having accepted the honor.

In the letter President Coolidge said: "I accept with much pleasure your invitation to assume the post of Honorary President of the Camp Fire Girls. The organization is one in which I have always felt a very real interest because of its devotion to the best ideals of service to the individual, the community and the home."

Mrs. Harriman has written to Mrs. Coolidge inviting her to assume the Chairmanship of the National Advisory Council of the Camp Fire Girls.

One day at Gouverneur Morris's charming old Spanish home, in the heart of Monterey, he and Peter B. Kyne and I got to talking about men and women and like subjects, and Mr. Morris expressed the opinion that most men hate the women they love.

I asked him why.

"Because they have to lie to them to get along with them," he answered.

From that talk proceeded others which finally resulted in his taking a concrete example from life and molding it into a novel.

That novel is our leading feature this month

MUSIC

By H. C. COLLES.

The State Symphony Orchestra.

Josef Stransky, in command of the newly formed State Symphony Orchestra, began the season's orchestral music at Carnegie Hall last night with a program of accepted masterpieces. Wagner's prelude to The Mastersingers, Beethoven's Seventh Symphony, Richard Strauss's "Death and Transfiguration" and Debussy's prelude with the title "L'apres midi d'un faun" (which one is loath to translate into "The Afternoon of a Faun") gave rich opportunities for appreciating the qualities of the players. Tchaikovsky's "March Slav" completed the scheme, but it seemed excusable to leave with Debussy in the ears, for it was this which gave by far the happiest impression of the new orchestra.

Hans Richter, when he noted the meticulous care with which certain conductors marked their players' parts for special effects, said: "Give me my score and my players; that is enough." Richter, his sayings and still more his doings, were brought vividly to mind, by contrast, in the first part of this program, and a newcomer to New York may perhaps be excused for echoing this remark of his in connection not only with musical performance but with the task of criticism. Many of the audience must have been much more fully aware of all the circumstances which have brought this orchestra into being than I could be, and no doubt they were also much more familiar with Mr. Stransky's methods. The stranger who registers first impressions and attempts to record them immediately is unaware of most of the circumstances which have led up to this opening concert, but is therefore brought the more immediately face to face with the music itself.

Here was evidently an orchestra of entire competence, containing fine players, all exceedingly sensitive to the conductor's requirements. Yet the prelude to "The Mastersingers" was a shock from which the Beethoven Symphony did not help one to recover quickly. It has been said that there are two types of conductor, one which begins the prelude to "The Mastersingers" in the time in which he means to continue, the other which adjusts it after he has begun. Mr. Stransky is apparently the exponent of a third style, for he seemed purposely to avoid establishing a tempo at all. He was ready to slacken it at the first entry of the love-theme, to quicken it with every approach to a climax of tone, and climaxes were bewilderingly numerous. Elasticity is, we know, a great quality in musical interpretation, but there is a point at which the texture of the most flexible material will tear, and it was reached here.

The problem of the classics—and Wagner may be included with Beethoven in the classics of this program—is to find space for full expression within the limits of a certain rhythmic shape which is the composer's design. The ideal performance accepts the composer's conditions, and the interpreter works within them. Mr. Stransky seemed anxious to create conditions for the composers, and one felt that one was listening not so much to Wagner and Beethoven as to a rhapsody on their work by an artist of exuberant personality. With the later composers the case is not quite the same. Both Strauss and Debussy are in their different ways rhapsodic, and Strauss in "Death and Transfiguration" is impelled forward by a series of emotional climaxes of the kind which evidently appeal strongly to Mr. Stransky. There were many passages of beautiful detail in both these performances. Particularly may be named that passage in Strauss which is associated with the expiry of the sufferer before the final apotheosis of the main theme.

One cannot refrain from a special word of gratitude to the principal flautist for his exquisite phrasing of Debussy's wayward melody, but other members of the orchestra, particularly in the wood wind department, deserve gratitude here. It was in fact an evening of varied enjoyments and mixed feelings, an evening in which the impulse to vigorous dissent at one moment was followed by a surprised pleasure at the next, but not one to bring the supreme satisfaction which comes when a conductor with his score and his players is content to bring his audience face to face with masterpieces.

DUSE SAILS TO ACT HERE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 10.—Eleonora Duse, the famed Italian actress, sailed for America on the Olympic today. Seen for a short time in her train compartment at the Gare St. Lazare, the tragedienne would only say:

"It is only a small trip of a month on which I am starting. Life is hard for artists in our generation and circumstances imposed this month's work on me. I shall fight to the end."

During the past week Duse has been the most sought after woman in the French capital and the most evasive. She spent virtually all her time in her hotel with her daughter, receiving only a very few personal friends.

The great admiration which the French held for the great actress was increased when last season, after twenty years' absence from the stage, she went to London and had a successful engagement. Seats for all her performances there were sold out and people paid a guinea each for standing room. There is the most complete confidence among her Paris admirers that she will repeat her success in America.

MME. JERITZA ARRIVES.

Returns With Husband After Summer in Austria and Hungary.

Mme. Maria Jeritza, dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and her husband, Baron Popper, returned yesterday on the Majestic after spending the Summer in Austria and Hungary. Mme. Jeritza said that she had sung at concerts in Vienna and Budapest and had had to cancel contracts in Paris and London. She will sing in the opera "Fedora" for the first time at the Metropolitan Opera House, where she opens the season on Nov. 13 in Massenet's "Thais." Otto Weil, the Secretary of the Metropolitan Opera Company also was a passenger. Mrs. John McCormack, wife of the noted Irish ballad singer, and John Charles Thomas, American baritone, also returned on the Majestic.

Verbrugghen Series Closing.

The Verbrugghen Quartet, which is concluding tomorrow its venture of six chamber concerts in a dozen days, gave a matinee of but two numbers yesterday in Aeolian Hall. There could have been more devotees present than those who formed the midweek matinee assembly. It was of interest that the players gave Beethoven's "Grand Fugue," published as a separate opus, on this occasion as proper finish to the composer's posthumous quartet, Op. 130. They preceded the united work with Mozart's in G, dedicated to Haydn.

Century Opera Farewells.

Century opera farewells next week include a first "Secret of Susanne" and "Hansel and Gretel" at the Saturday matinee, Oct. 20, followed that night by a last "Aida." Repeated are a Monday "Rigoletto," Tuesday "Carmen," Wednesday "Trovatore," Thursday matinee "Butterfly," Thursday evening "Tosca," Friday "Cavalleria" and "Pagliacci." In the double bill last night there were newly cast as Santuzza, Gladys Axman, and as Lola, a newcomer, Grace Divine of Cincinnati.

Josef Hofmann Here for Tour.

Josef Hofmann, pianist, returned on the White Star liner Majestic after spending the Summer at his Summer home on the shores of Lake Geneva, Switzerland. He will make a short concert tour which starts at Baltimore on Oct. 16. His first New York recital will be at Carnegie Hall on Oct. 27. In the course of the season he said, he would play with the New York Symphony, the Philadelphia and Cleveland orchestras.

Russian Ballet in New Settings.

Serge Soudeikine's new canvases for the "Fairy Doll" ballet, done over in the fantastic Chauve Souris manner, shared time. Pavlowa's third change of bill at the Manhattan last evening with the garish Greek revival, "Dionysus," a scene made to appear two scenes by colored lights, red and green, devised by another Russian painter, Nicholas de Lipsky. Today's two performances will repeat the new "Russian Folklore" fantasy, while a single repetition is announced Saturday night for the realistic "Oriental Dances."

MUSIC NOTES.

The State Symphony Orchestra will have John McCormack as soloist at its second concert, on Dec. 19, when Josef Stransky will produce a novelty by an English composer, Frank Bridge's "The Sea."

Solomon Golub, unique in his use of Jewish folklore for his poems and songs, will give a Columbus Day recital at the Town Hall tomorrow evening, instead of afternoon, as announced.

THE PLAY

By JOHN CORBIN.

It is a reverential occasion to which Arthur Hopkins invites the art-loving public. The Hungarian title of this play by the author of "Liliom" and "Fashions for Men" is "Heavenly and Earthly Love." A young girl whose first passion has been blighted attempts suicide and, being rescued, goes mad, imagining herself an angel in Heaven. The fact that her kinsfolk still surround her she explains on the assumption that when they think of her on earth they are present with her in Heaven. Her mildly religious and passional insanity is disclosed in varied scenes. By and by a band of village children play the Christmas mystery of the Shepherds before her and then, being left alone for a moment, she essays an angel's flight from her tower window.

The occasion was, in fact, so reverential, so hushed with awe, that long stretches of the dialogue could not be heard, even in seats well forward. The audience was less reverential. Some folk whispered quite as audibly as the company spoke, while others divided their energies between hissing them and shouting "Louder!" to the actors. The critical impression was necessarily somewhat garbled and distorted. Possibly there was much more in the play than met the ear. That is one of the incidents of a performance so very awe-inspired, of acting so very repressed.

Certainly an impression prevailed that this play is less original than its predecessors, less illumined by racy human touches and inspired fantasy. One character, the wharf-rat who dragged Launzi out of the black waters of the Danube, had the true "Liliom" touch of low-lived and desperate humanity. And one of the scenes was highly original and dramatic.

Before her attempted suicide Launzi wrote to the amiable youth for whom she pined, asking him to come when she was dead and stand beside her. That tryst she determined to keep. With the connivance of an alienist and of her father, who still hopes for her recovery, a bier of white satin and silver lace is prepared, flanked by tall candles and mounted on a lofty dais of sable. The setting provided by Robert Edmund Jones is beautiful in the extreme. When the young man stands before her, Launzi is betrayed by her strangled weeping, and they embrace—to part again. This scene, as played by Pauline Lord and Saxon Kling, is genuinely dramatic, tenderly moving.

The rest of the play is notable rather for various echoes out of the past. If the device that makes Launzi's Heaven possible recalls Maeterlinck's Land of Memory in "The Blue Bird," the dialogue throughout, at least in the adaptation by Edna St. Vincent Millay, suggests the vague and wordy simplicity of Maeterlinck's early mysticism. The passional and religious trend of Launzi's insanity suggests the fevered dream world of "Intimate." Interest is not augmented by these comparisons. Or, possibly, it was a result of so much repression that the play seemed lukewarm and drab in comparison with masterpieces, Hauptmann and the previous plays of Ferenc Molnar.

The obstacle between Launzi and her love lay in the fact that the young man, though virtuous and soberly studious, naively conceived a consuming passion for Launzi's youthful mother, who had left her father to become the mistress and then the wife of an elderly man of wealth. The mother's part, both as written by Molnar and as played by Adrienne Morrison, was far more human and comprehensible than it may seem. But—except, perhaps, to the expert in morbid psychology—the rather messy situation measurably failed to chime in with the intended strain of reverential awe and heavenly love.

STRATEGY OF GIANTS AGAIN STOPS YANKS

SPEED IS DECIDING FACTOR

FRISCH HALTS FIRST DRIVE

There is a saying in the sporting world that class will tell. It told at the Yankee Stadium yesterday afternoon and the Giants beat the Yankees. The Giants won because they thought and played faster and took more chances—in short, because they showed more class. Speed was the deciding factor of the game—speed of hand, foot and brain. Three times when their chances hung in the balance the Giants rose to the emergency like the champions they are and with a dazzling play broke up and beat back the persistent attack of their opponents.

The first time the winners displayed this flash of baseball genius which has made them the greatest defensive team of recent years was in the fifth inning. The Giants were one run ahead, but Babe Ruth had just tripled and beaten Emil Meusel's throw to third by inches. There was only one out, and with Bob Meusel at bat the hopes of the Yankees ran high. Meusel hit and the ball started its flight to short right field. Frisch and Young went after it and Ruth turned back to third to wait the catch.

If Young could have got up to the ball it would have been suicidal for Ruth to try to score after the catch, but if Frisch was to take it he would have to do it with his back to the infield and completely out of position to throw. Thus Ruth reasoned and reasoned correctly.

Frisch made the catch with his face toward centre field and Babe broke for home. The run looked sure for the Yankees; but no run is sure against the Giants until it is across the plate. Frisch spun around and tossed the ball toward the plate with the same motion. He did not throw hard, but he did throw accurately and he threw as the outfielder throws, so that the ball would come to Snyder on the bound. Probably in no other way could he have retired the runner, for had he taken the time to set himself, Ruth would have been across the plate almost by the time he was rid of the ball. As it was, Ruth was caught two feet from the plate and it was a surprised Babe that bumped into the stone wall—Snyder—and rebounded like a rubber ball—not only down but out. It was a great play, but there was a greater one to come; and again it was Ruth who was one of the central figures in it.

Kelly's Throw Stops Rally.

Joe Bush opened the seventh inning with a single to centre. Witt flied out, but Dugan whipped a triple to right and Bush came racing home with the tying run. It looked as if the break had come. Ruth came up confident but anxious and shot the ball over first base on the bound and traveling like a rifle bullet. It seemed a sure hit, and Dugan started for the plate with what might have been the winning run; but again a Yankee base-runner was reckoning without the speed and daring of the opposition. Long George Kelly knocked the ball down, pounced on it like a cat and got his man at the plate, with time to spare. Once more a threatening rally was abruptly halted by speed.

The last of the crucial plays of the game occurred in the eighth. Pipp beat out a puny roller for a hit and took second on a passed ball. Then Ryan walked and Bush was wabbling badly, long as Pipp stayed on second a hit would put the Yankees ahead. Shrewd baseball judgment told the Giants that they must get Pipp off that base before the hit materialized, but how to do it was the question.

Pancho Snyder thought he saw a way. Perhaps he looked toward the Giants' bench and saw it there. Perhaps the thought was born and the plan made in his own mind. At any rate, he called for a pitch out, a wide ball that the batter could not reach. Pipp was not more than ten feet off second and must have felt himself perfectly safe. Here again speed became a factor. Snyder took the ball high, up close to his shoulder, where he could catch and throw with one motion. He did, and the ball was on its way to second before any one but Snyder and Bancroft knew what was happening. Pipp started back in hasty retreat, but too late. The ball beat him to the base and he was out, because he had been outguessed. Ward followed with a long single, the hit which the Giants' attack so often had feared, but it went for nothing, as did five other of the Yankees' twelve hits.

Giants Concentrate Attack.

The Yankees made the hits, but the Giants made the runs. It is a primary rule of baseball that one run across the plate is worth half a dozen on the bases. A concentrated attack is what counts. The Giants made four of their five runs in one inning. They made them by applying the same principles to offense with which they held the Yankees back on the defense—by being alert and taking chances.

So far there has been nothing said about McGraw, but if the plays which decided the contest were traced to their original source it would probably be found that John McGraw was responsible for them. He could not help Frisch, Kelly and Snyder field and throw, but he could and did teach them to think. It is an illuminating fact about McGraw that after thirty years in baseball he should be teaching a team to play not along a modern game, but the most modern, wide-awake chance-taking game in baseball.

There were those who said that McGraw had little to do with yesterday's victory—that the triumph of the National League team was mechanical, not strategical. They were wrong. Study the inning in which the Giants scored their runs. Kelly opened with a single and Gowdy was passed. Gowdy is a veteran and he is slowing up a little, but he is still fast enough to run for himself under ordinary circumstances. Gowdy catches Watson and Watson was making way for a pinch hitter. The catcher was through for the day anyhow and by replacing him with a younger man McGraw could get just a little bit more speed on the bases. So Maguire, a recruit, went in to run for Gowdy. Bentley batted for Watson and got a hit, filling the bases. Bentley is a slow man, so out he came, too, and Gearin, a pitcher just up from the minors, replaced him on the bases.

Confidence in Youngsters.

Some managers might have been afraid of what these youngsters would do in a pinch. Not McGraw. He knew exactly what they were going to do—just what he told them to. After Bancroft had forced Gearin at second, Kelly scoring on the play, Groh tripled and Maguire and Bancroft scored. Frisch singled and Groh scored. All through this short, sharp rally the Giants were hitting at the first ball. Once they have the opposing pitcher on the run they show no mercy, and Hoyt was certainly waving distress signals if a pitcher ever did.

The first inning that Bush pitched he gave signs of wildness, and the Giants immediately changed their tactics. They began to let the first ball go by, even if it cut the heart of the plate. These waiting tactics did them little good, for Bush soon settled down, and as soon as it was apparent that he had located the plate the Giants went back to their original principle of hitting the first ball.

So it was with McGraw and his team all afternoon, doing the unexpected and getting away with it, making the breaks and then taking full advantage of them. That was the way the champions were playing and that is why they are the champions.

That McGraw was very much in the game and that his direction and generalship played no small part in the outcome may also be discovered by a close study of the pitching. The voracious figures show that the Yankees got much the better pitching. Probably no man ever pitched so long in a world's series ball game and got by with so little as did Ryan, and why? Because on every pitch he had instructions. Ryan did not have to worry about how to pitch to Ruth or to any of the other Yankees. All he had to do was to follow instructions.

When Hendrick, a batter new to the Giants, was put in as a pinch hitter, Bancroft, the field captain, came clear across the infield to confer with McGraw. The Giants were willing to take chances, but they took no unnecessary ones, and when Bancroft had his instructions and Snyder and Ryan in turn had his, Hendrick flied out to centre. Ryan got lots of help in the field, but he got even more from the bench. His help on the field was brilliant but occasional, while his help from the bench was brilliant and constant.

The Huggins System Fails.

Turn from the Giants' pitching to that of the Yankees. Huggins, too, is an astute manager, but his system is entirely different from McGraw's. Under Huggins's system every player is captain of his bark and his fate is in his own hands. So when Hoyt developed a sudden and untimely case of over-confidence in the third he was allowed to let it go on unchecked until it had just about wrecked the ball game from an American League standpoint.

There is no way of judging except by his actions, but from those it seems reasonably certain that Hoyt thought the ball game as good as won when he ascended the mound in the third. Then almost before he realized it he had permitted a single and given a base on balls. He was in trouble, and a batter he had never pitched to before was at the plate. He had no one to turn to for help but Schang, no one to rely on but himself. He probably pitched wrong, and this pinch hitter, Bentley, got a Texas Leaguer which filled the bases and paved the way for the triple which knocked Hoyt off the mound and the Yankees into a cocked hat.

The Yankees played good enough ball from a mechanical standpoint, they hit well and often, but the alertness necessary to turn their hits into runs was lacking. They refused to try the unexpected. Pipp was guilty of no grave misplay when he was caught off second base. He was close enough to the bag to be playing the game according to Hoyle, but not wide awake enough to be playing it according to McGraw.

While the Yankees were in the lead they showed some willingness to take chances and an inclination, at least, to force the issue, but once they had fallen behind they went back to the old army game. An example of how their tactics changed with the complexion of the game may be given from the following:

In the second inning, with the Yankees one run to the good, Ward opened with a single, and Huggins, instead of ordering the conventional sacrifice, called for the hit and run and perfectly protected with the runner. This put two men in position to score, instead of one, and eventually both of them did. But what happened in the fourth, after the Giants had forged into the lead? Schang, the first man up, was passed, but this time instead of putting on the hit and run Huggins fell back on the sacrifice. At least, he tried to, but Scott got himself so deep in the hole by his repeated efforts to lay down a bunt that he finished up by striking out. There was still a chance for the hit and runs which had been so productive in the second, but Huggins held his peace, and when Bush doubled, Schang was standing flatfooted three feet from the base and had no chance to get any further than third on the play.

Double Play Checks Yanks.

Then the Giants got one of the many breaks that came to them in the course of the contest and they immediately turned it into a double play. Witt drove squarely at Ryan, the ball hitting the pitcher in the chest and falling at his feet. All he had to do was pick it up and Schang was trapped off third. Ryan ran him back to that base and tossed to Groh for the out, but one out on the play did not satisfy the fiery little third baseman. Bush was safe enough right there by his side, but there was the chance to head off Witt, who was making tracks for second, and a chance was what Stanley Harris asked. He snapped the ball to Frisch and the flying Witt was headed at second by the narrowest of margins.

Here again alertness, and this time by still another member of the McGraw machine, counted heavily in the balance. It was the same Groh who raced over behind Ryan, made a one-handed stab of a slow roller and got Bush at first by a step to begin the last half of the ninth inning, but this was a purely mechanical play. Groh had only one play in front of him and but one way in which to make it. Speed of hand and foot, not of brain, was needed. Plays of that sort are not peculiar to the Giants or to any other team. They occur wherever good ball players are found.

It is the other sort that is really great, the kind that Frisch, Snyder and Kelly made, and it is that kind that show the intangible but ever apparent class of the Giants. The things that McGraw's players say and the way they act on the field, as well as the things they do, make it felt.

"There it is," shouted Bancroft as a close one whizzed past a Yankee batter who had two strikes against him. Evans called it a ball, but the whole Giant infield had followed the pitch in just the same manner. There was a break in their favor to be had out of that pitch, they wanted it and were determined to get it if they could. It is that spirit and that determination to keep trying, whether in front or behind, that make for the thing that is known as class.

So far as yesterday's ball game is concerned class is what the Giants had and the Yankees lacked, and so a great ball team beat a good one.

MISS COLLETT ADVANCES.

Former Champion Among Survivors in Berthellyn Golf Tourney.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—Most of the favorites won their matches today in the first round of the women's golf tournament for the Berthellyn Cup at the Huntingdon Valley Country Club, the survivors including Mrs. Dorothy C. Hurd, Philadelphia, and Miss Glenna Collett, Providence, former national champions.

Miss Collett, who eliminated Mrs. E. E. Baker of Oakley, Mass., 8 and 6, also played brilliant golf. She also took only 39 strokes going out.

STADIUM CROWD A MELTING POT

GREAT THRONG IS NEUTRAL

The largest gathering ever assembled at a baseball game saw the first game of the world's series at the Yankee Stadium yesterday afternoon. Perhaps it was not the most notable for the distinguished persons who attended; perhaps it was not the most enthusiastic, but from the aspect of mere numbers it surpassed all previous figures for a single contest by several thousands.

Open spaces were discernible in the left field bleachers when Waite Hoyt cut the heart of the plate with the first strike but before the Giants had been retired in the first inning even these were filled.

The Yankee Stadium was a melting pot of humanity. Fans from far and near had come to see the struggle between the two champion baseball teams for the highest honors of the diamond. Western farmers and Eastern bankers, newsboys and college students, society women and shop girls, actors and athletes, rich and poor, old and young, all mingled together in the amphitheatre where the modern gladiators fought. Practically every State in the nation and several foreign countries were represented in the throngs, which began arriving in the early morning and continued streaming in even after the game had begun.

Celebrities Among Fans.

One gained an impression of those who are numbered among the "fans" of baseball when he saw John McCormack, the operatic and concert tenor; "Big Bill" Edwards, who played football at Princeton and kept the streets of New York clean for a season; United States Senator Copeland, who fought the "flu" and beat it for Father Knickerbocker; Tex Rickard, well known as an acquaintance of Jack Dempsey's; A. D. Lasker, a champion at chess; Richard E. Enright, guardian of Mayor Hylan's Police Force; Christy Mathewson, "Big Six," most famous pitcher in the annals of the Giants, and Johnny Evers, Connie Mack, Roger Bresnahan, George Stallings, Branch Rickey and other hitters and fielders of the horsehide, sitting elbow to elbow in the places of the select. Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis, ruler absolute in the domain of baseball, sat among them, flanked by President Byron Bancroft Johnson of the American League and President John Heydler of the National League.

The early arrivals had the treat of the inimitable antics of the diamond's greatest clown, Nick Altrock, and his partner, Al Schacht. These two stars of pantomime performed several stunts and put the crowd in good humor.

The circus was unnecessary, for the temperature was ideal. The sky was slighly overcast. Dark clothes were to be seen wherever the eye wandered and few bits of color brightened the banks of human bodies which mounted row on row. The eternal peanut, popcorn and program venders made their way up and down the aisles, shouting their wares. Blue-coated policemen were stationed at each entrance, but the crowd was orderly and well behaved. None seemed to be guilty of undue haste in his seat, barring those who rushed for the unreserved sections on general admittance tickets.

The "fans" were slow to warm up. Evidently the majority had not come to cheer wildly for any particular player, but to see a baseball game. Of course, there were Giant rooters and Yankee rooters, but most of the throng seemed to be satisfied that a New York team would carry off the world's title. A low rumble greeted Babe Ruth when he made his first play, and the outbreak increased in volume when Groh sent the first hit of the game to the outfield. But the real excitement did not come until the Giants staged their four-run rally in the fifth inning that perfectly set the Yankees' early lead. From that stage of the contest until the end the hum of excitement was heard on all sides, breaking into a roar as each team gained.

Babe Ruth Back in Favor.

"Babe" Ruth on his first appearance at the plate was greeted by a respectful silence, where last year he was jeered and booed from all sides. Evidently the hero of 1921, who fell from his pedestal, had regained his place in the mind of the baseball public. The cry to "knock" him over the fence for a home run when the great slugger took his place at the plate. They had come to think, apparently, of the Babe no longer as merely a home-run batter, but as a star who was working for his team. They did not howl in derision when he failed to hit safely in his first two appearances at bat. They evidently felt that he was doing his best, and took his outs as a matter of course. When Ruth sent out his triple in the fifth and put the Yankees in a position to tie the score, they rose to their feet and cheered lustily.

"Frankie" Frisch had the greatest individual ovation of the day. When he went to short right centre to pull down Meusel's fly, and then turned like a flash and whipped the ball to the plate in time to head off Ruth with the tying run, those in the stands would not stay quiet. When the Giants' second baseman came to the plate in the next inning they broke out anew in applause.

Not one of the thousands and thousands of feet left the battlefield before the end came. Even those experienced in plowing their way through normal baseball crowds, with all their jostling, stuck fast to their seats until the last man was out in the ninth. But then the stands poured forth their maelstrom and the spectators swirled across the diamond for half an hour on their way to the exits.

Even after the game had been decided in favor of the Giants few had sided with either team. Praise was distributed to both. No one seemed downcast that the Yankees had been defeated and no one seemed joyous at the victory of the Giants. It had been a great game to watch, and the crowd, as a whole, seemed satisfied that it had spent an afternoon of enjoyment.

GIANT TWIRLERS BUSIER.

(By Associated Press).

There were exactly 249 pitched balls in the opening game of the Giants-Yankees world's series, of which 133 were delivered by Giant twirlers and 116 by Yankee pitchers.

Analysis shows 94 of the 249 pitched balls were called balls by Umpire Evans; 80 were called strikes, 25 were foul strikes, 4 were fouls, 34 resulted in infield outs, 16 resulted in outfield outs and 20 were hit safely by the rival batsmen.

Watson of the Giants pitched thirty-eight balls in two innings. Fourteen were called balls, 11 called strikes, 4 foul strikes, 4 infield outs, 1 outfield out, 2 safe hits.

Ryan of the Giants pitched ninety-five balls in seven innings. Thirty-seven were called balls, 19 called strikes, 12 foul strikes, 3 fouls, 7 infield outs, 9 outfield outs, 8 safe hits.

Hoyt of the Yankees pitched thirty-three balls in two and one-third innings. Twelve were called balls, called strikes, 3 foul strikes, 1 foul, 4 infield outs, 2 outfield outs and 4 safe hits.

Bush of the Yankees pitched eighty-three balls in six and two-thirds innings. Thirty-one were called balls, 22 called strikes, 6 foul strikes, 5 fouls, 9 infield outs, 8 outfield outs and 4 safe hits.

ODDS NOW 7 TO 5 ON GIANTS TO WIN

Prices of 2 to 1 and 20 to 11 Also Quoted on Series, With McGraw's Club Favorite.

For the first time since it became a certainty that the Giants would meet the Yankees in the world's series of 1923 the National League champions have become the favorites in the betting. As a result of the Giants' victory in the first game of the series yesterday the McGrawmen have become the choice, with 7 to 5 appearing to be the prevailing price offered on them to win the series. There were indications last night that the Giant supporters would offer even more tempting odds to the Yankee rooters. The Yanks, however, remained slight favorites to win today's game at 6 to 5, although it is considered likely that this will be forced down to even money by game time.

Along Broadway in the vicinity of Times Square, where the Giants seem never to be wanting for supporters, even better than 7 to 5 was being offered on them to win the series last night. At Doyle's Billiard Academy odds were offered at 2 to 1 against the Yanks to whatever the series may be, or 11 to 20 against the Giants' chances. Even money was offered on today's game with plenty of Giant takers.

J. S. Fried & Co., 20 Broad Street, Wall Street, betting commissioners, are now quoting the Giants as favorites to win the series at 7 to 5. Even money is offered on the outcome of today's game. W. L. Darnell & Co., 44 Broad Street, announced that the odds now are 6 to 5 on the series, with the Giants the favorites, and that the odds are even for today's game.

Despite the fact that a rush of Giant money on the eve of the series had forced the odds on the Yankees down to even money, after they had been ruling as the choice at 7 to 5 and 6 to 5, the American leaguers again became the favorites in the hours preceding the first game yesterday. Yankee supporters apparently had been holding back in the hope of getting a better price during the time they had been quoted as favorites, and when Giant money began to loosen up at even money backers of the Huggins team were quick to act. Many bets were made on the Yanks to win the series and also the first game at 23 to 10. The odds closed at game time with the Yanks favored at 11 to 10.

Betting in general, however, is reported to have been extremely light on the series, with no indication that there will be any overwhelming show of money produced today. The expected last-minute flow of money was not in evidence, by some who keep themselves well informed on betting affairs, this is explained by the fact that many of the known big bettors on previous world's series games do not appear to be about. Only a few, it was said, showed themselves at the first game yesterday. Many of the bets made yesterday were small. The largest wager reported last night was one of $1,200 to $1,000 that the Yankees win today's game.

Several freak bets also were reported. One brokerage firm announced that a number of wagers had been made at 6 to 5 that the total of runs scored by both teams would be odd.

CUBS DEFEAT WHITE SOX.

National Leaguers Win First Game of Chicago Series, 8 to 4.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—The National League got off to a winning start in the Chicago city series today, when the Cubs defeated the White Sox, 8 to 4. Charley Robertson, the Sox starting pitcher, paved the way to the Cub's victory with a bad throw to the plate in the fourth, which allowed two Cub runs. Lyons replaced Robertson, but was hit hard.

TWO HOME CROWDS MAKE CHEERS RING

This is one series in which any rally is certain to bring response in the way of real rooting. Every Yankee rally was greeted with enthusiastic cheers and every Giant effort, defensively or offensively, was recognized by the Giant partisans. The Yankees were at home, but in this instance it was a case of two home crowds. The rooting seemed equally divided. When the Yankees tied the score in the seventh it appeared that the majority of the great throng was with the Yanks. But what a difference a few minutes make—with crowds. Just two innings later the gathering broke loose when Stengel drove a homer to the centre field fence. Then it seemed that the entire gathering was with the Giants. The world likes a winner and the Giants won. However, this is another day, and the Yanks say it looks like their afternoon.

McGraw did so much juggling with his players in the third inning that one fan called down to the Giant bench: "Hey, Mac, be easy. If you don't have any mercy on the Yanks, think of us."

There were a few vacancies in the huge stadium, but one spot that was not deserted was the press section. Correspondents were there from all parts of the country, and even a few foreign cities were represented.

There was a band in evidence, just as at all world's series. The musicians did their part before the game, serving to keep the bleacherites well entertained until the Giants went into action. Then McGraw and his men did the rest. It was a long wait from 10 until 2, and the musicians did all they could to make it pleasant.

At noon the big stands were about half filled, but the noon dinner whistles in the Bronx did not see any of them starting away involuntarily.

The hot-dog boys and the lemonade vendors were on the job. The boys with the sandwiches said that business was great, especially in the bleacher division. The patrons in the wide open spaces took no time out for lunch.

Ruth was kept just as busy before the game as he was during the battle itself. He obliged all the photographers and gave them some of his exclusive poses.

The camera men were well cooped. A hanging balcony was attached to the mezzanine tier on the first and third base sides and several dozen ambitious picture men shot about every move in the game.

Charley O'Leary, the Yankee coach, broke into the spotlight just ten minutes before the champions went into action. He was called to the plate, where he was presented with a traveling bag, the gift of his friends.

Nick Altrock and Al Schacht, versatile baseball comedians, are playing a return engagement here this Fall. They put on a version of the Dempsey and Firpo bout in a ten-foot ring. Schacht played the Firpo role and met the canvas often. Altrock did the Dempsey stunt and catapulted over the ropes. He returned to the ring unaided.

The Giants did much to make Schang's stay on the bases most unpleasant in the fourth inning. Snyder forced him to slide into first base twice on quick throws to Kelly. Again, when Schang reached third on Bush's double, Snyder almost caught him napping on a surprise toss to Groh. Again Schang did the sliding act to avert danger.

Former members of Boston clubs formed the batteries at the start of the game. Watson and Gowdy came to the Giants this year in a trade with the Braves. Hoyt and Schang at one time did battery work for the Red Sox. Bush, who relieved Hoyt, was a battery mate of Schang while a member of the Athletics and also with the Red Sox.

Commissioner Landis was among the early arrivals. He was at the Stadium shortly after 11 o'clock and mixed freely with the newspaper men in the press room before the game. He was recognized by many of the fans, and after the game a large crowd gathered in front of his box and greeted him with cheers.

McGraw did not appear on the field once during the battle. Coaches Hughie Jennings and Cozy Dolan, his aids, appeared for him on the side lines. McGraw directed his team's play from the bench.

STENGEL AND KELLY CLUBHOUSE HEROES

It Was a Great Game and Was Won by a Great Ball Club, He Says —Lauds Ryan's Work.

Casey Stengel and Big George Kelly! The names on the tongues of every one in that great crowd which witnessed the opening game of the world's series at the Yankee Stadium were likewise the names on the tongues of the victorious Giant clan as it trouped off the field, jumped aboard waiting automobiles and went racing to the clubhouse at the Polo Grounds, where the National League champions doffed their baseball togs and donned street attire.

To a man the Giant squad gave credit to the light-hearted young giant who covers first base and the genial, ever-smiling Stengel—the eccentric Casey. The praise of his fellow-players fell upon the ears of Kelly for what they recognized as the play which stopped the Yankees dead in their tracks—that never-to-be-forgotten lightning stop of Babe Ruth's vicious grounder in the seventh inning, and the accurate, bullet-like throw to Pancho Snyder at the plate, which cut down Joe Dugan at the rubber with what might otherwise have been the Yankees' fifth run.

On the ears of Stengel fell the unstinted praise of the rest of the squad for the blow which brought victory to the Giants in the ninth inning of that pulse-throbbing game which now is baseball history. It's one of Casey's traits that he refuses to be serious. Apparently he just simply cannot look seriously upon anything but a ball game, and even in the midst of diamond strife he finds something to laugh about. It is natural, therefore, that Stengel is popular. This popularity never was more emphatically attested than yesterday. Every man on the club expressed the one thought. "I don't know who I'd sooner see bust up that kind of a game with that kind of a wallop than Stengel."

Players Acclaim Stengel.

The players almost mobbed Stengel on the field when he raced over the plate on his thrilling home-run drive. This playful mobbing of Stengel was resumed in the clubhouse, where the rest of the team spent their time while waiting turns at the shower, pounding the backs of Stengel and Kelly in good-natured recognition of the part the two players took in this signal Giant victory. And Stengel and Kelly, each with becoming modesty, took the acclaim of their teammates in that matter-of-fact way which said eloquently, "It's all part of the day."

It was an interesting scene, this behind-the-curtain play of the conquerors, there was not a sign there was laughter. The squad acted like a bunch of school kids suddenly let loose for the Summer vacation. They were the victors and they made merry in their own way.

None was more pleased than Manager J. McGraw, the gray-haired, sturdily-built leader of this mechanically perfect baseball machine—this "master mind of the Giants." McGraw's keen baseball intellect, unexcelled in baseball circles, undoubtedly played an important part in the victory. As team leader of men he gave all credit to his players. McGraw proclaimed his admiration for Kelly and Stengel; he sang the praises of Frisch and Bancroft and Groh, and he lauded the pitching of Ryan, which, he said, was all that could be desired.

Now Watch Us, Says McGraw.

"It's the same thing," said McGraw. "We drew first blood. Now watch us. The team pulled through victorious in one of the best games I think I've ever seen. Nobody in that great crowd could leave the Stadium after the game and honestly say he or she was not thrilled, regardless of which team was favored by the individual. It was a great game and it was won by a great ball club. I guess the team showed itself superior as a machine, to the satisfaction of everybody. The series isn't over yet though. We're not going to let one victory affect our playing, except to increase our confidence. The players will be up on their toes, thinking and executing plays with the necessary precision as each situation arises.

"That play of Kelly's on Ruth's grounder in the seventh, and the throw with which he cut off a run at the plate, was one of the best plays ever seen on a ball field. To the Giants that play was the most important defensive move of the day. There's no telling what might have happened if that batter had scored. It was a marvelous piece of work. The home run by Stengel was a welcome drive in a game like that. Casey put everything he had into that swing. He hit a fast one squarely—'crossed it' as we say, for he's naturally a right fielder hitter—and he let himself out to the limit traveling around the bases.

"Frisch made a couple of dazzling plays. That catch and throw in the fifth which cut down Ruth at the plate was wonderful and that pick-up of Scott's groundер in the sixth was great. Then there was that play at second on Pipp by Bancroft in the eighth, when Banny blocked the bag and retired Pipp. Ryan's pitching was great, too. He showed great form.

"I don't know who I'll start tomorrow. It will be either McQuillan or Nehf. But that's a matter I don't generally give consideration until shortly before time to start play. I seldom ever decide on pitchers overnight."

Assistant Manager Hughie Jennings was another who declared Kelly's play in the seventh the best he had ever seen made, and Captain Bancroft and Frankie Frisch each chimed in with the expression that "it was a life-saver."

ZEV WORKS HARD FOR MATCH RACE

JARVIS WATCHES CLOSELY

It was the turn yesterday of the American representative in the $100,000 international match race to be held at Belmont Park on Oct. 20 to display his wares before an appreciative group of expert horsemen, trainers and clockers on the main track at Belmont Park. Trainer Hildreth asked Zev to go a mile and a quarter, paced by the four-year-old Little Chief, which was formerly in the Rancocas Stable, but which was sold last week, although still trained by Hildreth. Zev galloped impressively, covering the distance in 2:06 2-5.

Papyrus and Bar Gold later came out for their usual off-day light work. The English pair walked about on the main track and up the chute and then went over on the training track for a light warming-up canter. Another bit of walking followed and then the two went an easy six furlongs on the main track. It was so obviously a light canter that the American clockers did not dignify the work by holding their watches on the effort.

In view of his longer gallop the previous day Trainer Basil Jarvis did not ask anything serious of the Derby winner, but yesterday afternoon said that this morning he would send Papyrus a good gallop, possibly about a mile and a quarter, if the colt was in trim for it and conditions were right. He will possibly go the full distance of a mile and a half on Saturday, although it is hardly to be expected that he will be asked to go at his full pace.

It is expected that another large gallery of early birds will be on the rail to watch Papyrus work, Major August Belmont and H. K. Knapp, stewards of the Jockey Club, being among those who have signified their intentions of going to Belmont Park to watch the English visitor and his inseparable stable companion take their exercise. Never in the history of racing in this country have there been such large gatherings of spectators on hand to look over horses in their training gallops, indicating the widespread interest in the progress of the two principals in the great contest.

Jarvis Is Impressed.

While nothing much had been expected of Papyrus yesterday morning, another large crowd was on hand to watch Zev go the route on the main track. Among those on the rail were Trainer Basil Jarvis and Dr. Pride Jones. The man who has saddled Papyrus in all his works and races was much impressed with Zev's performance.

"It was a nice, level gallop," he said. "What I mean by that is that it was even all the way, one furlong not much different from another, but of course I had no watch on him."

Jarvis does not carry a stop watch nor does he use one in his training, but his estimate of Zev's work was evidence of his keen judgment of pace, as well as that of Sande in the saddle of the American horse. The clockers' figures show that Zev did run a "level race with one furlong not much different from another."

Zev's time for the first quarter was 0:23 2-5, the second quarter was done in 0:24 2-5, the third in 0:24 4-5, the fourth in 0:26 2-5 and the fifth in 0:27 2-5. The fractional times were as follows: 0:23 2-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:12 3-5, 1:39, 1:52 3-5 and 2:06 2-5. Zev was not all out at the finish, but Little Chief was under the whip to keep in touch with the American three-year-old champion.

It was an impressive move on the part of the American representative and caused a lot of favorable comment among those who witnessed it. It shows that Zev will be ready for the great race. The injured frog has healed, and Hildreth will have him at the top of his form on Oct. 20, for no trainer is more expert in bringing a horse to the post on a given date.

Zev has all his flashy early speed and horsemen commented on the difference in the manner in which he breaks from the barrier and the way Papyrus gets under way. It is a comparison that is hardly fair to the English visitor, who has not been asked for a speed trial. Jarvis said yesterday afternoon that Papyrus has speed enough at the start and can show it when it is necessary. Papyrus's trainer said that he will give Papyrus only one lesson with the American barrier, as that is all that is necessary. It will probably come next week after Donoghue arrives.

Needs Only One Trial

"Papyrus will need only one experience with the gate here," said Jarvis. "Your barrier is not much different from those we use at home. Perhaps it rises a little faster and I'm sure it goes up at a sharper angle. Ours goes away further from the horse, is what I mean. There is little difference in the methods of starting here and in England."

Jarvis is a keen trainer and a progressive one. He has seen Zev in action and has seen the clockings of the American representative's works. He knows that he breaks very fast from the barrier and it is to be expected that Papyrus will be given a chance before the date of the race to see what he can do in getting away at speed.

On the matter of changing the plates of the English colt, his trainer is still much in doubt. Papyrus is wearing the type of plates he wore at home and may continue with them.

"It is a trying problem," is the way Jarvis puts it. "One cannot do everything in a fortnight. The time is so very short that it is a question whether we would gain anything by a change. If I did put on American plates it still is a question whether there would be time to reach sound conclusions as to their benefit or otherwise. All American trainers have been wonderfully kind and helpful to me and have offered me all kinds of assistance and advice."

During the afternoon Trainer Jarvis and Dr. Pride-Jones paid another short visit to the Jamaica course. It is one of the few relaxations they have time to enjoy. While they have been deluged with invitations to all kinds of affairs, they have been able to go to the theatre only once since their arrival. What with the morning gallops and the afternoon walks and much other detail to fill in the time between there is little opportunity for social pleasures. They were back at Belmont Park in time to watch the two colts in their afternoon walk.

Steve Donoghue is now on the way here and his arrival will be eagerly awaited by the English trainer, as he wants to get in at least one good gallop with the boy who has had the mount in all his races in the saddle. A considerable party of English enthusiasts is expected on the Olympic to witness the international race.

Is Exceptional Jockey.

Donoghue is an exception among jockeys in many ways. He is the holder of the Golden Spurs, the gift of the Jockey Club for winning three Epsom Derbys in succession. He is coming to the United States at a great personal sacrifice, not the least of which is the loss of the opportunity to head the English list of winning jockeys for the ninth successive year.

The popular English jockey probably will not be troubled much by seasickness. He appears to have no troubles with his stomach and the question of diet is one that never gives him a moment's thought. In that he is a lot like Tod Sloan and can eat and drink whatever he wants whenever he likes, and he never has to train off fat to keep down to weight. Nature endowed him with a physique that to date is untouched by fatty growth and he is now thirty-eight years of age. He rides regularly at between 105 and 106 pounds and frequently has done as low as 103 pounds.

Donoghue has a great affection for Papyrus and there is an unusual bond of sympathy between the Derby winner and the premier jockey of England. The latter is a popular hero at home and "everybody" has a bit down when "our Steve" has the leg up. Youngsters hail him on the street as "Steve" and follow his movements like an American youngster trails Babe Ruth or Jack Dempsey. He goes everywhere—to the clubs, theatres, halls and dances. Thanks to his marvelous physique, he is always in shape to ride.

The English star is in sharp contrast to the man who will oppose him in the saddle on Zev. A comparative youngster of 25, Earl Sande is married and a great home body. He would rather be at home than anywhere else—quiet, and in every way a fine typical young American.

What effect rain will have on the race is an interesting point that cropped up in the discussion of the coming contest yesterday. Zev, as is well known, takes kindly to the mud. In fact, all tracks look alike to him. Papyrus, on the other hand, never has run in the mud, as all his racing has been done on turf courses. Whether a muddy track would bother him can be settled only by actual experience.

Tickets Going Fast.

Orders for ticket reservations are coming into the offices of the Jockey Club from all parts of the country and there will be spectators here from Canada, Cuba, England and the Continent. Major August Belmont, chairman of the Jockey Club, has invited the Governor-General of Canada to come here for the race. Lord Byng, like most Englishmen, is a great lover of racing and has done much to promote the interest of thoroughbred sport in Canada. He always attendeds the meetings at Toronto and is of course a daily attendant at Ottawa.

Practically all of the $22,000 reservations in the enclosure have been taken up and the reserved seats in the grandstand are going fast. It would not be surprising if all of the seats in the grandstand would be sold as reserved seats before the day of the race.

Provided the weather is fair the infield at Belmont Park on race day will present a spectacle unparalleled in the history of racing on this side of the water. A huge enclosure in the middle of the infield—practically two furlongs square—has been railed off, and to this enclosure the public will be admitted at the nominal charge of $1.50. This will be efficiently patrolled by police, both mounted and on foot, to prevent the crowd getting onto the track and in danger of injury. It will also be policed inside the rail to insure order.

On the day of the race there will be refreshment booths, comfort stations and everything that can be provided for the pleasure of those who will come early for choice positions along the homestretch rail, where start and finish of the big race can be witnessed to the best advantage.

As at Epsom Downs on Derby Day, it is anticipated that parties will make a holiday of it, bringing box luncheons for a picnic on the turf. The forehanded ones will bring camp stools or folding chairs. It is certain to prove a picturesque and colorful sight, as strange to the habitual American racegoers as a race course will be a novelty to many who will go to one for the first time.

Papyrus will not lack for loyal followers to cheer him home. The international race is the topic of conversation wherever Englishmen gather, and almost every Englishman knows something of thoroughbred sport. Every one who can get away will be on hand and all of them will have a shilling or a pound on the Derby winner, as their funds permit.

There has been little real wagering on the contest as yet. Layers of odds yesterday remarked that it was a little too early to make quotations. They all want to know more about Papyrus in the matter of speed. They know that he can go a route from his English racing, but they are a canny lot and prefer to learn what the clockers record after a real trial.

"Wait until Papyrus has a real workout, say Saturday or next Tuesday," said one on the lawn at the Jamaica course yesterday afternoon. "Then we will be able to judge more clearly what he will be able to do on an American track. After a real show of speed there will be plenty of time to talk prices."

DONOGHUE SETS SAIL FOR MATCH RACE HERE

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Steve Donoghue sailed today on the Olympic to join Papyrus. He was given a great sendoff at the Waterloo station, where a crowd of men and women, most of whom he had never seen before, fought its way to the platform and nearly crushed him to death as the enthusiasts struggled to shake his hand or pat his back.

His small daughter, Kathleen, and his two boys, Patrick and Joe, accompanied him as far as Southampton and the whole party was laden with all manner of mascots from white heather to black cats as they made their way to their carriage. Asked for a tip, Donoghue replied, "Stand by your own country and I don't think you will be far wrong."

Then he added with a smile, "Of course, if you want to be absolutely safe, back Papyrus both ways. I shall ride in the purple and yellow cross belts of Ben Irish, but I shall be out for the honor and prestige of the Union Jack. I have all my own racing gear with me, saddles, cloths, stirrups, &c., and for three days before the race I shall put Papyrus through his paces on a dirt track. I have never ridden over a dirt track before, but I know sand tracks in France and I do not think Papyrus should be handicapped in any way provided he is in good fettle. Personally, I am fairly confident."

GIANTS VICTORS, 5-4; 58,000 SEE GAME

der, and this blundering bit of business cost the Yanks their chance to tie and perhaps win the game. Ward followed immediately with a single that would have scored Pipp if he hadn't been on the bench thinking it over regretfully. In the fourth Whitey Witt was caught in a Giant trap and doubled up at second. That ended a promising rally which started with Yankee runners on second and third and only one man out.

Resource Vs. Remissness.

Where there was Yankee remissness there was Giant shrewdness and resourcefulness. The defensive plays of the McGraw men came almost in every inning—a catch and a throw of Frisch to double Ruth at the plate in the fifth; Kelly's stop and lightning throw to the plate in the seventh; Snyder's strategy in catching Pipp off base in the eighth; a gloved-hand stop by the amazing Groh in the ninth; Frisch's play on Scott to stop a rally in the sixth, and the double play which Ryan started and Groh and Bancroft finished at the expense of Witt in the fourth.

As fine a play as ever graced a World's Series was that made by Kelly in the seventh. Going into the inning, the Yankees were a run behind and still clawing away at Ryan and the defense behind him. Bush opened with a single, his second hit, but Irish Meusel ran in for Witt's short fly to make one out. Denied for four innings, the American Leaguers finally broke through at this point, Dugan driving a liner to right which got past Young and rolled to the fence for three bases. The Giants' right fielder played the ball badly and made three or four stabs before he got his hands on it. By that time Bush was over the plate and the Yanks had the winning run on third.

With Ruth at the plate it looked like the breaking point of the game. The Babe had hit a triple to left on his last previous appearance and this time he smashed a ball over first base that seemed to be too hot and too fast for any human being to get near.

Kelly Foils Ruth Smash.

Kelly, rushing over in the path of the ball, broke it down, which was a marvel in itself. With his back to the plate the first baseman snatched up the ball, turned and threw—threw a ball that sped like a bullet to the plate. Kelly, it seemed, scarcely had time to see what he was doing, but his throw was both powerful and true and Dugan was caught by several feet. Fast playing and faster thinking had turned a potential hit for Ruth into an out that hurt the Yankees badly.

Ruth also figured in another great Giant play of the afternoon. With one out in the fifth the slugger, choking his bat and shortening his swing, hit one of McGraw's typical slow balls inside third base and out to the bleacher wall for three bases. The Yanks were still one run behind at the time and on the next play, a high fly by Meusel behind second base, Ruth gambled and broke for the plate the instant the ball was caught.

This was smart baseball and might have worked, except for the fact that Frisch, after making a spectacular twisting catch in short right field, turned so swiftly and threw so accurately that Ruth was still far from the plate when the ball reached there. Another runner, perhaps, would have made the best of it and tried to slide, but Ruth spurned deception and tried brute force. He went into Snyder, the catcher, with the force of a football tackler, and when the two heavy bodies came together it was a case of the irresistible meeting the immovable. In this instance the irresistible moved, and Ruth, instead of knocking Snyder away from the plate, caromed off, shot through the air and landed squarely on his side several feet away.

It was such incidents as these that made this game unique. From the beginning the play was fast and furious and the hitting hard. Two pitchers were knocked out of the box before the contest had gone three innings, and when a fresh relay of twirlers had been rushed in the game settled down to a dogged attack by the Yanks on one side and inspired defensive play by the Giants on the other.

McGraw Tells to Fool Ruth.

Even the "master mind" of John J. McGraw couldn't save the pitching of Watson from a just and deserved fate. For that matter, the Giants' Little Napoleon is rated the worst of his first joust with Babe Ruth. At the start it was evident that here was a different Ruth from the home-run hitter of 1927. Confident that the Yankee star would again be overanxious to hit, McGraw gave orders that bad balls should be the "Babe's" portion. But Ruth wouldn't "bite" at high ones and wide ones and he spurned the inside curves that fooled him so badly last October. When Watson and Ryan threw slow balls in his direction, Ruth shortened his swing and hit them to left field, as a natural hitter would do. His first three drives were all aimed for the left field sector. Groh grabbed his grounder in the first and forced Dugan at second in the opening round. Irish Meusel caught his high fly in the third, and the triple that the Bambino delivered in the fifth was over third base. In the seventh, however, he smashed the ball toward first base and what Kelly did with this really terrific drive has already been described.

Although the crowd was the largest on record, the traditional enthusiasm that precedes a world's series opening game was noticeably lacking. Up to the moment that the umpires appeared on the field just before 2 o'clock and the teams began getting ready it had been a quiet and almost sombre crowd; after 2 o'clock it couldn't be quiet and sombre if it wanted to. The usual ceremonies before the game aroused no excitement, and not even the ritual of throwing out the first ball was observed by Commissioner Landis, who sat in a field box near the Yankee bench and ruled everything he surveyed.

Up to 1 o'clock it looked like an ordinary day at the Yankee Stadium. The bleachers were nearly filled by the early rush of fans at 10 A. M. and the mezzanine unreserved seats were nearly all taken. But in the first and third tiers it looked like a contest between the Phillies and the Braves, and outside the park there was a surprising absence of spectators in front of the ticket windows.

Even during the rush after 1 o'clock the police had an easier time of it than they have on Sundays during the season. The fact that some 25,000 people had already bought their reserved seats and did not need to hasten to the park and stand in line relieved the outside congestion, although the task of getting the big crowd out of the arena and into subway and elevated lines after the game was more than a day's work for the police.

Watson Easy for Yanks.

When the teams began infield practice at 1:30 all sections of the stand were well filled and more "fans" were pouring in with every click of the turnstile. The warm weather brought out more admirers than even the Yankee generals had expected, but there was no confusion or disorder.

Before the game Ruth posed with McGraw in a series of pictures, and then John J. retired to the seclusion of the bench, not to be seen again that day. An army of photographers swarmed over the field and snapped everybody in sight. The Giants moved around in their discreet, gray visiting uniforms, and the Yankees, as the home team, were in white. The umpires conferred impressively with Captain Bancroft and Manager Huggins. All of this was the good old traditional world's series "stuff," but somehow the crowd seemed weary of it and eager to see the game start.

Huggins sent only Waite Hoyt, the Flatbush youngster, out to warm up, but McGraw had Arthur Nehf and Watson in action, and it was not until five minutes before game time that the Giant leader decided on the stolid, phlegmatic righthander, whom he got from Boston in a trade this Summer, the same athlete whom he fined $500 and suspended for the balance of the season only a few weeks ago because of alleged strayings from the straight and narrow path of team discipline.

In this choice McGraw handed to the experts their first upset of the series, for all the wise men had agreed that Nehf would be the man to face the Yankees first. McGraw may have acted on a "hunch" or he may have calculated that Solemn John, impassive, cool and unconcerned, was the better man for the hard test of that first game.

In any case, Watson proved to be the easiest mark the Yanks have had to shoot at since Fred Toney faced them twice and was batted out twice in the 1921 series. The solemn one had his cool disposition, but little else, and against him the Yanks launched an attack so swift that it took the "fans" breath away.

But before this happened the Giants had taken a shot at Hoyt and produced nothing in the form of a run. Bancroft flied out to Ruth for the first putout, but Heinie Groh, swinging his quaint-looking "bottle bat," slapped a single to centre, repeating what he had done in last year's opener. Frisch forced the little third baseman, but was out by feet trying to steal second on Schang.

Then the Yankees, Witt lined solidly to Bancroft, but Watson walked Dugan and brought Ruth up for the first time. At the sight of him there was a roar of expectation from the crowd. Here was the Babe again, the new Babe, who hit more than .350 this season, won the most valuable player prize in the league and made a notable comeback in hitting, throwing, fielding, running bases and inspiring his teammates.

Ruth hit the second ball which Watson tossed to him, and although Groh fumbled the fast grounder he recovered in time to force Dugan at second. Two out now, but Bob Meusel sliced a two-bagger to centre, Stengel fumbled slightly and Ruth raced home with a run.

Encouraged by this beginning, the American League champions turned another broadside on Watson in the second inning and scored two more runs. Ward singled to left, Schang to centre and Everett Scott advanced the two of them with a sacrifice bunt. Settling down, Watson got Hoyt on strikes, but Witt singled to centre and the runs came over.

Hoyt Kills Yankees' Chance.

So the Giants went into the third inning three behind and facing Hoyt, the puzzling right-hander who held them to no earned runs in twenty-seven innings of the 1921 classic. That Hoyt would falter with a three-run lead was an unthinkable thing. Not even the vaunted batting power and fighting spirit of the Giants seemed able to redeem this bad start.

But falter was just what Hoyt did in the third inning. Scarcely had the Yanks finished scoring their third big run before Hoyt began to throw away his opportunity. Kelly, first to face him in the inning, singled handsomely to centre and Hoyt was so disturbed by this that he walked Gowdy, admitting Kelly to second.

Now McGraw called on a pinch hitter for the batsed Watson, and Jack Bentley, the erstwhile "Babe Ruth" of Baltimore and the International League, came to the plate. Fouling off a few for practice sake, Bentley dropped a single in short centre, Witt being so far out that he could not get up to the ball.

This filled the bases with none out, and Hoyt was going fast. McGraw rushed in more of his reserves. Maguire was already on second as pinch runner for Gowdy, and "Dinty" Gearin, the pint-size recruit left-hander, was sent to first base to run for Bentley. When Bancroft hit to Scott and forced Gearin at second, Kelly slipped over with the first Giant run.

Hoyt was still in a tight hole, knew it and was very nervous. On the first pitch to Groh he took a full wind-up, a baseball faux pas that would shame the veriest rookie. Bancroft took advantage of the interim to steal second unmolested, and Hoyt, pitching badly to Groh, pitched one in the groove to the third baseman. Heinie drove it sharply just inside first base and along the foul line to the right field stand.

Aside from Stengel's homer, this was the hit of the game. It sent Maguire and Bancroft in with the tying runs, and Groh made three bases and got into a position to score when Ruth, overanxious, let the ball roll past him and further into right field.

Hoyt was relieved at this juncture, and with the stands in an uproar Bush came in to salvage what he could. He faced Frisch first and the flash from Fordham hit a grounder which Pipp, with his weak ankle, couldn't stop, and let roll for a single to right. Groh scored and put the Giants ahead.

It was now Ryan against Bush, and the story of the remaining innings is that of the most remarkable defense that any World's Series team ever made behind a weak pitcher. While Bush was allowing only three hits in six innings, Ryan was in distress for nearly every session. He got through the third by fanning Ward for the third out. But Schang walked to start the fourth inning and Bush doubled to left after Scott had fanned, putting Schang on third.

Yanks' Old Failing Seen.

The Yanks know how to get men on bases and nothing about getting them over the plate, where they count runs. The old failing cropped up again at this point. Witt grounded directly to Ryan, and Schang was trapped between home and third. Ryan wisely chased him back to third, and so fast was the Giants' run-down work that after Groh had tagged Schang he was able to throw to Frisch and nail Witt, who was striving earnestly for second. How the Yankee partisans did groan!

Ruth's triple, Frisch's startling catch and the subsequent doubling of "Babe" at the plate came in the fifth and pulled Ryan out of another dangerous situation. With two out in the sixth Schang hit to right and beat Young's throw to second although Frisch objected angrily to Nallin's decision. Scott made a bid for a hit, but Frisch, still brooding over the decision, skipped over to his left and made a pretty stop for an out at first.

When Bush began the seventh with a single to centre it looked as if retribution was finally to overtake Bill Ryan. The Giants, after all, were only human, and the task of keeping this pitcher on two feet was beginning now to become something superhuman. When the dam begins to burst you can keep the water back for just so long, and the Giant dam, it seemed, surely had burst. The Yanks poured over Ryan. After Bush's single and Witt's out come Dugan's three-bagger, and the score was tied. The Yanks had gained one objective, and they would have gained another if Kelly, with his magical stop and his powerful throw, had not converted Ruth's potential single into a put-out at the plate.

But even this play—undoubtedly the finest of the game—did not stem the determined Yanks. They returned in the eighth, and after Pipp had dribbled a puny single along the first-base line Ryan went up and uncorked a wild pitch that advanced Pipp to second. With Ward at the plate trying to sacrifice, Pipp took too big a lead off second and as quick as a flash Snyder threw to Bancroft and Dave blocked the Yankee off the bag and plastered the ball against him.

Nothing less than tragedy itself, this piece of base running. As if to show what might have been, Ward lined a single to left that would have scored Pipp easily. It was too late. Schang's grounder to Ryan moved Ward to second, and Huggins sent Harvey Hendrick, a recruit, to bat for the veteran Scott. Bancroft ran in to the bench in this emergency, got words of wisdom from McGraw and then told the other Giants how to deal with this new hitter. Hendrick raised an easy fly to Stengel, and the inning ended.

Thrill in Ninth Inning.

With a murky haze over the park, Bush's fast ball had the Giants baffled from the fourth inning on. Only one man had got as far as second, this being Young in the sixth on a walk and Schang's wild throw to first base. Stengel opened the seventh with a single to right, but Kelly hit into a double play, Bancroft singled with one out in the eighth and reached second on Groh's grounder, which Dugan snapped up cleverly and ferried to first, but the Giant Captain was stranded when Frisch filed to Witt.

The ninth looked like any other Giant inning, but with two out Bush became careless and pitched to Stengel a ball waist high and through the plate. What happened is now history.

There was one thrill left to be plied on the thrills that had gone before. As the Yankees half of the inning opened Bush splashed a little grounder between the pitcher's box and third base. Ryan stabbed at it and missed, but Groh, crossing over, scooped the ball with his glove and from an awkward position made a throw that beat Bush to first by the margin of a hair. Bush disagreed with the verdict of Frank O'Day, the umpire, and was put out of the game for arguing—an incident that escaped most of the spectators in the excitement.

Following that, Witt flied out to Cunningham and Dugan did the same to Meusel.

The Yanks trudged to the clubhouse, and what they thought on that walk and what they are thinking this morning may make or break them in the series. If they feel that their job is hopeless, the Giants will have an easy time this year as they had last. If the Yanks, on the other hand, should come back aggressively the series may go its full limit of seven games before the title is decided.

Without doubt the Giants enjoy a psychological advantage this morning. They have beaten the Yankees now eight straight times and they feel the confidence that goes with success. They proved another thing to themselves yesterday—that even without good pitching they can win because of their superb defense and the timeliness of their attack. McGraw's men are always keen to follow up an opening, and if they feel that they have the upper hand they will be hard to beat.

On the other hand the Yankees hit better than they did in the two previous series. Babe Ruth was not stopped by the opposing pitchers and the Giant pitching was extremely weak. There may be good omen in this, but there also may be discouragement in the fact that, although Ruth was hitting, his team did not win. The Yankees' play was everything but inspired and their lack of decisive punch and their stupidity on the base lines heartened the followers of the Giants.

What Babe Ruth Did at Bat In First World's Series Game

First inning—One out, one on base. One strike (called). Two strikes (swung). Ball one. Hit to Groh and forced Dugan at second, reaching first safely. He scored from first on Meusel's double.

Third inning—None out, none on base. Ball one. Ball two. Strike one (foul). He flied to Meusel.

Fifth inning—One out, none on base. Hit first ball pitched to left for a triple. Out at plate when he tried to score after Frisch caught Meusel's short fly.

Seventh inning—One out; one on base. Strike one (foul). Ball one. Hit to Kelly back of first base and was safe on a fielder's choice, Kelly's throw catching Dugan at plate.

First Inning.

GIANTS—Hoyt shot a called strike over the plate to Bancroft. The next pitch was called a ball and Bancroft then flied out to Ruth in right field. Heinie Groh hit the first pitched ball to the left of second base for a clean single to center. Frisch forced Groh at second on a grounder to Everett Scott, Ward taking the throw. Frisch tried to steal second a moment later but Schang threw him out easily. Ward took the catcher's throw at second. One hit. No runs.

YANKEES — Witt, the Yanks' first batter, hit the second ball and lined to Bancroft. After the count had reached three balls and two strikes on Dugan, Watson walked the Yankee third baseman. Ruth drove a hard grounder to Groh, who fumbled the ball momentarily but recovered it in time to catch Dugan at second, Bancroft taking the throw. Bob Meusel doubled to center and Ruth scored with the Yankees' first run. Pipp then flied to Irish Meusel for the third out. One hit. One run.

Second Inning.

GIANTS — Young went out on a grounder to Dugan. Irish Meusel was retired on an easy foul fly to Pipp. Stengel drove a long fly to the right field corner of the park, but Ruth got under it in time to make the putout. No hits. No runs.

YANKEES—Ward led off by hitting the first ball for a single to left field. Schang followed with a clean single to center, Ward pulling up at second. Scott bunted along the first base line and Kelly made the putout unassisted, Ward taking third and Schang reaching second. Hoyt struck out, but Witt singled over second base, scoring Ward and Schang. Watson tossed out Dugan on a roller to the box. Three hits. Two runs.

Third Inning.

GIANTS—Kelly hit the first ball for a single to centre. Gowdy walked, Kelly moving to second. Fred Maguire was sent in to run for Gowdy and Jack Bentley was put in to bat for Watson. Bentley hit a short fly to centre which fell safe for a single. Kelly, who had waited to see whether the ball would be caught, stopped at third. Gearin was then sent in to run for Bentley. Bancroft hit to Scott, who threw to Ward, catching Gearin at second. Kelly scored while the play was in progress. Bancroft stole on the first pitched ball as Hoyt wound up. Groh hit just inside of first base and the ball got by Ruth and went for three bases, Maguire and Bancroft scoring. Bush replaced Hoyt on the mound for the Yankees at this point and Frisch drove Groh in with the run that put the Giants in the lead by hitting a single along the right field foul line. Young forced Frisch on a grounder to Scott. Young just beat Ward's throw to first as the latter tried to complete a double play. Young tried to take second on a short passed ball, but was out, Schang to Scott. Four hits. Four runs.

YANKEES—Bill Ryan and Frank Snyder went in as the Giants' battery. Ruth went out on a long, high fly to Irish Meusel in left centre. Bob Meusel filed to Stengel. Pipp beat out a slow infield roller past Ryan. Ward struck out. One hit. No runs.

Fourth Inning.

GIANTS—Scott tossed out Irish Meusel. After fouling off half a dozen balls Stengel drew a pass. Kelly hit into a double play, Scott to Ward to Pipp. No hits. No runs.

YANKEES—Schang drew a pass and Scott struck out. Bush hit a two-bagger along the left field foul line, putting Schang on third. Witt hit to Ryan, who chased Schang back toward third. The Giants' pitcher threw to Groh and the latter made the put-out. Bush reached third on the play. In the meantime Witt was sprinting toward second, but Groh threw him out on a close play, Frisch making the put-out. One hit. No runs.

Fifth Inning.

GIANTS—Snyder flied out to Witt. Ryan fanned. Bancroft also was out on a fly to Witt. No hits. No runs.

YANKEES—Dugan flied out to Irish Meusel. Ruth choked his bat and hit along the left field foul line for three bases. He was safe at third on a close play. Frisch ran into short right field and made a great catch of Bob Meusel's fly. The Giants' second baseman wheeled around and cut down Ruth at the plate with a perfect throw as the latter tried to score after the catch. One hit. No runs.

Sixth Inning.

GIANTS—Bush deflected Groh's drive toward Ward and the latter tossed out the batter. Frisch died on a fly to Ruth. Young walked and took second a moment later when Schang threw to the outfield in attempting to pick him off first base. Irish Meusel was retired on a grounder to Bush. No hits. No runs.

YANKEES—Pipp went out on a grounder to Kelly, Ryan taking the throw at first base. Ward flied to Irish Meusel. Schang hit along the right field foul line and barely beat Young's straight throw to second base. Frisch made a splendid stop of Scott's grounder toward first base and tossed out the batter. One hit. No runs.

Seventh Inning.

GIANTS—Stengel lined a single to the right field corner of the park. Kelly hit into a double play for the second time, Scott to Ward to Pipp. Snyder struck out. One hit. No runs.

YANKEES—Bush hit a clean single to centre. Witt went out on a fly to Irish Meusel. Dugan hit to Young's right for three bases, scoring Bush with the tying run. Kelly made a marvelous stop of Ruth's hard smash along the first base foul line and then cut down Dugan at the plate with a great throw to Snyder. Bob Meusel went out on a fly to Young. Two hits. One run.

Eighth Inning.

GIANTS—Ryan went out on a fly to Witt. Bancroft singled past Ward to right field. Dugan made a good stop of Groh's grounder toward short and threw out the batter, Bancroft reaching second. Frisch was retired on a fly to Witt. One hit. No runs.

YANKEES—Pipp rolled one along the first-base foul line and beat Snyder's throw to Kelly. Pipp reached second on a wild pitch, but on the next pitched ball Snyder picked him off second with a fine throw to Bancroft. Ward singled to centre and took second while Ryan was tossing out Schang. Harvey Hendrick, who was sent in to bat for Scott, went out on a fly to Stengel. Two hits. No runs.

Ninth Inning.

GIANTS—Young lined out to Witt. Dugan tossed out Irish Meusel. Stengel hit a home run between Witt and Bob Meusel to deep left centre. Meusel relayed Witt's throw to the plate, but Stengel was safe easily. Kelly went out on a grounder to Johnson, who took Scott's place at shortstop for the Yankees. One hit. One run.

YANKEES—Cunningham was sent in to play centre field for the Giants. Groh made a fine pick-up of Bush's bounder and tossed out the batter. Witt flied to Cunningham. Dugan lifted a fly to Irish Meusel for the last out of the game. No hits. No runs.

FIRM FRIEND FIRST IN GOWANUS STAKES

MAD PLAY IN GOOD FORM

August Belmont's three-year-old chestnut gelding Osprey, by Fair Play and Olympia, showed that he has developed into a fast sprinter by defeating Avisack in the Boston Handicap over the six-furlong course at the Jamaica track yesterday in 1:12 flat. The race was for all ages, and brought four of the original entries to the post, Galantman and Satellite being scratched.

Osprey and Avisack, which is a three-year-old filly by Jack Atkin and Avis, had met on the first day of the Jamaica meeting. On that occasion Osprey carried 117 pounds and Avisack 124, the former being returned the winner. Sande then had to ride the gelding out to beat Avisack by a length and a half in 1:11 3-5. Yesterday Osprey picked up eight pounds more and won handily from the filly by two and one-half lengths. Avisack had to be ridden out by Turner to finish second, a length and a half ahead of Humorette, the outsider in the betting.

Sande rode a well-judged race on the Belmont gelding. H. P. Whitney's Fly by Day got off in front, but quickly gave way to Avisack, which held a commanding lead up to the last sixteenth. Osprey was rated along in third place and did not begin to make a move to reach Avisack and Fly by Day until the turn into the stretch. At this point Sande sawed ground by coming through next to the rail and eventually winning in hand. Osprey was the fourth favorite of the day to reward the talent.

M. Fator showed good form in piloting two winners. He rode Firm Friend to victory in the Gowanus Selling Stakes and Mad Play, brother of Mad Hatter, into first place in the five-and-a-half furlong dash for two-year-olds. Fator had very little margin at the finish in either race, Firm Friend winning by only three-quarters of a length from Wynnewood, and Mad Play by only half a length from Gypsy King. Fator got his mounts home first only through careful, patient riding.

In the field of nine in the race for two-year-olds Mad Play got off fourth and Gypsy King sixth, G. Kummer having the mount on the latter. Nellie Gray was off first, with Blissful second, Sun Maiden third and Dazzler fifth. Both Gypsy King and Dazzler were badly interfered with at the far turn, but they came fast when cleared and closed strongly with Mad Play, Fator's good work holding his mount in front after taking the lead coming into the stretch. The three finished less than a length apart, Mad Play getting the verdict by half a length and Gypsy King beating Dazzler for the place by a head. For interference in this race T. McTaggart was suspended for three days. Bagiet, which was coupled with Mad Play as the Rancocas entry, finished fifth.

Adoption of Naval Treaty Gives Middies New Stadium

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 10.—Making use of steel which was to go into a number of warships, projected but not built on account of the naval treaty, a stadium is to be erected on Farragut Field, the Naval Academy football grounds. It will seat 28,000 when completed and can be indefinitely enlarged. It will be ready by the opening of the next football season. The present stand on the south side, seating 7,500, will have eleven more rows of seats and be extended to the east so it will seat 11,500. The new stand on the north side will seat 7,500 and that on the east side 5,000. Funds for the construction of the new stands will be secured from the navy's share of the proceeds of the Pennsylvania State and Princeton games.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 10 (Associated Press).—The feature of the closing five days' program of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association's fifty-first annual meeting was expected to be the Lexington Stake for two-year-old trotters, but it developed that it was the 2:09 pace, which required four heats for a decision and was a keen race, going to Donna Mac.

Rose Scott, trotting against time, lowered her record to 2:00¾, and Anna Bradford's Girl, pacing against time, lowered her record to 2:01. The weather was fine and the track fast.

WILLS TO OPPOSE SMITH.

Negro Heavyweight to Battle at Queensboro Tonight.

Local boxing followers will have an opportunity to size up Harry Wills, giant New Orleans negro heavyweight, as a prospective ring rival for Jack Dempsey tonight. Wills is scheduled for a ten-round bout against Homer Smith, Kalamazoo heavyweight, at the Queensboro A. C. of Long Island City. It will be the first local ring appearance of Wills in more than a year. At the same time it will introduce the heavyweight who enjoys the distinction of surviving ten rounds against Luis Angel Firpo in one of the bouts in which the South American heavyweight engaged while on his barnstorming tour previous to the clash with Dempsey. Smith took Firpo's heaviest blows and was floored repeatedly in a bout at Kalamazoo, but the Michigan heavyweight went the limit with the "Wild Bull of the Pampas."

Another heavyweight bout will bring together Emmet Puryear, negro heavyweight, and Joe White, a Southern boxer. They are scheduled for ten rounds as the semi-final attraction. A third ten-round bout will be between Yussel Pearlstein and Pat Walsh, heavyweights.

ADAMS IS IN ACCORD WITH BUGBEE RULING

Platt Adams, chief inspector of the New Jersey Boxing Commission, yesterday dispelled the belief that he was opposed to the action of Chairman Newton A. K. Bugbee in suspending Mickey Walker and his manager, Jack Bulger, for a period of one year, and depriving Walker of his end of the purse for the bout last Monday night between the Elizabeth boxer and Jimmy Jones at the Dreamland Park arena in Newark. After ordering the bout stopped and declared "no contest," in the tenth round, Adams reported the case to Chairman Bugbee, who last Tuesday announced the decision of the commission affecting Walker. When Bugbee's decision was announced Adams was quoted as saying that he did not think Walker's showing against Jones merited suspension. Yesterday, however, Adams declared himself in full accord with Chairman Bugbee's decision and added that he expects Jones, too, will be suspended. As yet, however, no action has been taken by the commission against Jones.

Adams stated that the total receipts of the bout amounted to $28,104. According to Adams, the club and Walker and Jones will receive only enough money to pay their actual expenses. The remainder, after the preliminary boxers have been paid, will be turned over to a fund for New Jersey's crippled children. This amount is expected to reach $16,000, instead of the $3,000 originally planned as a charity fund from the bout. J. Frank Black, Treasurer of the Broad A. C., which conducted the bout, announced that Walker received an advance of $4,500 on his end of the purse. This money has been ordered returned to the club by Inspector Adams, who has also instructed that it be included in the charity fund.

In discussing the case Adams said:

"Walker, when I stopped the bout, begged me to let him continue, saying that he would break both of his hands to prove that he was willing. I told him no, however, as he had been warned several times, through the referee, to go in and make a fight of it. I feel sorry for Walker but I will not make any move out of sympathy for him to have him reinstated."

Dr. A. C. Silverstein, club physician, replying to reports that Walker was not in true fighting condition because of an injured right hand, issued a statement in which he said his examination of Walker before the bout satisfied him that the Elizabeth boxer was in perfect condition. Dr. Silverstein said Walker informed him before the bout that his hands were all right.

At his offices in Newark, Manager Bulger declared his intention of seeking a hearing in an attempt to have Walker's suspension modified or lifted entirely. "We are not contemplating any legal action to obtain our share of the purse," said Bulger. "Mr. Bugbee, however, will have to retract his statement that the fight was a fake. Mickey was never in a questionable fight in his life. We did not want to go through with the fight on Monday night because of the condition of Walker's hands. On the day before the contest I went to Mr. Blaufuss of the Broad A. C. and asked him to put the fight back three weeks and hold it in the Newark armory. Mr. Blaufuss said that it was a benefit for the crippled children and should not again be postponed. He told me that the club could not get into the armory the number of people who had purchased tickets in advance.

"I have three witnesses that the club physician did not examine Walker's hands before the fight. I will demand a hearing for it is ridiculous to suspend us for a year. Mr. Bugbee did not attend the bout and I resent his characterization of the bout as a fake. I intend to make every effort to compel him to retract his statement of a fake."

1,400 CADETS PLAN TO WITNESS GAME

Coming for Notre Dame Contest at Ebbets Field on Saturday —Kick-Off at 3:30.

Despite the world's series which started yesterday between the New York Giants and the New York Yankees, the interest is increasing in the approaching Army-Notre Dame football game which will be played on Ebbets Field in Brooklyn on Saturday. Yesterday the Ebbets-McKeever Exhibition Company, which has charge of the staging of the annual intersectional contest, put 1,500 additional tickets on sale in order to accommodate the demand for reservations. These seats will be in a reserved section which is being especially erected for the approaching game and will be sold for $5 each. Preparations are being made to handle a record crowd.

Because of the fact that the Army team will be unable to leave West Point until the players complete their classes at noon on Saturday the game will not start until 3:30 instead of 2 o'clock as was originally arranged. This will probably also cause the cadets to dispense with the parade through the streets of Brooklyn as was requested by the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce. There will be 1,400 cadets on the special train which will leave West Point as soon as the classes are over for the day and these will be transported from the station to the scene of the contest in a special subway express train. Two bands will be on hand for the contest, for Notre Dame is bringing its musicians to rival the regular West Point organization. The first base side of the diamond will be occupied by the West Pointers while the Notre Dame cohorts will assemble in the stands on the opposite side of the gridiron. The corps of cadets will march around the field in columns of companies and draw up before their section in company front before taking their seats, going through the same manoeuvres as they do every year before the Army-Navy classic.

Notre Dame Wins First.

The great rivalry and friendship between the two institutions began in 1913, when the Notre Dame eleven came East and with Rockne, Eichenlaub and Dorais playing, demonstrated to the Army just what the great advantage of the forward pass is. Notre Dame won that first meeting by a score of 35 to 13, but this defeat enabled the Army to score its first victory over the Navy in three years, for it was by the forward passing methods which the Notre Dame eleven used that the cadets conquered the midshipmen a few weeks later.

For the next four seasons the victories alternated between the two teams, the Army winning in 1914 and 1916 and Notre Dame being victorious in 1915 and 1917. In 1918 no game was played on account of the World War, but since relations were resumed in 1919 the Western team has won three times and last year the two teams battled to a 0-0 tie.

This season the Army has one of the strongest elevens in its history. Only three positions needed to be filled when the season started and a strong array of candidates has loomed up for these vacancies. Last year's regular ends, Myers and White, were lost by graduation, but in Glasgow, Baxter and Doyle the Army coaches feel that they will be able to face the Western eleven as well fortified on the flanks as they were in 1922. Ellinger has filled the hole at guard left vacant by the graduation of Captain Fritz Breidster, and Tiny Hewitt, former star at Pittsburgh, is taking care of the halfback position, which was occupied by Timberlake last Fall.

Many Veterans Back.

Garbisch at centre, Farwick at guard and Mulligan and Goodman at the tackles are all veterans of last year's famous line. Wood and Smythe are two star backfield men who are still in the line-up and the other backfield post is providing a hard competition between Gilmore, Ives and Scheiffler.

One of the strongest assets to the Army team this season, according to the coaching staff at West Point, is Captain Dennis Mulligan, who has not only continued his brilliant work at tackle but has also proved himself a capable leader.

Notre Dame has won six of the games played between the two teams and the Army has won two, last year's meeting resulting in a tie. A complete record of the games follow:

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 10.—With all the varsity men, except Storck, back in their regular berths, the Army went through two and a half hours' gruelling work today in its drive toward the Notre Dame contest Saturday. Much of the practice was held in the drizzling rain which fell for an hour before darkness set in. In spite of the wet ball, the scrub eleven again demonstrated that it had learned the Notre Dame formations fairly well, and could execute them with telling effect.

At the conclusion of the defensive drill the varsity unleashed its offensive, which incidentaly did not feature a single overhead play but which carried the scrubs off their feet in the drive toward the latter's goal. Gillmore and Ives were the ball-carrying backs most of the time, Hewitt did only light work today, Wood was again at fullback and went through a kicking drill with Gillmore. Stowell and Stewart, veteran second string men, were in for Farwick and Ellinger at the guard positions. There will be no letup in the heavy work for the balance of the week.

"BANKRUPT" GERMANY.

Of uncommon interest as well as surprising are the figures of German imports from the United States compiled in yesterday's TIMES. German purchases of American cottan for the eight months ending with August topped those of any other country. The total was 540,644 bales, valued at more than $72,000,000. This was some 15 per cent. more than England bought during the same period. Likewise with copper, Germany's takings from the United States during the eight months named were nearly 108,000,000 pounds, worth $17,000,000, again a larger amount than was shipped to any other country. How Germany financed these large orders remains very much of a mystery to American bankers, but the fact stands that these raw materials, along with considerable quantities of foodstuffs, were bought here and duly paid for.

Such business transactions throw needed light upon the current assumption that Germany has virtually gone bankrupt and is totally unable to pay reparations to France. It is clear that we must sharply distinguish between the severe financial embarrassments from which Germany is undoubtedly suffering, and her assured economic strength. Her currency has fallen into hopeless chaos. The result of the frightful depreciation of the mark has unquestionably been to ruin many middle-class Germans, and has been tantamount to levying upon them a capital tax more crushing than was ever dreamed of in the Socialist philosophy. German public finance is also undeniably in a bad way. The governmental deficits mount every month by incredible figures—on paper. The new measures which the German Government is about to undertake for the establishment of a gold currency, and for bringing the revenue somewhere near the expenditure, are necessary if Germany is to be pulled out of her financial Slough of Despond. But all this is apart from the question what the real wealth of the country may be and what sort of a boom in manufacture, together with a roaring foreign trade, Germany is making preparations for as soon as her finances are set in order and her foreign relations stabilized.

It is easy to talk about national bankruptcy. But nations do not in reality go bankrupt unless the great mass of their citizens are left without property or income, and unless all the sources of industry and of the creation of new wealth are dried up. It may be true that today Germany is not able to pay appreciable sums on her reparations account, except for deliveries in kind, but what she may be able to pay in five or ten years' time is significantly indicated by what she is doing now through putting her hand upon great supplies of the raw materials of manufacture to make ready for an immense economic expansion in the near future.

A GREAT PROHIBITION VICTORY.

Mr. WAYNE B. WHEELER, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, calls the nomination of former Representative DALE as Republican candidate for United States Senator from Vermont a "great victory for the friends of national prohibition." Mr. WHEELER is a professional enthusiast. How much ground is there for his present enthusiasm? In the Republican primaries there were three candidates, leaving out the Sage of Peru, Mr. MARSHALL J. HAPGOOD, who wants to prohibit cigarettes and whose name was not printed on the ballot. Mr. DALE stood for the Volstead act, unmitigated, unchanged, perfect in content and administration.

Mr. JOHN W. REDMOND, as might be expected of that wicked personage "a corporation lawyer," wanted the Volstead act modified so that non-intoxicating beers and wines might be legalized. Former Judge WILSON wanted to see the Volstead act administered with "common sense," thereby implying that it is administered foolishly. For Mr. REDMOND there were 13,735 votes. For Judge WILSON and against irrational enforcement there were 9,238 votes. For Mr. DALE, the entire Volsteadian and darling of the Anti-Saloon League, there were 26,465 votes. Consider, moreover, that he took what is evidently the official attitude of the Republican Party. He was also the favorite of the bonus hunters. Besides, he has been a distinguished member of the House, serving on the Rules Committee and second on the Banking and Currency Committee. And he is an intimate friend of President COOLIDGE, for whom the Vermonters have a warm spot in their hearts.

With all these perfections on his head, he got but 8,442 votes more than his wet Republican rivals. In the bright lexicon of the Anti-Saloon League, "a great victory" is synonymous with "a pretty tight squeeze." Mr. COOLIDGE's cousin, Mr. PARK H. POLLARD, the Democratic candidate for Senator, favors "some sort of decent repeal of the Volstead act." For political reasons Vermont will no doubt stick to her old love, the Republican Party, and its candidate for Senator and the rigor of the Volstead act; but it is clear that even in that virtuous Republican region a strong minority chafes under the Volstead act.

NEW VOTERS.

It would seem that there was need of some sort of higher literacy test for legislators that would prevent in the making of new laws such confusion as has arisen over the amendment relative to a literacy test for new voters. The act which was intended to compel all new voters to present certificates of literacy issued by the educational authorities of the State has had an interpretation by the Attorney General nullifying such a purpose, and another by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court supporting it. What has heightened the confusion is that the Attorney General's opinion was not given until the very eve of registration, after the Commissioner of Education had sent out his instructions and made all plans for widest publicity of the times and places at which the literacy tests were to be given. The public and private schools, the press, native and foreign, churches, labor unions and the radio were all used to give notice of the opportunities for qualifying as new voters. Then came the opinion of the Attorney General, permitting the old method of testing by the officers of registration—that is, by reading extracts from the Constitution.

There was an earlier intimation of this opinion, given by the Attorney General's office, not to the public but to the printer who prepared last year the pasteboard slips containing these extracts and who doubtless wished to know whether they would be needed again this year. But those whose concern was solely for the public good were without direct official knowledge until after the 27th of September, the date of the opinion sent to the Commissioner of Education. As it is, the decision of the Appellate Division holds unless and until the Court of Appeals reverses it. This means that every new voter must present a certificate of literacy (or a sixth grade certificate or diploma of graduation from an elementary school or school of higher grade), and that no other method of qualifying is open to him or her. In order to give added opportunity for such tests, the examination centres will be open not only tonight, as was originally planned, but Friday night as well.

New York has led all the other States in making this sensible provision for determining the literate fitness of men and women to enter into the full privilege of citizenship. If there is ambiguity in the law itself, it should be remedied by the next Legislature. There should be only one authority to determine literacy, and that is the authority to which the State entrusts the teaching of the illiterate. The school should be the only door by which one can enter the voting booth.

AGAINST A LABOR PARTY.

By a majority of more than 23,000 the convention of the American Federation of Labor has voted against the formation of a separate Labor Party. Thus are again displayed the essential conservatism and sound political sense which have made and kept the Federation so powerful. It has divagated into politics occasionally, opposed, often unsuccessfully, particular candidates for Congress. It often attributes to itself a decisive effect, scarcely evident to anybody else, in Congress elections. Mr. GOMPERS is liberal in his congratulations to successful candidates like Senator BROOKHART and MAGNUS JOHNSON, recruits that may help him; but he has small sympathy with the enthusiasts and come-outers who are always founding a Labor Party. There is or was in 1920 such a party, authorized by the Federation, but in that "great uprising," soon greatly to fall, it was about as potent as a goose in a cyclone.

The Federation can't command the votes of its members. They will vote as they please, like other Americans. It is the inevitable experience that the most irresponsible and radical elements get control of these separate parties. The Federation wouldn't find itself at home with discordant allies seeking their own purposes, many of them having for a main purpose its disruption. Legislatures and Congresses are all too docile to "the demands of Labor." Unorganized as a political party, the Federation can exert a strong influence on both great parties, each obsessed with hope or fear of the mysterious "labor vote." That influence would be weakened or destroyed by a separate Labor Party. The Federation would lose, not gain, by the change.

It is unjust to the Federation, however, to look at its course as merely politic and clever and the result of experience. That has a much larger and more generous, a noble and patriotic, aspect and cause. The Federation doesn't want to dissociate itself from the rest of American citizens and interests, and give a new impetus to that deplorable system of group and class government whose unfortunate results are evident in Europe, and more than the beginnings of which are already evident here. Mr. MATTHEW WOLL is probably right in believing that the economic power of organized labor would be destroyed by its injection into politics; a distinct Labor Party, could it be kept coherent, would be a great step toward the further disorganization and breaking down of representative government. The almost pitiable feebleness of the separatists in the convention is additional proof, if any was needed, of the wisdom and the patriotism of the Federation. Its leaders are among the shrewdest managers of politicians, and their views are often wide and statesmanlike, however much we may regret some of their proposals. At least they are not infatuated with the Soviet, like Mr. BORAH and certain other of our sages.

SPEED AND CONTROL.

Secretary HUGHES is disturbed, and quite properly, by the excessive demands made by trivial and unimportant persons on the time of public officials. This distraction grows greater with the modern tendency, apparently incurable, to refer to the President or the Secretary of State matters that properly fall within the competence of the village dog catcher. Quick and easy communications, as Mr. HUGHES well says, are upsetting to all of us. "It is the day of the fleeting vision. Concentration, thoroughness, the quiet reflection that ripens the judgment, are more difficult than ever." In other words, what we need is not speed but control.

This confession comes appropriately at a time when certain policies of the State Department are being more accurately evaluated by the public. A long letter from Buenos Aires in Tuesday's Evening Post set forth facts with which we were already acquainted from cabled reports of South American press opinion. The dispatch of an American naval mission to Brazil, harmless enough in seeming and contiguous with Brazil's valued co-operation with the United States in the war and at the Peace Conference, has had a most deplorable effect on international relations throughout South America. At the Pan American Congress disarmament was one of the most prominent questions, and it is the general feeling of South America that nothing was done about disarmament because of the attitude of Brazil, relying on the support of the United States. As to American influence generally at Santiago, on some days it was null and void, and those days were its best.

Nobody supposes that Mr. HUGHES, or Mr. FLETCHER for that matter, wanted to stir up bad feeling in South America. They did, however, do a good deal unwittingly to stir it up. Truly, as Mr. HUGHES says, "concentration, thoroughness, the quiet reflection that ripens the judgment, are more difficult than ever."

GOVERNOR WALTON'S BLUSTER

With the National Guard in Oklahoma demobilized, Governor WALTON is no longer the man on horseback. He now plays politics to avoid impeachment. He has offered to sacrifice himself by resigning his office if the Legislature will pass the anti-Klan bill of his drafting. Patterned after a Tennessee statute, it would forbid assemblies of masked men and require publication of rosters of the membership of all secret societies. The Klan, shorn of its disguises and with its leaders and the rank and file known by name and reputation, would soon pass from the stage, and in the centre of it and bowing before the footlights would appear JACK WALTON, the destroyer of the Invisible Empire.

The whole is so clearly a tactical move by the Governor to escape impeachment that his opponents have received the overture with derision. The slogan, "We want neither Klan nor King," is still ringing through the State. Meaningless would be the mandate of the recent election if a bargain were made with the Governor. By the great majority they cast for a constitutional amendment authorizing the Legislature to meet in extra session the people of Oklahoma indicated that they desired the impeachment and trial of Governor WALTON.

If the Appellate Court should hold that the election of Oct. 2 was invalid for reasons adduced by the Governor's legal advisers, the election which he called for Dec. 6 would give the voters another opportunity to declare themselves. So many charges have been made against his Administration other than misuse of martial law that failure to put him on trial could not be explained. Oklahoma desires vindication, although Governor WALTON may be indifferent to it. For a man in his position to evade the issue is deplorable. "It is up to the Legislature," says the Governor's Secretary, ALDRICH BLAKE. "The Governor is ready to quit if they will do the right thing and pass his bill. Otherwise they will get all the fight they want."

The answer to this sort of bluster is that the Legislature has a duty to perform, and that it will be in order to deal with the Ku Klux Klan when the Governor has had his trial. Speaker MCBEE promises that laws to control the Klan will be enacted, including a law to unmask it. The country expects Oklahoma to make a clean sweep of Klan and King.

TOWARD A SETTLEMENT.

To the statement of the German Chargé d'Affaires in Paris that the Stresemann Government is anxious to resume negotiations on methods for restoring production in the Ruhr, Premier POINCARE has replied that he is already negotiating directly with the Ruhr industrialists and believes it wisest to continue these arrangements without interference by Berlin. He adds, significantly, that he will be glad to examine, together with the Allies, a German proposal dealing with the reparations question as a whole. Following his previous announcement that he had informed the Reparation Commission that satisfactory agreements had been reached with two of the Ruhr groups, this statement is a clear sign that important progress is being made in bringing about a general settlement. M. POINCARE long ago explained that when Germany had rescinded the orders for passive resistance and, by resuming deliveries, had shown evidence of her good faith, he would be ready to take up the reparations question again. STRESEMANN's official abandonment of passive resistance met the first condition. The satisfactory agreements with the industrialists for a return to work meet the second.

The reason given by the French for preferring direct negotiations with the industrialists seems to be that they wish to keep the pledges seized in the Ruhr free from the Stresemann Government until the reparations settlement is made. In view of the steady contention of the German Government that passive resistance had been largely spontaneous, resumption of work without direct interference from Berlin in a measure absolves that Government from a responsibility which might otherwise increase the internal political complications of Germany.

The very fact that POINCARE has officially notified the Reparation Commission of the successful measures concluded and has stated that payments made will be turned over to that body for the credit of all the Allies—unless, of course, any one of them is unwilling to profit from the results of an "illegal" occupation—opens the way for the commission once more to play an active part in the settlement. Whether or not POINCARE will ultimately recommend the formation of a subcommittee of experts to examine into Germany's capacity to pay cannot now be foretold. But by bringing the negotiations into the hands of the Reparation Commission, which is the legally constituted body to deal with such problems, he gives those of the Allies who have held aloof a new chance for participation.

If Germany's proposals are not accepted forthwith, there will be the usual cries of horrified despair from Germany's champions here and abroad. But it is futile to think that the problem can be settled overnight. The negotiations will go through the usual stages—rejection, despair, counter-proposals, &c.—and much time will necessarily elapse in the process. Not only must satisfactory arrangements be concluded with Germany, but the terms must be suitable to conflicting allied interests. The present step is in the right direction. But it is only one of many on a long and hard path, and the goal is still distant.

THE CONQUEST OF CANAAN.

It is always pleasant to see a small-town boy, long suspected by his old neighbors because he went to the big city to seek his fortune, make good at last with the folks back home. This honor has now happily descended on Mr. THEODORE DREISER of Indiana. Till very lately pious Hoosiers knew of Mr. DREISER only as the brother of PAUL DRESSER, who wrote the Indiana national anthem, "On the Banks of the Wabash, Far Away." About DRESSER Indiana knew and cared no more than that he wrote this one ballad of the homeland. It was enough to rouse the natives to bring his ashes home to rest at last on Hoosier soil, to win him a place second only to RILEY among the sweet singers in Israel. They take Indiana seriously in Indiana.

Meanwhile PAUL's little brother, THEODORE, had passed beyond the range of Hoosier vision. Now and then somebody came back from New York with the report that THEODORE was being taken seriously by some folks on the Atlantic seaboard, but Indiana trusts its own judgment. A few years ago THEODORE went back for a visit and wrote a book about his travels. It was one of the best books ever written about Indiana, but it didn't suit such Hoosiers as read it. DREISER had dared to say that Aphrodite was not without her votaries in Indiana, and that was enough to put him on the Hoosier Index.

Time passed, and The Nation began its series of sketches of the States. Some, indeed most, of those sketches brought anguished howls from the residents of the States treated. Indiana, left till near the end of the list, seems to have felt some apprehension. DREISER was selected to write about Indiana—an excellent choice, since he is about the only native Hoosier who is both a generally known author and of a habit of mind sympathetic with that of The Nation; and he wrote a brief, not very searching, but pleasant sketch, true enough as far as it goes, and not seeking to go too far. But it was highly complimentary to Indiana, a happy valley of serene groves, smiling fields and congenital poets, sandwiched between the industrial wildernesses of Ohio and Illinois.

Thus with one stroke Mr. DREISER made himself solid back home. Says The Indianapolis News:

> Whether there was a purpose to make amends for certain unflattering comments made several years ago we do not know, nor is it necessary to inquire. If there was, the writer has squared himself. * * * The Dreiser—or Dresser—boys have done very well by Indiana.

What higher praise could come to a writer, suspected on account of alien residence, radical sympathies and the unforgivable allusion to a Hoosier Aphrodite? The prodigal has come back; Indiana kills the fatted turkey and bakes the sweet potato pie. Residence in Greenwich Village and persecution by the Vice Society can be forgiven, now that he has "done right" by Indiana.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

They Decided That He Was Through.

In a recent book that doesn't deserve advertising, by an author who has been advertised too much by his choice of literary material, there is a particularly vivid description of a "labor meeting" in Sydney, Australia. In the course of it there is revealed an interesting method which the antipodeans have for manifesting effectively the opinion that a speaker who is addressing them has said, if not all he had to say, at least all that his hearers want to hear from him.

The speaker of this particular evening was proceeding glibly and with a certain rough eloquence to urge upon the workingmen present their right to the product of their labor in its entirety and their duty to see to it that everybody worked and that nobody received for his work more than a fixed standard wage. Before this orator had by any means completed his demand for a revolution and the establishment of a Government like the one blossoming so prettily in Russia there came from the men in front of him a single word repeated in unison by many voices. The word was "One!" He ignored it and went on; but after a carefully measured second came "Two!" chorused in the same way. At this the speaker showed obvious discomposure, which increased rapidly as the numerals, still carefully spaced, followed in implacable sequence.

He knew what it meant—they were counting after the manner of the prize ring, but before the fatal "Ten!" was reached the believer in sovietism had leaped from the platform and was fighting desperately with as many of his critics as he could reach with a decidedly lively pair of fists. Of course it was a hopeless battle.

According to this authority, a man whom the Australians have "counted out" in this way is ended. He never can recover prestige or get another hearing. If a politician, he retires to private life; if a "leader" of any kind, he becomes a follower or disappears from sight.

Whether or not the plan would work in other parts of the world might be a subject of curious inquiry.

A Mystery at Last Is Explained.

A speaker at the "recreation congress" now going on in Springfield, Ill., Dr. ROBERT E. PARK, offered a new solution for the ancient and much studied problem of human depravity. Why he thought such a discussion would be recreative is not disclosed, nor could his hearers have been much amused by his theory. Still, they must have listened with some interest when he told them that men are wicked merely because of the innumerable "don'ts" that are directed against them while children.

Was it not natural, he asked, that when they grew up they proceeded to do not a few of the things from which in earlier years they reluctantly and under compulsion had refrained?

This fits in fairly well with the large amount of current talk to the effect that under prohibition many men drink who never drank before, and many drink to excess who formerly drank with moderation. That there are minds so constituted that their possessors act in this way unquestionably is true, but that they are so numerous as reported is at least dubitable. Dubitable, too, is the adequacy of Dr. PARK's theory to explain anything like the whole of human depravity.

It is too simple, and simplicity always should be viewed with suspicion when it is used in accounting for either the virtues or the vices of beings so complicated as ourselves.

Colonies Were So Recruited.

In undertaking to find in the English church where he was buried the Governor who founded the colony which became their State the people of Georgia, represented by the officials of Oglethorpe University, are showing their appreciation of a large task well performed. The English have not been quite pleased by this manifestation of American piety, but, as in the case of the search for the scanty remains of POCAHONTAS, the "Indian Princess" who lives in one of our prettiest legends, they have consented to the disturbance of ancient graves.

But in this case more than graves have been disturbed, for with the reviving of OGLETHORPE's history there also will be revived the facts as to the quality of not a few of the colonists brought across the Atlantic by him. He described them as "oppressed Englishmen," and so they presumably were, but they were in jail. In these days the inmates of such institutions would not be regarded as hopeful founders for "first families." Things were different then, however, and there were so many ways besides the commission of real crimes for getting into prison that to be there was far from necessarily disgraceful.

Anyhow, Georgia is far from being the only colony that owed increment of population to England's desire to get rid of certain inhabitants deemed less valuable than the room they occupied at home. France, too, sent her "casket girls" to Louisiana, and what they were can be read to this day in "Manon Lescaut," the book of which it has been said that it rises from among the other writings of the Abbé PREVOST like a beautiful marble column still standing on the site of a temple ruined and overthrown. But it is a book not at all popular in New Orleans, and not everybody in Georgia will be pleased if the return of Governor OGLETHORPE's bones to Atlanta causes too deep a scrutiny into the origin of some families.

Will It Make Coal a Bit Cheaper?

Now it is Commissioner ENRIGHT who is to make a "survey" of the coal supplies and the coal situation in this city. That is right, and everybody will be glad if the policeman sent on this quest return with a lot of information as to stocks on hand and prices asked by the local dealers.

But then—what?

The theory that profiteering in coal to be stopped needs but to be known is wearing thin, for, even when revealed, nobody seems able to do anything about it, or, if able, does. To accusation of excessive charges the dealer always has the reply that he can buy only of the ruthless independents, and that therefore he must get a dollar or two or three per ton more than the frequently mentioned but never obtainable "just and proper price."

Perhaps Commissioner ENRIGHT's inquisition will be more effectual in accomplishing something than have been its many predecessors, but hope has sprung so often that now it cannot spring very high—hardly can quit the ground, indeed.

THE ALASKAN "QUOTA."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On Wednesday, Sept. 26, four children of a Moravian missionary in Alaska arrived from Germany in New York City on the steamship Kroonland. They ranged in age from thirteen to twenty-four. The oldest girl was born in Greenland, while the others were born in Alaska. According to our immigration laws three of them were therefore American citizens. It was impossible for the parents to come from Alaska to meet their children. Therefore I was asked to perform this duty for them. Armed with official documents establishing the identity of the expected arrivals, I went to the dock when the Kroonland landed. It was utterly impossible to board the ship and so these missionary children, practically unacquainted with the English language, were left to cope alone with the gross ignorance of the immigration inspectors. After waiting more than four hours I was informed that they were held for Ellis Island, "because the quota was full."

At 10 o'clock of the following morning I found myself in "the witness room" on Ellis Island. The lunch hour came, but the names of my "American citizens" had not been called. During this intermission I laid the case before a courteous official and begged him to secure for me an immediate hearing. He granted my request and in less than fifteen minutes the young people in question were released for entry into the United States. This man told me that the inspectors of the day before had pronounced the quota from Alaska full and later called up Ellis Island to ask where Alaska belonged anyway. They had also expressed total ignorance as to the whereabouts of Greenland, for which reason the oldest daughter of the missionary was likewise sent to the island. Is it possible that such gross ignorance on the part of the immigration inspectors must be tolerated? Who is responsible for the appointment of these men who are unable to boast even a common school education?

A week before the arrival of these American citizens I visited the office of the Commissioner of Immigration for the purpose of eliminating, if possible, any hindrances that ignorant inspectors might put into the way of my friends' landing. In the absence of the Commissioner a young woman in his office advised me to write him a letter, embodying briefly the facts in the case. The letter was written promptly, but the Commissioner never deigned to reply. Neither did he take the slightest action to keep these American citizens from being sent to Ellis Island by a body of incompetent inspectors. That thousands of cases must be daily brought to his attention is no excuse for his negligence. These were American citizens to whom his attention was called, but, secure in his position, he chose to ignore the matter entirely. Must such conditions be tolerated at the expense of the fair name of the United States? As the offspring of at least six generations of American citizens, I protest against such gross ignorance and injustice as this.

"THERE ARE TEARS IN YOUR EYES."

"There are tears in your eyes! Dry them quickly!"
Alarm in his voice, lest the stranger
Might pryingly wonder the reason—
No thought of the anguish that caused them.

"There are tears in your eyes! Pray conceal them!"
The depth of the pain that tormented
Her throat in a vice-like constriction—
Concerned not the man who had won her.

To weary so soon of his conquest;
More to him was the thought of the stranger
Than the grief of the girl he had tired of—

"There are tears in your eyes! Quick! Conceal them!"
Concealed were the tears from the stranger
Who might pryingly wonder the reason,
But the steel in the heart of the weeper
Sank deeper and deeper and deeper.

MARIE TELLO PHILLIPS.

FROM COUNT APPONYI.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Professor JÁszi, under certain form, assails my American tour with the open purpose of making it unefficient. He presents me as a man, not dishonest indeed, but behind time, anti-democratic, an agent of the Hapsburgs, &c. What he writes amounts to this: "Personally he (meaning myself) is not a bad sort; you may grant him a civil reception, but do not take him seriously, because he represents feudalism, the cause of bygone times and so on."

At the same time he must own that I made a firm show against the acts of violent reaction, which were the offsprings of the rule of his set and of the abhorrence that rule had inspired; he must own that I was not against universal suffrage, that I even have made some speeches on its behalf; he might have added that I took office to bring it through and left office when it was tampered with, and he might have added that every one in my country, his own small set excepted, considers me as one of the representatives of democratic progress and that on that account I enjoy the confidence of non-Communist Socialists and radical Democrats. True that I consider democracy in my country under the form of constitutional monarchy, just as Mr. Lloyd George considers it for England, because that form is rooted in our traditions; certainly I do not identify it with mob-rule, which is the form it took when Professor JÁszi's set got into power through the most useless and most frivolous of revolutions, and which is to a large extent responsible for the anti-democratic current that was noticed after the collapse of Communism.

But all this is immaterial; let every one enjoy his peculiar amusements; let a man who, when a countryman of his undertakes a mission for the benefit of the country to which they both belong, delight in assailing the former and prostrating as far he can his efforts, take his pleasure. I would not do it, but there is no accounting for taste.

What is beyond a mere joke, what deserves to be put in its proper light is Mr. JÁszi's campaign against the Hungarian loan. Hungary stands in need of that loan to save her from financial catastrophe; the affair is in good progress and now appear on the stage certain Hungarians who take action against its success—which means against their country, because they happen to disapprove of its present Government. I consider this fact, which I need not characterise, as a complete vindication of my own personality against the attacks of Mr. JÁszi, because it is clear that there can be nothing in common between me and a man, or a set of men, whose patriotic conscience allows them to take such a course.

I must, however, add that my American tour has nothing whatever to do with a Hungarian loan or any Government business. I am here not on a mission but on invitation by prominent Americans. ALBERT APPONYI.

CHILE-PERU SOLUTION.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The authorship of the supposedly happy solution of the Tacna and Arica controversy, as advocated in Foreign Affairs and published in your issue of Sept. 16, is unfortunately not given. This is a pity.

Stripped of rhetoric and concisely expressed, the "solution" amounts to giving Chile—in addition to the territory she has already taken from both Peru and Bolivia and presumably as a reward for having evaded compliance, for almost forty years, with the terms of a treaty signed by her—still more territory at the expense of both her former victims. What Peru would gain by such a "solution" is indeed problematical, because territory such as that of the Madre de Dios, which is offered in compensation, she has in plenty, while the Foreign Affairs article loses sight of the fact that the territories in dispute are of very little intrinsic value and are persistently claimed more for nationalistic than other reasons.

According to the "solution" therefore:

Peru would lose the Province of Arica and the port of that same name, about the only valuable asset the territory contains;

Bolivia, though having acquiesced in and confirmed by a treaty the loss of her seaboard to Chile, would still be called upon to give this country a further portion of her territory. Why she should do this, however, is not stated in the "solution";

Chile, meanwhile, would be rewarded for her illegal detention of what is not her own and for her failure to keep her pledged word by the gift of a Peruvian province and additional Bolivian territory. The inference is plain and should be most encouraging to all land-grabbing States, and amounts to this: "Seize all you can, repudiate your engagements and you will be rewarded in the end—provided you hold on long enough." It will be noted, however, that Chile is not called upon to cede anything whatsoever.

The additional recommendation that a treaty should be signed with Chile is ingenuous, to say the least. The author apparently forgets that a treaty was signed in 1884 with Chile, the present difficulties being the direct consequence of her failure to observe its terms. Why, it might pertinently be asked, should it be supposed that Chile would consent to be bound by the stipulations of a later treaty when she has consistently evaded compliance with those of an earlier covenant?

Sunday Amusements.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A group of church people have succeeded in foisting "blue" laws on Birmingham, Ala., the newspapers stating that on last Sunday golf and croquet were among the diversions barred on that day. I recall my own church pastor, who during a recent conversation with me roundly denounced a game of Sunday baseball in progress across the way. Golf on Sunday also was sinful, according to his views.

It was a grand Autumn day. The air was like champagne, exhilarating, and with that balminess than only my own native California knows. As he left, my pastor breathed deeply and said: "Oh, if I only had the time wouldn't I enjoy a long ramble across country this afternoon!"

Of course he would; yet it was sinful in his sight for a crowd of young fellows to enjoy themselves in a game of baseball in preference to the Sunday ramble across country, or for the golfers to enjoy themselves in their way instead of the minister's way.

Inconsistency is bad. Intolerance worse; but the two when united cause more blistering and strife and general unhappiness in this world than all our other ills put together. M. C. M.

SKYSCRAPER BEST REFUGE IN STORM

DUST A BIG FIRE HAZARD

Safe and unsafe places in thunderstorms were described at yesterday's session of the International Fire Prevention Congress by A. M. Schoen, Chairman of the Committee for Protection Against Lightning of the National Fire Protection Association. The safest place in a thunderstorm, he said, is in a large metal or metal-frame building. Next in point of safety is a large building of any kind. After that comes a small building equipped with lightning rod, then a building with a lightning rod, and finally outdoors in the open.

"During such storms," he went on, "it is well, as far as possible, to avoid metallic conductors that might become charged, such as telephone and electric systems connected to the outside, screened doors and windows, down spouts, lightning rods, stoves and fireplaces.

"Keep Away From Trees."

"If out of doors, keep away from lone trees, wire fences, hilltops, wide-open places and small sheds and shelters in exposed locations. Comparative safety may be found in thick timbers and depressions, such as deep valleys and canyons."

Mr. Schoen told reporters after his speech that the New York skyscrapers were the safest place in the world during a thunderstorm. He said they were electro-static shields because the immense amount of steel in them absorbed the electricity in the lightning and prevented the destruction of the buildings.

Many so-called mysterious fires are really caused by dust explosions, according to David J. Price, engineer in charge of development work, Bureau of Chemistry, Department of Agriculture. He said that there are about 21,000 plants in the United States, manufacturing products of an annual value of nearly $7,000,000,000, subject to the hazard of dust explosions unless precautions are taken.

F. J. T. Stewart, Superintendent of the New York Board of Fire Underwriters, said that the large majority of fires could be prevented were it not for the American failing of "letting George do it."

Licenses to Carry Matches.

Careless persons should be kept away from potential fire torches, he said, and he suggested it might "be found necessary to issue a certificate of carefulness to persons permitted to use fireworks, matches, tobacco, smoothing irons, fires, lights and petroleum products, or to care for rubbish, hot ashes, hot grease and similar fire hazards."

William Walker Orr, Assistant Secretary of the National Association of Credit Men, said that the efforts of credit organizations in fire insurance had resulted in methods which have caused an appreciable reduction of the annual fire loss.

WARNS AGAINST TEXTBOOKS

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 10.—State Councilor Willard M. Apgar of Rockaway assailed "treasonable textbooks" and warned against "insidious propaganda" in his annual address today at the opening of the New Jersey convention of the Junior Order United American Mechanics on the Steel Pier. Five thousand delegates, representing a membership of 100,000, are here.

"We cannot remain indifferent to the warning signals hoisted, particularly in relation to such vital matters as immigration, treasonable textbooks in our schools and the ever present menace of paid propagandists insidiously working secretly but effectively to undermine the institutions of our country, with the ultimate destruction of the Republic in mind," declared Councilor Apgar.

He quoted Secretary Davis's warning "that American ideals and institutions would eventually be submerged beneath a tidal wave of the Old World exodus unless America speedily provided for the enrollment of all aliens on their arrival."

SISTINE CHOIR COMING.

ROME, Oct. 10.—The Sistine Chapel Choir has sailed for America for an extended tour, accompanied by its Vice Director, Mgr. Antonio Rella. This choir, it is semi-officially explained at the Vatican, is an old organization which gained much fame in the past, although its official status has not been maintained in recent years, as only seven of the original members are now alive. It was for this reason that Osservatore Romano recently stated that the Sistine Choir was not going to America with the Pope's approval.

It is now explained that the status of the choir is this: When Vatican ceremonies need a choir, the singers are recruited from outside. These singers have come to be popularly known as the Sistine Choir, carrying on the musical work and traditions of the old official body at the Vatican, with Mgr. Rella having the official title of Vice Director of the Sistine Choir. It is this organization which is now en route to America, having sailed from Naples on the Conte Verde on Oct. 4.

NEW GREETS POSTMASTERS.

He Promises to Keep the Department Out of Politics.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Postmaster General New opened the annual convention of first and second class Postmasters today with an announcement that the meeting for next year had been canceled because the Presidential campaigns would be in progress at that time. Mr. New added that he was "going to keep the Post Office Department absolutely free from suspicion of being involved in politics."

Mr. New said that after the election he would recommend that the conventions be resumed. He expressed the belief that within ten years the business of the postal service would exceed $1,000,000,000 annually.

BAR LEAGUE SPEECH BY G.W.WICKERSHAM

University of Michigan Officials Forbid Use of Any Building for Meeting.

MAINTAIN IT IS POLITICS

Faculty Members Protest and, With Students, Seek Public Hall to Hear Ex-Secretary.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. Oct. 10.—The Board of Regents of the University of Michigan has denied the use of Hill Auditorium to George W. Wickersham, Attorney General under President Taft, to speak on the League of Nations, an address which he had been invited to deliver here Nov. 2. Should the address be delivered, it will have to be in some building off the university campus. The action of the regents became known today. They held that the speech would be political in nature.

Following the action of the board Shirley W. Smith, Secretary of the university, ruled today that Mr. Wickersham would be barred from all university buildings, basing his action also on the theory that he intended to deliver a political speech.

No sooner had Mr. Smith announced this decision than the Board of Governors of the Michigan Union Auditorium, by a divided vote, declared that building also was closed to Mr. Wickersham and his "political propaganda."

The decision of Mr. Smith and the action of Union's Governors, coming so closely after the action of the Board of Regents, has served to intensify interest in Mr. Wickersham's coming and also to increase the controversy over "free speech," "political propaganda" and "intellectual discussion" that is raging over the campus.

Members of the Faculty and student body, determined that Mr. Wickersham shall be given an opportunity to be heard, are casting about for a hall off the campus. They say that it must be large enough to accommodate the crowds that will want to hear the former Attorney General. The opera house may be finally selected.

In the meantime a Faculty memorial committee is preparing to draw up a resolution to be signed by indignant professors and instructors for presentation to the Regents protesting against the barring of Mr. Wickersham from Hill Auditorium. The members of the committee are Henry M. Bates, Dean of the Law School; Brand Blanchard, Professor of Philosophy, and Louis A. Strauss of the English department.

Dean Bates criticized the Regents for construing Mr. Wickersham's speech as a political matter and barring him from Hill Auditorium on the grounds that such a speech would be a violation of Arthur Hill's deed of gift. The deed is interpreted by the Regents to forbid use of the hall for discussion of any partisan or political question.

"I have been greatly embarrassed by the action of the Regents," Dean Bates said. "The whole affair will have to be explained to Mr. Wickersham. He will be broad-minded enough, however, to overlook the situation which has arisen."

A—Z "There was never a thought of making the discussion of the League of Nations a political question when we invited Mr. Wickersham to come to Ann Arbor. He is one of the leading Republicans of the country today.

"Some people, for political reasons, have tried to make the League a partisan political issue. Most thinking people do not believe it to be such and, moreover, they do not want it ever to become an issue. If it ever does become an issue we are quite certain that it will never be satisfactorily settled."

Dr. Marion Leroy Burton, President of the university and Junius E. Beale, President Regent, refused to make statements other than to state that "it had been definitely decided upon by the Regents."

George W. Wickersham declined to comment yesterday afternoon on the cancellation of his invitation to speak at the University of Michigan. So far as Mr. Wickersham was concerned, his secretary said, the incident was closed. From those familiar with the incidents it was learned that the invitation was one of long standing, and that the speech was not what ordinarily would be considered to be of a political nature. Mr. Wickersham was informed several days ago that a change in the program had been necessary because of the objection of the university authorities.

LABOR FEDERATION ATTACKS DRY LAW

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 10 (Associated Press).—More whisky glasses are being made now than in pre-prohibition days, "and they are not for ornaments," said William P. Clark of the Flint Glass Workers' Union in a debate today at the convention of the American Federation of Labor, preceding action reaffirming the Federation's former declaration for modification of the Volstead act.

Clark said that when prohibition went into effect the manufacture of beer glasses dropped off, but whisky glass making increased by leaps and bounds.

Steve Sumner of the Chicago Milk Wagon Drivers' Union, declared milk bottles were hard to obtain. "Now," he added, "I learn the reason. They are making whisky glasses instead of milk bottles."

Delegate John J. Kearney of Boston interrupted Sumner to ask:

"Is it because a man gets drunk that he is no good, or because he is no good that he gets drunk?"

Sumner failed to answer.

C. Dominick d'Alessandro of Quincy, Mass., General President of the International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers' Union, asserted the whole question was one of business.

Says Bootleggers Favor Dry Law.

"The bootleggers and the soft drink people are in favor of prohibition, and so are the milk men," he said.

After long discussion the convention adopted by overwhelming vote a declaration ratifying its former attitude for such modification of the Volstead act as will have the effect of giving to the people beer and light wine, "in lieu of the flood of moonshine that now poisons those who are foolish enough to consume it."

The declaration was made "to correct an impression sought to be created by the advocates of the Volstead act that former action of the Federation was not a fair statement of the attitude of affiliated organized labor bodies."

"It is our belief," it continued, "that the efforts at enforcement of the Volstead act have produced results that are so far from being what it was reasonably expected might follow the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment that we feel warranted in saying its reasonable modification, now asked for, and a rational enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment, will bring relief greatly sought by the people.

"The open saloon has been supplanted by the 'speak easy,' and instead of licensed vendors of liquor we now have an unnumbered multitude of bootleggers who dispense their vile and poisonous liquors in secrecy, to the great detriment of the health and morality of the people. This nefarious traffic has brought with it a great host of so-called law enforcement officers, many of whom have not hesitated to set aside or ignore all other laws in their zeal to enforce the one law in which they have interest."

Non-Partisan Campaign Approved.

Continuation of the work of the federation's National Non-Partisan Political Campaign Committee was approved by the federation today, and the rank and file of labor was called upon to make contributions to a fund for the purpose.

Commendation of General Frank T. Hines for his administration of the Veterans' Bureau was unanimously voted after he delivered an address, in which he urged the federation to permit ex-service men trained by the Veterans' Bureau to enter trades.

KLAN CHARTER ATTACKED.

Jersey's Attorney General Asked to Pass on Its Legality.

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 10.—Because of objection filed against the incorporation of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan of New Jersey with Secretary of State Thomas F. Martin, Attorney General Thomas F. McCran has been asked to pass on the legality of the Klan charter as a New Jersey corporation.

William J. McFadden, Newark lawyer, said that the organization could not be chartered for non-pecuniary purposes, and that the Klan openly discriminates against a race that forms an integral part of the State's citizenship.

ZR-1 IS RENAMED AS SHIP OF THE LINE

STEERS IT IN SHORT TRIP

WANTS AMERICA TO LEAD

LAKEHURST, N. J., Oct. 10.—With all the pomp and ceremony attendant upon the launching of a new battle cruiser, the ZR-1, first dirigible of the rigid Zeppelin type to be built in America, was renamed the Shenandoah this afternoon at the Naval Air Station near Lakehurst and officially received into the United States Navy as a ship of the line. Mrs. Edwin Denby, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, was sponsor. Following the exercises, both Secretary Denby and his wife went for a short cruise in the airship.

Accompanied by Mrs. Denby and her aunt, Mrs. George Canfield, and Major Shearer of the Marine Corps, Secretary Denby left Washington by train early this morning. At Philadelphia they were met by Captain Hayne Ellis of the Naval Air Station, and the remainder of the trip to Lakehurst was completed by motor. A guard of marines, under command of Captain B. H. Clark, met the Secretary and his party on their arrival at the hangar just after 1 o'clock. The exercises began an hour later, immediately after lunch.

Pigeons Carry the News.

As the final notes of the "Star-Spangled Banner," played by a military band, re-echoed through the hangar Mrs. Denby, standing in front of the control car, exclaimed: "I christen thee Shenandoah," and, pulling a ribbon attached to a secret compartment in the bottom of the ship's body, released three white carrier pigeons, which fluttered about for a few moments, then headed for Washington with messages to President Coolidge announcing the addition of the big airship to the regular naval forces.

In a brief speech Secretary Denby praised the work of the naval officers who designed the ship. He said: "The creation of this great ship marks a new era in the development of man's conquest of the air in the United States. We stand today at the very threshold of development in the science of aeronautics in the United States.

"We of the navy are proud that it was the brain of the navy, the navy's skill, that made this vessel possible. And we, with our sister service, are fully determined that the United States will keep not onl abreast but ahead of all other nations of the world in the development of this latest and, perhaps, most terrible weapon of the war."

Congratulated by President.

Secretary Denby thanked Rear Admiral William E. Moffett and Commander Frank R. McCrary of the Shenandoah for their invitation to Mrs. Denby to rename the big airship. He then read the following telegram from President Coolidge:

"Congratulations on the excellent pioneer work done by your airship Shenandoah, built, planned and manned by our navy. She is a great contribution to our defense and to the development of commercial aviation.

(Signed) "CALVIN COOLIDGE."

As Secretary Denby finished reading, a Marine Corps bugler sounded "To the Colors," and the launching pennant was run up under the forward part of the airship, while the American flag was unfurled from the stern.

It was just 4:10 P. M. when orders were given to "walk ship," and the crew of bluejackets and marines in blue denim started the launching. At the command "Walk her out, the men took positions on both sides of the ship and with the aid of ropes easily moved it through the east door of the hangar and into the open.

Secretary Denby, Mrs. Denby and their son, Edwin Jr., climbed into the control car and the other passengers also were taken aboard. They included Garvin Denby, brother of the Secretary of the Navy, and Mrs. Garvin Denby; Mrs. George Canfield, aunt of Mrs. Edwin Denby; Mrs. Frank R. McCrary, wife of the ship's commander; Mrs. J. H. Klein, Rear Admiral R. H. Jackson, Assistant Chief of Naval Operations; Rear Admiral A. H. Scales, Commandant of the Philadelphia Navy Yard; Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, Brig. Gen. Rufus Lane, U. S. M. C.; Commander J. C. Hunsaker, designer of the ZR-1, and Captain Anton Heinan, German dirigible expert. The ship also carried a crew of nine officers and twenty-two enlisted men.

Mrs. Denby Steers It.

The lines were cast off and the Shenandoah, heading north, rose gradually to an altitude of about 2,000 feet. She then came about and, heading eastward, glided out over the Atlantic Ocean. Mrs. Denby was given the wheel and, with a few lessons, piloted the craft with ease. After an hour's sail the Shenandoah returned to the hangar.

Mrs. Denby was among the first to alight, assisted by naval officers. "It was great," she exclaimed, on rejoining her friends, "but I'd rather drive my own car and leave the piloting of airships to the navy. It steers exactly like a ship, only you have to watch it when the wind blows. You can feel it swing."

Secretary Denby came forth smiling from the control car. Asked how he enjoyed the trip, he replied: "It was a wonderful experience. I enjoyed every minute of it. Much more ease and comfort than in an airplane."

In an interview with newspaper men aboard the train he said: "We propose to keep up with every development of aviation. We expect to equal and hope to surpass all other nations."

He spoke most enthusiastically about American prospects for predominance in the air, pointing out that we are the only country affording a sufficient supply of helium gas for airship purposes.

Air Veterans Urge "America First."

The First Reserve Squadron Post, American Legion, a post composed of aviators who served overseas, announced yesterday unanimous adoption of a resolution objecting to any reduction in American air forces and calling on Legion officials to urge Congress to make our air service second to none. The post held its annual Fall dinner last night at Cavanaugh's Restaurant, 200 West Twenty-third Street.

Her Husband's a Bricklayer, But Still She Robs a Store

"There is no excuse for a bricklayer's wife being a shoplifter," declared Justice Herrman in Special Sessions yesterday when he and Justices Herbert and O'Neill set Oct. 19 for sentence in the case of Mrs. Cora Kershaw, 30 years old, of 214 East Eighty-fourth Street. The woman had pleaded guilty to the charge of stealing articles worth $11.75 from Macy's.

"Your husband, I understand, receives from $12 to $15 a day for his work," Justice Herrman continued. "That should be sufficient for his family's support. The average lawyer's wife, whose income is much less, might have some reason for committing such thefts, but you have none."

BLACK HAND THREAT TURNS AN ELECTION

WINS ALL THE OFFICES

Mrs. Merritt Is Chosen Grand Matron—Ballots Support Ouster in Trustee Fight.

The administration ticket of the Order of the Eastern Star, headed by Mrs. Grace Voorhees Merritt for Grand Matron, was elected by a vote of 2,900 to 700 at yesterday's session of the Grand Chapter held at the Waldorf-Astoria. The other candidate for Grand Matron was Mrs. Latta MacDonald.

Grand Matron Everson suspended Mrs. Clara Heisenbuttle last April from her position as Grand Trustee and a formal trial was to have been held at the convention, which began on Monday. Mrs. Heisenbuttle sought an injunction in the courts. She obtained a temporary injunction restraining Mrs. Everson from suspending her, and Mrs. Everson took an appeal, which is pending.

The administration scored a victory when Mrs. Everson's action was sustained by the delegates. It won again when for the first time the organization passed over the name of a woman who normally might have advanced to the office of Grand Matron and gave that post to another. It scored a third time when the membership voted to suspend four other Grand Trustees who were adherents of Mrs. Heisenbuttle. They were Joseph Halter, William Seguine, Lulu I. Hustleby and M. Frances Thornton.

In a prominent place on the platform of the convention hall was a framed "black-hand" letter received by Mrs. Everson. The letter contained a threat on her life, and enclosed in the letter was a big black hand on paper. The letter was read by many women, and it is thought to have played an important part in the defeat of the opposition ticket and the support of Mrs. Everson and her policies.

In addition to the contest for the position of Grand Matron there were contests for the places of Associate Grand Matron and Commissioner of Appeals from Brooklyn. Rose E. Scherer of Kings defeated Mamie Fletcher of Garden City for Associate Grand Matron, and for Commissioner Antoinette Woodworth defeated Mamie Lemlein.

Other officers elected were: Grand Patron, James L. Dowsey, Nassau; Grand Treasurer, Georgia Fairderfield, Manhattan; Grand Secretary, Annie M. Pond, Brooklyn; Grand Conductress, Frances Hitchcock Shay, Monroe; Associate Grand Conductress, Anna Reed Farrington, Jefferson. Trustees: Three years, Clara S. Smithers, Mildred V. Everson; two years, Jess S. Kellogg, Sophie P. Paul; one year, Ida G. Harrington, Mervin S. Near.

The management of the hotel, wishing to correct the published impression that women fainted for lack of air in the ballroom the previous day, stated that the room is one of the best ventilated meeting places in the city and that there were nineteen ventilating machines in the room. It was said that most of the women who fainted were wearing heavy coats, some of them fur coats, and that at one stage of the proceedings the doors were ordered closed and nobody was allowed in or out.

QUEZON DEFINES STAND AGAINST GEN. WOOD

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MANILA, Oct. 9.—Manuel Quezon issued today the following statement regarding the Legislature's attitude toward Governor General Wood:

"I have noted that the future attitude of the Legislature with respect to legislative measures that might be recommended by the Governor General is now the object of conjecture and comment; and I see with surprise that the very persons who uphold the theory that the provisions of the Jones law should be strictly interpreted—that is to say, in favor of the Governor General's claim that he has the authority to veto any law approved by both houses and to impose his judgment and his orders upon all executive departments—are the ones who insist that the Legislature should pay due attention to the recommendations of a legislative character of the said Governor General.

"However, without anticipating what the Legislature's policy in this respect should be, because the latter is the only entity which has the right to determine it, I must bring to mind all, especially those who talk of the separation of powers and a strict interpretation of the Jones law, of the following:

"First, that, in accordance with the theory of the separation of powers carried to its legitimate consequences, the Chief Executive has nothing to do with legislative measures, which are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Legislature.

"Secondly, regarding the Jones law, which authorizes the Governor General to submit legislatureward his recommendations of a legislative character. All that the Jones law authorizes and provides is that the Governor General shall present the budget within the first ten days after the opening of the session."

It is generally expected that the majority in the Legislature, which is controlled by Señor Quezon, will pay no heed to General Wood's recommendations, and it is doubtful if the Governor General will follow the precedent of addressing that body personally at the opening session.

British Side Wins in Yale Debate.

CHURCHGOERS SEE $50,000 ROBBERY

ROBBERS ESCAPE IN AUTO

Clerks Fire at Thieves, Who Elude Pursuers by Reckless Drive Through Traffic.

Diamonds valued at $50,000 to $60,000 were stolen yesterday morning by robbers who smashed the show window of Paul Kaskel's pawnshop at 9 Columbus Avenue. They escaped in an automobile, despite a chase in which a score of men participated on foot and in taxicabs. Clerks from the store, leading the hunt, fired several shots at the robbers but failed to hit them. The robbery and chase were witnessed by many persons who were just leaving the 9 o'clock mass at the Paulist Fathers' Church, across the street from the shop.

The diamonds, with other jewelry, had been put in the widow only a few minutes before the robbery. Solomon Wolf, 22, and Joseph Levy, 23, clerks, and a customer, were in the store. It was thought at first that the customer was a confederate of the robebrs, but he remained in the store, was questioned by the police and exonerated.

While both clerks were busy in the shop, five young men gathered in front of the shop window. They all appeared to be in the early twenties and were neatly dressed. They all wore caps pulled down over their eyes.

Suddenly there was the crash of breaking glass and the thump of a brick, wrapped in newspapers, as it fell inside the show window. While his companions formed a ring about him, one of the robbers then passed his hands through the hole in the window and scooped up three trays of diamonds. He handed these to his companions, and all five dashed for an automobile standing in front of the St. Paul Hotel at Sixtieth Street and Columbus Avenue.

The driver started the motor as the men approached and the car was already in motion when they jumped on the running board and pulled themselves into the tonneau. The car then shot rapidly ahead, speeding northward on Columbus Avenue and darting recklessly in and out of the traffic.

Wolf and Levy ran to the street instantly and fired at the robbers with automatic revolvers. The clerks said they had fired over the heads of the fleeing men because they feared they might wound bystanders.

The robbers drove to Sixty-fifth Street and then turned east, disappearing before pursuers reached the corner. Several taxicabs chased them up Columbus Avenue, but were delayed by the traffic and were unable to keep the car in sight.

According to the police, the robbery apparently was planned, as they did not return the fire of the clerks. The police believe they were members of a gang of professional show window robbers.

Detectives of the West Sixty-eighth Street station found a glass cutter on the sidewalk in front of the show window, indicating that one of the robbers had tried to cut a hole in the window before smashing it. Bystanders gave the police the license number of the automobile in which the thieves had escaped. This showed they had used a touring car which had been stolen on Tuesday night from Sidney Salpeter of 578 Jerome Avenue, Brooklyn.

DRY AGENT'S HOME DYNAMITED IN OHIO

Charles Pearce's Wife and Baby Hurt—Bootleggers Had Threatened Him.

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio, Oct. 10.—The home of Charles Pearce, 36 years old, prohibition enforcement officer at Smithfield, Ohio, was blown up today by dynamite.

The dynamite, placed under the front of Pearce's house, wrecked the building and it collapsed inward, the walls and roof falling into the basement. Pearce, his wife and 17-month-old baby were thrown into the cellar with the débris.

Pearce extricated himself, rescued his baby, and then with the aid of neighbors dug his wife from the ruins after an hour's hard work. The baby was cut and bruised. Mrs. Pearce had her back injured and suffered greatly from shock.

Mrs. Mary Merryman's home, adjoining the Pearce dwelling, was so badly wrecked that its aged occupant, who had been seriously ill, had to be removed from the tottering building with ladders raised to the second floor.

The blast partly wrecked the Town Hall, opposite the Pearce home, and the Spragg restaurant. It broke windows in more than fifty dwellings. The damage is estimated at more than $20,000.

Miners on the way to work say they saw four strangers standing on a corner near the Pearce home. Others report that they saw an automobile containing several men leaving the town at high speed shortly before the blast.

Sheriff Lucas and deputies of Jefferson County are working on the belief that liquor law violators prosecuted by Pearce were responsible for the dynamiting. They are seeking suspects at Piney Fork, a mining town near Smithfield.

Pearce says that he has been openly threatened by bootleggers who were arrested recently.

ALBANY DRUG PLOT RESULTS IN ARREST

R. M. Feeley in Tombs After Investigation of Charge Made by Senator Hastings.

Robert M. Feely, 35, who said he was a broker and lived at 3,507 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn, was arrested last evening at Broadway and Fiftieth Street by Detective Sergeants James F. McCoy and Irving A. O'Hara of Inspector Coughlin's staff on a charge of conspiring last March with two others to place narcotics in the apartment of Senator John A. Hastings of Brooklyn in the Ten Eyck Hotel in Albany.

Bench warrants for Feely and the other two men were issued yesterday afternoon by Chief Clerk Edward Reilly of the roll of General Sessions when the Grand Jury returned indictments against them. The evidence had been presented by Assistant District Attorney Richard C. Murphy, who had been investigating charges made by several persons, including Senator Hastings and Philip Francis, against men alleged to have conspired against the Sinaloa Mining Corporation.

Feeley, it was understood, was formerly connected with the Sinaloa company, the Brokers' Investing Company and All-American Brokers Corporation, of which Senator Hastings is the head. It was said that the All-American Brokers Corporation had a contract with the Sinaloa company to sell stock in the gold mining enterprises of the corporation in Mexico. When trouble arose among directors of the Sinaloa company, it was said, the Brokers' Investing Company undertook to replace Senator Hastings's firm in the sale of Sinaloa stock.

It was said last evening that one of several men questioned by Assistant District Attorney Murphy before the case was laid before the Grand Jury confessed that he participated in the plot and mentioned the names of several others. This man was said to have been called before the Grand Jury on Monday and it is understood that his testimony resulted in the indictments.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Chairman Farley of the Shipping Board replied today to the communication of Representative Fred A. Britten of the Naval Committee, relative to the use of French menus in the Ritz-Carlton dining room of the liner Leviathan.

No attempt is made by the Chairman to answer the Representative's question as to why hash on the Leviathan is "hachis de volaille aux haricots verts," but Mr. Farley does make it quite plain that it is not the intention of the board to substitute English for French on the menus of the Ritz restaurant in the Leviathan.

Chairman Farley states that the fact that "our own employes found it impossible to translate the menu is unpardonable, and I shall endeavor to have this matter corrected at once."

"The Ritz-Carlton restaurant," says Chairman Farley's reply to Mr. Britten, "like the swimming pool and other special features of the Leviathan, was added to give the boat distinction, as well as its patrons additional comfort if they so desired. Such features of course, have an additional advertising value, particularly the Ritz-Carlton restaurant, because the hotel of that name had already made the name well known for its cuisine and service.

"To have asked the Ritz-Carlton people to change their method of doing business would have taken away the distinctive feature of the hotels and lost in great part the value of the advertising of the restaurant. The fact that our own employes found it impossible to translate the menu is unpardonable, and I shall endeavor to have this matter corrected at once.

"I quite agree with you that if this were the dining room at which passengers were compelled to take their meals, it would be unpardonable not to have the menu in English; but, inasmuch as the restaurant is a feature which patrons of the boat can elect to utilize, I believe it would be a mistake to alter its operation in any particular other than the one I have indicated and which you have so kindly pointed out."

SCHOOLS WILL AID NEW VOTERS' TEST

PRINCIPALS ASKED TO AID

President Voorhis Says About a Thousand Persons Will Be Affected.

Drastic instructions regulating the method of testing the qualifications of new voters are contained in an order served on the Board of Elections yesterday by Leonard M. Wallstein, attorney for William M. Chadbourne, who obtained from the Appellate Division an order reversing the decision of Supreme Court Justice Wagner permitting the use of literacy test cards.

At the same time the Citizens' Union, through Mr. Wallstein, urged upon the State educational authorities the holding of emergency sessions of night schools from now until the close of registration in order that the requirements of the literacy test law might be complied with. According to the Citizens' Union, it is concerned to see that no voters who can qualify under the law shall be prevented from voting this Fall and its plea to the State educational authorities is based upon this ground.

The Board of Education at a special meeting last night issued instructions to have fifty-nine schools throughout the city open tomorrow night so that new voters can take the necessary literacy test under the latest court decision. The schools will open at 7:45 P. M. and will remain open until all applicants have been cared for.

Principals Asked to Aid Voters.

Circulars requesting Principals in charge of evening elementary schools to do all in their power to enable new voters to pass the necessary qualifications were sent out last night under the supervision of Morris E. Siegel, director of evening and continuation schools. The school officials are asked to counteract as much as possible a prevalent belief that the tests are optional and to make it known to all new voters that they will be disfranchised if they fail to take and pass the literacy test.

"This is an emergency of extreme importance, as it may result in many new voters being disenfranchised this year unless ample provisions be made so that they can take the tests," said Superintendent Ettinger in his order. "I am sure that I can count upon you to do the work so well as to indicate that all schools are ready to meet the unexpected demand."

The court order served upon President John R. Voorhis of the Board of Elections yesterday not only reversed the order of Justice Wagner, but granted a motion for a peremptory writ of mandamus directing the Board of Elections to discontinue the practice of testing the literacy of new voters by reading fifty words and writing ten words of an extract from the State Constitution.

After a special meeting of the board and a conference with Russel M. Tarbox, Assistant Corporation Counsel, President Voorhis announced that the board would abide by the decision of the Appellate Division and not appeal to the Court of Appeals. The board also decided to send a letter to Police Commissioner Enright directing that the cards sent the election inspectors for holding the reading and writing test be withdrawn from the polling places.

Court's Order Obeyed.

In accordance with the decision of the Appellate Division, the board also decided to instruct the election inspectors that it would be unlawful to permit the registration or voting of new voters who have not obtained a certificate of literacy from the State Board of Regents or a certificate or diploma showing the completion of the work of an approved eighth grade elementary school or a higher school in which English is the language of instruction.

The order of the Appellate Division provides that the Board of Elections be directed to revoke any and all instructions, written or oral, given by them to election inspectors to conduct any test of the literacy of new voters in the places of registration by requiring such new voters to draw a slip upon which is printed an extract from the State Constitution, and to read aloud the matter contained thereon and to write any of the words on such slip.

President Voorhis said it was impossible to estimate accurately how many new voters will attempt to avail themselves of their franchise at the coming elections. He thought, however, that the number would be less than a thousand.

Representative F. H. LaGuardia appealed to the Citizens Union yesterday for consent to stay the effect of the Appellate Division declaring that thousands of citizens will be disfranchised because of the lateness of the decision.

Mr. Wallstein in his reply said:

"There is not the slightest basis for your fear that the decision of the Appellate Division in the literacy test case will mean the disfranchisement of thousands and thousands of taxpaying citizens of this city. * * * If the school authorities of this city will grant the requested co-operation there will thus be available even more than the ample opportunity, already provided, for new voters to obtain the necessary certificates. * * * So far as a stay of proceedings is concerned, neither the Corporation Counsel nor the Attorney General has requested my consent to any such stay. If and when such request is submitted, I shall be glad to consider it with my clients."

REGISTRATION LIGHT ON THE THIRD DAY

ALL DISTRICTS BEHIND

Yesterday's registration, the third day this year, continued to be light as compared with recent years, despite the anxiety of political leaders to get out a full registration. Practically every district in the city showed a falling off over the three-day totals of last year.

The total registration in the entire city yesterday was 108,698. The total for the three days this year was 364,786, a falling off of 62,515 from the first three days last year. Brooklyn passed Manhattan yesterday by 224. Manhattan's three-day total, however, exceeds the three-day total of Brooklyn by 1,482. The three-day total for the Bronx is 53,797; for Queens, 39,002, and Richmond, 8,475. The following table shows the registration for the past three days by Assembly districts, as compared with the three-day totals of last year, 1921 and 1920:

Wales Attends Montreal Hunt.

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 10.—Lord Renfrew came into Montreal today and immediately turned out to follow the hounds with the Montreal Hunt. The Prince motored back to Montreal from St. Augustine showing the effects of a happy day, but the happiness faded when, on entering the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, he found the rotunda filled with ladies who had been attending a bridge affair, and who insisted on applauding his entry. He avoided them by a quick rush upstairs to his rooms. The royal visitor will do some golfing tomorrow, and probably also take a hand at racquets or squash.

WILD STUDENT 'RAG' AS KIPLING SPEAKS

LAUDS INDEPENDENT MAN

Mingles Advice to Youth With Satire Drawn From Early History of the Race.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, Oct. 10.—Rudyard Kipling was installed today as Lord Rector of St. Andrews University in succession to Sir James Barrie, in the presence of a distinguished company including his cousin, Prime Minister Baldwin, upon whom a degree was conferred, and Lord Haig, who is Chancellor of the University.

The St. Andrews students indulged in the customary "ragging," marching through the streets singing barbaric songs and generally painted the town red.

But they reserved the noisiest outbreak for the installation ceremony. They stripped boots and socks from each other amid a deafening din and flung them high into the air. Barefooted men were tossed in blankets and blank pistol shots rang out like machine-gun fire.

There was a brief silence when Kipling was presented for his degree, but only for a moment, and then the storm broke out again, the students sending up a cry which must have been heard all over the city.

Kipling based his speech on Robert Burns's lines about the glorious privilege of being independent. He began by saying:

"The sole revenge that maturity can take upon youth for the sin of being young is to preach at it. When I was young I sat and suffered under that dispensation; now that I am older I propose, if you, my constituents, will permit me, to hand on the sacred torch of boredom."

He defined independence as meaning "Let every herring hang by its own head; it signifies the blessed state of hanging onto as few persons and things as possible and it leads up to the singular privilege of a man owning himself. The desire for independence has been up to the present an ineradicable human instinct, antedating even the social instinct."

Then tracing it from earliest beginnings, he told how the arboreal man sacrificed his independence by abandoning his family tree and associated with his neighbors for predatory or homicide purposes. He continued:

"When at last speech was born, what was the first particular use man made of it? Remembering he was by that time a past master in the art of camouflage known to beasts. He could hide near a water-hole and cato' them as they came down to drink, which is the germ of war. He could attract them by imitating their cries of distress or love, which is the genesis of most of the arts. He could double back on his tracks and thus circumvent the acquaintance of his own kind which was stalking him, which is obviously the origin of most of our social amenities. In short, he could act any kind of lie then extant.

Man's First Speech a Lie.

"I submit, therefore, that the first use man made of the new power of expression was to tell a lie—a frigid and calculated lie.

"Imagine the wonder and delight of the first liar in the world when he found that the first lie overwhelmingly outdid every effort of his old mud-and-grass camouflages with no expenditure of energy.

"Conceive his pride, his awe-stricken admiration of himself, when he saw that by mere word of mouth he could send his simpler companions shinning up trees in search of fruit that he knew was not there, and when they descended empty and angry, he could persuade them that they and not he were at fault, and could dispatch them hopefully up another tree. Can you blame the creature for thinking himself god?"

Kipling proceeded:

"Unfortunately, most fortunately, we have no record of the meeting of the world's first liar with the world's second liar, but from what we know of their descendants today they were probably of opposite sexes, married at once and began a numerous progeny."

"He will do, suffer and permit," he said, "anything rather than acknowledge it. He desires that waters which he has dug and canalized should run up hill by themselves when it suits him. He desires that numerals which he himself counted on his fingers and christened 2 and 2 shall make 3 and 5, according to the needs of moods. Why does he want this? Because subconsciously he still scales himself against his age-old companions, the beasts, who can only act lies. Man knows that at any moment he can tell a lie that for a while will delay or divert the workings of cause and effect. Being an animal who is still learning to reason, he does not yet understand why, with a little more or little louder lying, he should not be able permanently to break the chain of that law of cause and effect—the justice without the mercy—which he hates and have everything both ways in every relation of his life.

"In other words, we want to be independent of facts, for the younger we are, the more intolerant we are of those who tell us that this is impossible."

After referring to the young man's desire to express his independence of his tribe, Kipling spoke of the burdens of the present generation which the individual might wish to escape. He said:

"You who follow on the heels of the great war are affected as you are bound to be by demoralization not unlike that which overtakes a household where there has been a long and severe illness, following upon a civilization of domestic ritual and accompanied by a load of self-pity and large recrimination.

"Nor is this all your load. The past few years have so immensely quickened and emphasized all means of communication, while and invisible in every direction, that our world, which is only another name for the tribe, is not merely 'too much with us' but moves, shouts and moralizes about our path and our bed through every hour of our days and nights. A normal life would might become confusing on these terms and ours is far from being normal. One-sixth of its area has passed bodily out of civilization and much of the remainder appears to be divided, with no consciousness of sin, between the earnest attention to make earth a hell as soon as possible and the equally earnest intention, with no consciousness of presumption, to make it a heaven on or before the same date."

"Initial Payments" of Independence.

Kipling spoke finally of the need of restraint in youth and said:

"The intial payments of the policy of one's independence must be financed, by no means for publication but as a guarantee of good faith toward oneself, primarily out of drinks that one does not too continuously take, maidens in whom one does not too extravagantly rejoice, entertainments that one does not too strenuously attend or conduct, transportation one does not too magnificently employ, debts one does not too generally place and objects of beauty and desire that one does not too generously buy.

"Secondarily, those revenues can be added to by extra work undertaken at hours before or after one's regular work when one would infinitely rather rest or play. That involves the question of how far you can drive yourself without breaking down, and if you do not break down how soon you can recover and carry on again. This is for you to judge and to act accordingly. If you have a temperament that can accommodate itself to a cramping style while you are thus saving, you are lucky, but anyway you will be more less uncomfortable until it presently dawns on you that you have put enough by to give you food and housing for say one week ahead. After all, yourself is the only person you can by no possibility get away from in this life and maybe in another. It is worth a little pains and money to do good to him, for it is he and not our derivatively educated minds or our induced emotions who preserves in us the undefeated senior instinct of independence. You can test this by promising yourself not to do a thing and noticing the scandalous amount of special pleading that you have to go through with yourself if you break your promise."

Then preaching the principle, "At any price I can pay, let me own myself," Kipling concluded:

"And the price is worth paying, if you keep what you have bought, for the eternal question still is whether the profit of any concession that man makes to his tribe against the light that is in him outweighs or justifies his disregard of that light. A man may apply his independence to what is called worldly advantage and discover too late that he laboriously has made himself dependent on a mass of external conditions, for the maintenance of which he sacrificed himself. So he may be festooned with a whole haberdashy of success and go to his grave a castaway. Some men hold that the risk is worth taking; others do not. It is to these that I have spoken. 'Let the council of thy heart stand, for there is no man more faithful unto thee than it. For a man's mind is sometime wont to show him more than seven watchmen who sit above in a high tower.'"

BLAMES GOVERNMENTS FOR FAULTS OF LEAGUE

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Professor Gilbert Murray, writing to The London Times from the offices of the League of Nations Union in reply to Lord Grey's letter, says the letter is "a terrible indictment," but it is "an indictment not of the League but of the Governments of Europe who fail to observe their covenant."

He points out that by the League proposals accepted by all parties on Sept. 7 the terms of the Italian ultimatum "were reduced to decency and even to justice." He felt it would have been a signal success, but disaster came later when on Sept. 14 the Ambassadors added a new clause to the terms of settlement, and when on Sept. 26 they handed the whole 50,000,000 lire over to Italy without waiting for the report of the commission and the next day the Italians evacuated Corfu.

"The full facts are not known," says Professor Murray, "but the general impression is that Great Britain and France bribed the Italians to go, and bribed them with

ONE DEAD, ONE DYING IN A BOOTLEG DUEL

FIFTEEN SHOTS EXCHANGED

Sidewalk Quarrel Developed Rapidly Until Both Men Drew Automatics.

While men, women and children in a street in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn last night fled in fear to anything that looked like shelter, two men drew pistols and opened fire on each other. A minute later one was dead, the other lay dying, and two persons, a man and a boy, had dropped to the sidewalk, hit by stray bullets.

Just what it was that started the fight the police did not learn, although they gave as their opinion that it was a bootleggers' quarrel. They said they based their opinion on the discovery that one man had deposited $700 in a local bank about a week ago.

Michael Monteito of 136 Meserole Street and John Marcelli of 213 Montrose Avenue, both of Brooklyn, stood at Boerum and Humboldt Streets at about 8 o'clock. Witnesses told the police afterward that the two men talked quietly enough for a few minutes, but that as time went on their voices grew louder, until they attracted attention.

Suddenly, witnesses said, the men drew automatics and opened fire. As they did so every one near by scattered and the police did not find any one who could remember with any accuracy what happened next. They said that about fifteen shots were fired altogether.

Starting to shoot point blank at each other, the men drew slightly apart until about ten feet separated them. A pistol found beside the dead body of Monteito showed that he had fired every one of the seven cartridges he had in the chamber. As he fired the last one he fell into the hallway of 187 Boerum Street. Marcelli was found by Patrolman Quinn of the Stagg Street Police Station, who was the first on the scene, lying unconscious in the gutter.

A short distance from the fighting men John Mirable of 213 Johnson Avenue, a 15-year-old schoolboy, was sitting on a flight of steps. A bullet struck him in the right leg before he could get to cover and he rolled down the steps with a scream. John Behan of 678 Grand Street was walking by when the shooting started. Another bullet struck him in the left foot, and he, too, fell to the sidewalk in great pain.

Patrolman Quinn called the reserves and detectives from the police station and they corralled all the witnesses they could find, but none seemed to know much about what had happened.

Behan and the boy were rushed to St. Catherine's Hospital with Marcelli. There physicians said that Marcelli had little chance for recovery. They declared that he was able to talk after he reached there but refused to give any information. Dr. Vaughn of the District Attorney's staff hurried to the hospital with Assistant District Attorney Hart in an effort to get some information from Marcelli, but had little success. There was no doubt of the recovery of Behan and John Mirable, hospital authorities said.

PLEASE SAVE WATER

The unusually low rainfall during the past nine months, which has been 33% below normal, has resulted in water shortages throughout the Eastern States.

Even our reserve supply in storage has been reduced to a minimum beyond which it is not safe to go.

We are, therefore, compelled to notify our consumers that it will be necessary for them to exercise the utmost economy in the use of water in order to avert the serious consequences of a water famine.

Unless consumers commence at once to co-operate with the Company in conserving the supply it will be necessary within a few days to discontinue service for a portion of each day.

Construction work in progress last winter, which it was impossible on account of the early drought to complete in time to store the ordinary Spring rains, is now complete and will be available for storage purposes during the ensuing year, thus protecting the supply against future shortage.

Please, therefore, save water in every possible way until abundant rain falls, and ask your neighbors to do the same. We explain

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Pressure has continued to fall slowly over the western Caribbean Sea, the lowest pressure reported at 8 P. M. Wednesday night, being 29.66 inches at Tela, Honduras. Pressure has also fallen during the last twenty-four hours over practically the entire United States, but it was still relatively high Wednesday night east of the Mississippi River. There have been showers within the last twenty-four hours in the western Plain States, the Rocky Mountain and northern plateau regions, Southern Texas, the Florida Peninsula and in New York and portions of the Middle Atlantic States.

The temperature was slightly higher Wednesday almost generally east of the Mississippi, and it was low over the Lake Superior region.

The outlook is for generally fair weather, without material change in temperature, Thursday and Friday in the Atlantic and East Gulf States, Tennessee, the Ohio Valley and the lower lake region, except showers are probable in extreme Southern Florida and considerable cloudiness in the North Atlantic States.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Yesterday's markets of all descriptions appeared to be dominated by speculators who were much confused in their own calculations. The stock market oscillated backward and forward, ending with an array of wholly irregular changes for the day. Wheat and corn, which had declined 1 to 2 cents a bushel or thereabouts the day before, regained most or all of the loss in yesterday's market. In cotton the "argument" of shortage in supply had its turn in dominating prices, after a week in which the curtailment of mill demand had been the controlling influence. There has not often been a time when the movement of practically every speculative market presented so evident a picture of conflicting expectations and confusion of ideas.

For the most part, this uncertainty arises from doubt as to the ultimate consumer's attitude toward prices. There was a time last Spring, during the period of prediction for an "inflation market" in the Autumn, when it appeared to be assumed that the consuming public was in a mood which would lead it to pay whatever prices should be asked. But no evidence in the least convincing was produced for this. The prophets were misled by the sight of middlemen and retailers bidding up prices moderately in their effort to replenish quickly their deficient stocks. Every test of the ultimate consumer's attitude which has been applied this year has gone to show that, while ready and able to buy goods in increased quantity, he was not in the least subject to the delusions of 1920. It is possible to interpret such an attitude as meaning continuance of normal trade over a longer period than has been usual in the other post-war "business revivals," with absence of the sudden abandonment of the market by consumers which occurred on those previous occasions.

The foreign exchange market reflected the same vacillation of ideas as the other markets did. The mark continued its rapid flight toward zero; at yesterday's low price the dollar would buy nearly 5½ billion marks, against 3 billion at the previous lowest.

The contrasting influences in the industrial situation were again brought into sharp relief by two statements published yesterday. One was the report of orders on the Steel Corporation's books at the beginning of October, which showed decrease of 7 per cent. in such tonnage as compared with a month before and reduction of 32 per cent. as compared with the present year's maximum, reached at the end of February. The other was the record of cars loaded on the railways during the last week of September, which reached the highest point of our railway history and marked the fifteenth "million-car week" in 1923, whereas only seven such weekly records had been achieved in our entire railway history up to the present year. It will still be a natural comment that the traffic just now carried on the railways is the sequel to the very large business placed for future delivery months ago, whereas the steel trade order-books are an indication of diminishing business in the next few months. Yet even the unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation reflect in a way the maintenance of consumers' activity; for the estimate of The Iron Age is that the corporation is today turning out steel on the average at 90 per cent. of capacity—a rate which would naturally reduce the unfilled total, unless new orders were correspondingly greater than in an ordinary normal season. As for the "car-loadings," we shall soon have an opportunity to test the scope of mercantile reaction. The high point of traffic is invariably reached during October; after which month the extent of the weekly decrease from the maximum shows what tendencies are at work.

Time money market was quiet, with fair demand at 5¼ per cent. for 30-day accommodation, 5½ per cent. being bankers' rate for later maturities. No changes were reported in discount or conditions in business money markets.

PROTEST RESERVE OF PACIFIC COAST CO.

Shareholders Call on Directors to Apply $288,788 to Dividends.

A group of stockholders of the Pacific Coast Company, led by Jefferson M. Levy, who is one of the largest stockholders, at the annual meeting yesterday in Jersey City called on the Board of Directors to pay back into the treasury the $288,788 set aside during the last fiscal year for depreciation and completion. The demand was made in a resolution submitted by Mr. Levy which stated in effect that there was not justification for the carrying of the additional reserves and that they should be applied toward the payment of dividends on the first and second preferred stock of the company. The board's policy was criticised as being responsible for the comparatively low sale price of the company's securities. The resolution after being seconded was recorded on the minutes without a stock vote. Washington E. Thomas of Boston, his nephew, Joseph B. Thomas, and Albert H. Wiggin, President of the Chase National Bank, were elected directors.

The report of the company for the fiscal year shows gross earnings of $6,021,000, an increase of $1,972,717 over 1922, while operating expenses increased $862,793 to $5,560,000. The net betterment was $708,923. The 1922 deficit of $712,406 was cut to $40,823.

FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Trading was quiet and prices firm on the Stock Exchange today. Old 2½ per cent. consols 55⅝, British 5 per cent. war loan 101⅝, 4½ per cent. war loan 90, all unchanged.

Rand Mines unchanged at 2⅞. De Beers Mining ¼ lower at 12⅛.

PARIS, Oct. 10.—Prices moved irregularly on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes unchanged at 56 francs 0 centimes; 5 per cent. war loan 5 centimes lower at 74 francs 85 centimes.

Exchange on London 30 centimes lower at 75 francs 10 centimes per sovereign; American dollars were quoted at 16 francs 42 centimes, against 16.53½ yesterday.

Copper Quoted at 12¾ Cents.

The quotation for copper in the New York market yesterday was 12¾ cents per pound, this figure representing the settling price of the New York Metal Exchange. The official settling price of the previous day was 12⅝ cents per pound. The report in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday that copper had sold in the local market at 11.87 cents cash was an error. So far as can be learned, no producer is willing to sell domestic copper under 13 cents.

CAR LOADINGS SET NEW HIGH RECORD

Freight Traffic Reaches Highest Point in Railway History, Report Shows.

Car loadings of 1,097,374 for the week ended Sept. 29, reported yesterday by the American Railway Association, were the largest in the history of the railroads. The previous high record of 1,092,567 was made in the last week of August this year. The merchandise and miscellaneous loadings of 646,185 cars were 21,428 more than the previous week, and an increase of 65,590 cars over the same week of last year.

Increases were shown in the loadings of coal, forest products and grain, while decreases were registered in ore, live stock and coke.

The high record for 1922 was made in the week of Oct. 28, when 1,014,490 cars were loaded. The high record for all time previous to this year was made in the week of Oct. 14, 1920, when 1,018,539 cars were loaded.

Charcoal Iron Company's Earnings.

For the first six months of the current year the Charcoal Iron Company of America showed net earnings, before depreciation, of $56,784. The company has just called for redemption Nov. 1 bonds in the amount of $100,000.

$1,320,000 FROM FUR SALE.

Prices of Lynx and Wolf Pelt Offerings Are Cut.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 10.—Sales at the Fur Merchants' Sales Company and the Fouke Fur Company, which concluded their Fall auction today, totalled $1,320,000. The auction began Monday.

Today's sales indicated a 10 per cent. reduction in lynx, wolverine, wolf and timber wolf.

Phillip B. Fouke, President of the Fouke Company, in a statement, asserted the market is on a sound basis as speculation has been eliminated and buyers are making purchases to meet present needs.

Paris buyers report business as satisfactory, the statement concluded.

SHELL-UNION OIL DIVIDEND.

Two Million Shares of Common Is Offered to Stockholders.

Directors of the Shell-Union Oil Company yesterday offered to common stockholders of record on Oct. 22 the right to subscribe to 2,000,000 shares of additional no par value common stock at $10 a share on the basis of one additional share for each four shares now held.

The company has 10,000,000 shares of common stock authorized of which 8,000,000 are issued. A large portion of the stock is held by the Royal Dutch-Shell group. A regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 on the preferred stock, payable Nov. 15, was declared.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Stocks Again Lower.

The stock market encountered fresh attacks yesterday, in which prices for practically all shares on the list gave ground rather easily. Railroad shares, as well as the industrials, appeared to be equally heavy, although the chief weakness which developed on the Exchange centred about the copper shares. In the end there were not many important changes of prices for the day; not declines of a point or more occurring mostly in scattered individual stocks which were selected for special "drives." Trading was not large nor very broad and as a matter of fact, after the world series ball game had started, there was considerably more interest, even on the floor of the Stock Exchange, in the progress of the ball game than in the progress of the market. About the best that could be said for the day's entire affair was that it was heavy and draggy and appeared to be entirely without initiative of any sort. There has been no change whatever in the character of the trading in the first three days of the week. It represents almost exclusively the pull and haul of professional operations.

German Mark and German Finance.

Yesterday's fall of the mark's purchasing power, measured in dollars or cents, to little more than one-third what it was on Tuesday and less than one-tenth what it was a week ago, attracted little interest. The figures published yesterday, showing that Germany, despite the valueless condition of her paper marks, has been able to finance the purchase of more cotton and copper during 1923 than any other foreign country, called forth the remark by one international banker that Germany, besides possessing large credit reserves in this country and others, also occupies the unique position of having practically no internal Government indebtedness, no overhanging railroad indebtedness and no big industrial indebtedness. The Government, its railroads and its industries have been able to pay off existing obligations with depreciated paper. As a result, it was suggested, Germany now occupies a position that many other rich and prosperous countries might envy. On the other side of the ledger appears the big external debt problem of Germany with regard to its obligations to the victors of the recent war; a question which, while still unsettled as to details, appears more and more to be attaining a status where it can be solved and the actual terms fixed.

September Railroad Earnings.

Predictions were being freely made in the railroad district yesterday that earnings for the month of September, to be announced within the next few days, will show a highly favorable return, the anthracite roads being the exception. Despite the anthracite strike the car loadings for the month were well in excess of the 4,200,000 mark, and the early reports indicate that the movement has been general. Northwestern roads, judging from their traffic, should show a more favorable increase. The anthracite roads, though, are expected to show a decline when compared with August, since scarcely a carload of that fuel was loaded for the first two-thirds of the month. There are instances, however, like that of the Erie, where the movement of the fruit and vegetable crop has been so large that it may make up partially for the loss in the coal traffic.

A Speculator's Position.

A great deal of interest has been evidenced in speculative circles of Wall Street as to the attitude of Jesse L. Livermore on the stock market on his return from Europe. Mr. Livermore arrived in this country yesterday on the Majestic, and at once refuted rumors that he planned to quit the stock market for good. "I have no intention of staying out of the stock market," he said. "I have always traded in cotton and grain and I intend to continue to do so. I intend to go back into the stock market in three or four weeks' time, after I get my bearings and look over the situation. I haven't changed my opinion any from last April, and I still think we have a bear market. But there are a number of stocks which I think have reached resistance points." The difficulty about following this diagnosis, it was remarked in Wall Street yesterday, was due to the question just what stocks are at "the resistance point."

United States Steel Bookings.

The statement by the United States Steel Corporation, revealing a reduction of 378,918 tons in forward bookings as of Sept. 30, was about in line with Wall Street expectation, and there was quite a disposition in the financial district to interpret this statement as optimistic because of the fact that it exhibited a smaller decline than at the end of the previous month. The steel orders at the end of September amounted to 5,035,750 tons as compared with 5,691,607 tons last September, 4,560,670 tons in September, 1921, 10,374,804 tons in September, 1920, and 6,284,486 tons in September, 1919. The fact is not overlooked in the financial district, however, that forward business now on the books is the lowest since March, 1922. In consideration of these figures, it was hardly thought likely in Wall Street that the 90 per cent. ratio of operations, now in effect in the Steel Corporation's plants will be obtained unless there should be a change of importance in the scale of incoming business.

More Railroad Financing.

With the recent upturn in prices of railroad securities, new bond issues of railroad companies have occupied a somewhat more favorable position than most of industrial and municipal issues that have been brought out, in the opinion of several bankers, who suggested yesterday that considerable more railroad financing remains to be done before the turn of the year. Among these prospective issues is one for $15,000,000 of bonds to cover the costs of the new St. Paul, Minn., passenger terminal. Differences between railroads that are party to the proposition were reported yesterday to have been cleared away and the path opened for permanent financing of the project. Despite the improved earnings of carriers during 1923, it still would appear that bankers find it expedient to raise new money through the sale of bonds rather than of stock, although executives of both railroads and of financing institutions have suggested that in 1924 or 1925, at the latest, the carriers will be forced by necessity to make new stock issues in the interest of holding down the heavy burden of carrying a large funded indebtedness.

Municipal Debt and Credit.

The necessity of maintaining a jealous guard over a city's credit rating has been indicated several times this year when, because of fear that the debt limit as engrossed by New York State law in order to render bonds in the "legal investment" class might be exceeded, bankers have in several instances declined to bid on new issues of notes or bonds favored by the cities in question. In the case of Detroit, the action taken by that city's officials has been particularly interesting because, realizing the importance of a high credit rating, officials have now determined to cut down new financing to the bone in order to keep the city's credit at the standard previously set up. Approximately $146,500,000 of Detroit bonds are held by investors who will be benefited by the announced policy of the city, and, needless to say, the city's determination to preserve its credit structure on the "legal investment" foundation has proven decidedly comforting to them, particularly after the refusal of bankers some months ago to bid on a new prospect short-term issue and the inconvenience that resulted from that refusal.

3 Reasons

for Public Utility Bonds

1. Practically constant demand for services in good times and bad.
2. Freedom from labor troubles — no costly strikes.

Beginning March 22, the Stock Exchange officially quotes Liberty bonds in units and fractions, the fractions being 32nds of a unit, and the quotations after the decimal point representing one or more 32nds. In the above table, therefore, the figures of highest and lowest prices during 1923 and since date of issue are reduced to the form now used in the Stock Exchange quotations.

Approximately $11,000,000 of additional 8 per cent. convertible preferred stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company was offered to the holders of the common stock in notices sent out yesterday. The stock is to be sold, subject to the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Under the plan each holder of common stock will be entitled to subscribe at par for the preferred stock equal in amount to 10 per cent. of the holdings registered in his name at the close of business Oct. 23. The stock is to be paid for in two installments of 50 per cent. each, one on Dec. 1, and the other on March 1, 1924. Interest at the rate of 6 per cent. will be paid on the installments paid on or before Dec. 1.

The proceeds of the sale will be used in furthering the construction of the Chicago Terminal, which when completed will cost approximately $82,000,000. This is the second of the preferred stock issues to be sold for this purpose, the other being for between $10,000,000 and $11,000,000.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

After several days of substantial gains, during which French and Belgian francs took the lead, European exchanges broke badly yesterday. Explanations for the decline included receipt of lower quotations from abroad and cumulative sales by previous small buyers who were taking profits. At the day's low of 6.00½ cents Paris checks showed an overnight loss of 15½ points, while sterling was 7-16 cent lower at $4.54¾. Italian, Belgian, Spanish and Holland, with other Continentals, all shared in the recession. There was not nearly the same volume in French as was done on Tuesday, which was tremendously heavy, the turnover falling off with the decline.

The German mark recorded another drop to a record low figure at 5,700,000,000 marks for the dollar, which compared with 2,000,000,000 on Tuesday and 370,000,000 a week ago. Dealers in German marks reported only a small buy from small commercial buyers, and a few selling orders from abroad.

FIGHTS FREIGHT CUT ON FARM PRODUCTS

QUOTES INCOME RECORDS

Answering Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Senator Capper and other advocates of reduced freight rates on farm products, Julius Kruttschnitt, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Southern Pacific Company, declared yesterday in an address before the New York Board of Trade and Transportation at its fifty-first annual meeting, that "to carry out the views of these men connected with the Government would bankrupt every railroad in the country." He referred specifically to the 25 per cent. reduction on agricultural products intended for export, suggested by Secretary Wallace to President Coolidge the latter part of September and supported by certain members of Congress.

In reply to the statements made by these officials, including that of Senator Capper, who said that "lowering of freight rates is one of the most important steps toward remedying agricultural conditions," Mr. Kruttschnitt said:

"In 1921 the net railway operating income of Class 1 carriers was in round numbers $601,000,000. A reduction of 25 per cent. in freight rates would amount to $961,000,000, so that such a reduction would have left the railroads with no operating income and confronted with the necessity of finding $360,000,000 elsewhere. In 1922 net railway operating income, in round numbers, was $760,000,000, whereas a 25 per ctnt. reduction in freight rates would amount to $1,001,000,000; that is, net operating income would have been wiped out and the roads left with a deficit of $241,000,000. In other words, to carry out the views of these men connected with the Government would bankrupt every railroad in the country.

Farm Value of Wheat.

"The farm value of the Spring and Winter wheat of 1922 is given in the United States Department of Agriculture Year Book as $864,139,000. On the theory of those who would advance the price of wheat by lowering freight rates a 14 per cent. increase in the price of wheat would add $120,000,000. Interstate Commerce Commission Paper 23,157 shows that the total freight revenue received by the railroads for carrying wheat was $119,499,000. It is therefore apparent that to add 14 per cent. to the price of wheat the railroads would have to carry the entire product for nothing."

Mr. Kruttschnitt asserted that the new records set by the railroads so far this year in movement of freight were convincing evidence "that freight rates are not, and have not been, an embargo upon the movement of farm products." He said that when the arguments of the proponents of rate reductions are met they shift their ground and assert, without much knowledge of their facts, "that such wonderful economies could be effected by consolidation that it should be brought about at once, at all costs."

He referred to the railroads' experience under Government control, pointing out that it cost $1.17 to save every dollar of corporate officers' salaries eliminated by the Federal Railroad Administration during that period.

As to the benefits to be expected from the proposed consolidations, Mr. Kruttschnitt said that thousands of joint track agreements existed before Federal control and exist now, and that joint use of terminals is seldom, if ever, refused where sufficient capacity for more than one owning line exists.

More Trade With Mexico.

Mr. Kruttschnitt reported that the completion of the Southern Pacific Railroad of Mexico was now assured and would open to development large areas of Mexico having extensive farming and mining resources, and that the manufacturers and merchants of the United States should be the chief beneficiaries.

Alfred Kohns, President of the board, told of his travels abroad last Summer. His observations had convinced him, he said, that there was so much racial hatred and politics in Central Europe that if the United States ever got into the quarrel it would never get out. The collapse of the paper mark has proved a windfall for German manufacturers, he said, with the result that they are in better position to compete with other nations than they were before the war.

The board adopted a resolution recommending that the Ferris amendment, which would permit the construction of conduits and appurtenances necessary for the development of waterpower within the State's forest preserve, be disapproved by the people at the election next November. The board declared that "all power plants necessary to the welfare of the State for many years to come may be developed by the construction of reservoirs within the forest reserve as now permitted, and the power developed therefrom on the streams below, outside this forest, without opening them to destruction by transmission lines."

SIZER STEEL TO GO ON.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Federal Judge John M. Hazel signed an order today authorizing receivers in equity to issue certificates for $50,000 to continue operation of the Sizer Steel Corporation's plants in Buffalo and Syracuse until Dec. 31. John G. Dillon of Buffalo was appointed co-receiver at the request of stockholders, creditors and receivers.

The corporation went into receivership July 3. Liabilities were reported as $2,000,000, approximately $1,500,000 in secured mortgages. Assets were in excess of liabilities. At that time C. B. Porter, President of the company, and S. F. Hancock, a Syracuse lawyer, were named as receivers.

Today's order followed consent of the creditors for further operation after the receivers had obtained an order on Sept. 25 to show cause why the assets should not be sold.

STEEL ORDERS GAIN; DELIVERIES FASTER

PRODUCTION KEPT STEADY

Decline of Bookings Since March Has Had Little Effect at the Plants.

The United States Steel Corporation's figures on unfilled tonnage as of Sept. 30, announced yesterday, were 5,085,750 tons, as compared with 5,414,663 tons on Aug. 31. On July 31 unfilled orders aggregated 5,910,763 tons; on June 30, 1923, 6,396,261 tons; and on Sept. 30, 1922, 6,691,607 tons.

The September tonnage statement indicates that the United States Steel Corporation's incoming business for the month was between 750,000 and 800,000 tons, as compared with less than 700,000 tons in August. New business received since Oct. 1 has been correspondingly larger than in the same period of September. One of the significant features of the present steel situation is the manner in which production figures have been maintained despite gradually declining bookings. Since the end of March the United States Steel Corporation's unfilled orders have declined from 7,425,332 tons to 5,085,750 tons, or approximately 32 per cent., while operations of the corporation's mills have declined from around 97 to but a shade under 90 per cent., or about 7½ per cent.

The tonnage statement of the United States Steel Corporation is considered in the financial district a very accurate gauge of monthly changes in the steel industry.

RAILROAD BUYING SPURS STEEL TRADE

PIG IRON PRICES LOWER

Weakness Due to Overproduction—Steel Corporation at 90 Per Cent. Capacity.

Railroad buying continues to be the backbone of the iron and steel industry, and leading journals of the trade, in their weekly reviews, note that the appearance of railroad inquiries have produced a more cheerful sentiment in the trade over prospects for the immediate future. The pig iron market is lower because of overproduction. The Iron Age comments as follows:

"The appearance of the largest railroad car inquiries that have come out since the early months of the year has produced a more cheerful view of steel market prospects. Leading steel producers at the same time report bookings of finished material for the first week of October at a rate slightly better than the September average.

"Operations by the Steel Corporation are at 93 per cent. of capacity in the Chicago district and at 88 per cent. for the Carnegie Steel Company, with an average close to 90 per cent. Independent companies in the Pittsburgh, Youngstown and Wheeling districts are still running at 70 to 75 per cent.

"The better outlook for railroad buying is dwelt on, because present steel prices have been considered too high to encourage contracting on a large scale. It remains to be seen what concessions will be made to the car makers and what economies the latter can enforce to keep their prices within bounds.

"The Southern Pacific has led off with an inquiry for 8,730 freight cars, 152 passenger cars, 58 locomotives and 5,000 refrigerator cars. For the Union Pacific, also, large purchases are planned. The St. Louis & San Francisco is in the market for 2,500 cars and the Baltimore & Ohio for 1,400, and the Chesapeake & Ohio inquiry may reach 4,000. All told, the steel trade expects soon to have before it plate and other requirements for a total of 40,000 cars."

A summary by the Iron Trade Review says:

"With the exception of pig iron, which plainly is suffering from overproduction and is weak, the iron and steel market shows a measure of general improvement this week. Buyers still are extremely cautious and not disposed to discount the future, but are pressing requirements based on the continuing large consumption, forcing them into market in a moderate way. This situation is reflected in practically all leading products and more so this week than in some time. As prospects have been shaping up more definitely, some of the recent pessimism now is shown to have been manifestly overdrawn, and is disappearing.

"Ingot output for the whole country in September declined to a daily rate of approximately 152,584 tons, compared with 156,214 tons in August, a loss of 2.79 per cent. The decrease in August was 3.3, in July 2.5, in June 7.1 per cent. Ingot production in September was at an annual rate of 41,101,000 tons.

"The promised revival of railroad equipment buying has progressed toward fulfillment with the appearance of new inquiries for 4,500 cars; these include 2,500 for the St. Louis & San Francisco, 1,000 for the Baltimore & Ohio and 500 tons for the Chicago & Alton. The Southern Pacific is expected to be actively in the market shortly for 14,000 cars. Western roads are in the market for heavy quantities of track supplies."

STOPS FIRM SELLING STOCK.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 10.—The Angola Tire & Rubber Company of Buffalo and its subsidiaries have agreed by corporate stipulation to cease selling stock and memberships as the result of investigation and action of the Attorney General's department, Attorney General Carl Sherman announced today.

Investigation of the company's affairs, under authority of the Martin anti-bucketeering law, the announcement said, disclosed that the Angola Company, incorporated in 1917 with a capital of $1,000,000 to manufacture automobile tires and accessories, never has manufactured either, but to Dec. 31 of last year has sold $756,000 worth of stock.

Alfred C. Bidwell of Buffalo, directing force of the company, it was explained persuaded the officers of the tire firm to create in Erie County the Angola Sales Company, a selling agent for parent company stock, Bidwell to receive commissions of 40 and 5 per cent. on sales. Evidence indicated he had received $43.56 out of every $100.

SINCLAIR TO PAY DIVIDEND.

Directors Declare Regular Quarterly Amount for Common and Preferred.

Directors of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation yesterday declared the regular quarterly dividends of 50 cents a share on the common stock and $2 on the preferred.

Reports in the financial district were to the effect that the common stock dividend might be passed, and yesterday's announcement surprised speculators who had sold stock of the company in anticipation of the rumored passing of the dividend.

Wants to Market Copper.

Permission to sell independent of the Copper Export Association copper which it is marketing on contract for smaller producers who are not members of the association, has been asked of the association by the American Smelting and Refining Company. No action on the request has been taken. The smelting company is said to have expressed its desire to continue as a member of the association, but feels that its hands should not be tied in the matter of disposing of copper through contract for small companies.

RED PEASANT UNION LAUNCHED IN MOSCOW

Communists Form an International Body in Which America Is Represented.

MOSCOW, Oct. 10.—The "First International Peasants' Conference," which the Moscow press compares in potential importance with the first conference in 1919 of the leading organization of the Third International, opened in the Kremlin today with 160 delegates present from twenty countries, including the United States, Argentina and Mexico. Its object is the creation of a world-wide peasant farmers' body, comparable to the Red trade unions.

Various Communist leaders have been visiting the Russian Agricultural Exposition here and impressing upon the thousands of peasants attending the fair the necessity of a peasants' union, warning them that their aid may be needed in the event Germany becomes a base for reactionary operation against Soviet Russia. Karl Radek, addressing one meeting of 5,000 peasants, declared peace only could be guaranteed "when our enemies know we are not afraid of war."

LINK UP SENEGAL RAILWAY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 10.—The Thies-Kayes Junction of the Senegal railway system has been completed, providing continuous rail contact between the ocean and the navigable portion of the Niger River, it was announced today. The newly completed stretch is 907 kilometres long and cost 104,000,000 francs.

The completion of the line should prove a great boon to the French Sudan, which now has only forty hours from Port Darkar. The Sudan is admirably suited to cotton raising and the French can look forward to big development in this industry in a few years.

BANKERS TRUST COMPANY, NEW YORK, TRUSTEE

HISTORY AND BUSINESS: Utilities Coal Corporation is incorporated under the laws of the State of Illinois, and owns, leases and operates mines located in Illinois, Kentucky and West Virginia. The output of these mines has primarily been sold to public utility companies which are operating subsidiaries of Commonwealth Power Corporation, a substantial part of whose coal requirements are supplied from these mines.

SECURITY: The bonds, in the opinion of counsel, will be secured by a First (Closed) Mortgage on all the property of the Coal Corporation now owned or hereafter acquired, and as additional security the contracts hereinafter mentioned will be assigned to and deposited with the Trustee.

CONTRACTS: Contracts extending beyond the life of these bonds have been entered into with Consumers Power Company (Michigan), Central Illinois Light Company and The Springfield (Ohio) Light, Heat & Power Company, subsidiaries of Commonwealth Power Corporation.

Under the terms of the contracts coal will be billed to these utility companies monthly at production cost plus a profit and under no circumstances can the revenue to the Coal Corporation so derived be less than $77,000 in any six months' period, regardless of the amount of coal mined and shipped. This profit will be applicable to the service of the bonds, the maximum amount required for principal and interest in any six months' period being $71,150. Payments under these contracts are operating charges of the contracting utility companies, which have obligated themselves for a minimum annual revenue to the Coal Corporation of $154,000.

EARNINGS: Annual net earnings of the Coal Corporation as shown by Arthur Andersen & Company, Public Accountants, after allowance for depreciation and depletion for the past five years were as follows:

1919	244,901	1922	266,509
1920	513,006	1923*	316,527

*Twelve months ended July 31

The average net earnings for the five-year period above equals approximately $325,000, or at the rate of over 3.7 times annual interest charges of $87,500 on these bonds.

THE CONTRACTING COMPANIES: The following is a record of the gross and net earnings of the contracting companies for the year ended December 31, 1922:

Total Operating Expenses and Taxes	8,282,989.51	1,865,638.61	621,264.45	10,769,839.57

BUILDING DECLINED DURING SEPTEMBER

Drop in Eastern States Was Nearly Made Up in the West, However.

YEAR'S TOTAL IS HIGHER

Construction in America Thus Far in 1923 Is Near $3,000,000,000 Mark.

Contrary to predictions based on preliminary returns of building for September, the total for the month will fall below August, according to Bradstreet's report on building conditions in 152 cities. The total value of construction in these cities in September was $198,942,935, as against $224,624,218 in identical cities in August and $181,369,342 in the same cities in September last year.

In making a comparison the review emphasizes that there were two more business days in August than in September. Building has increased in the Central Western and the Southwestern States, but has declined in the rest of the country.

New England	$9,448,979	$10,149,727

New York, Los Angeles, Detroit, Cleveland and San Francisco showed decreases compared with August, while Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Milwaukee and Minneapolis show gains. The leading cities show great irregularity.

The month-by-month record of building in the leading cities throughout the United States for the first nine months of this year follows:

OPPOSE ONE CONTROL FOR ARMY AND NAVY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—An adverse report will be submitted to President Coolidge by the Joint Board, composed of high officers of the army and navy, if its opinion is asked upon the proposed amalgamation of the War and Navy Departments into a Department of National Defense. Such a consolidation is contemplated in the plan for reorganizing the Federal departments, which, it is expected, will be laid before the Cabinet shortly.

Informal consideration of the proposal was said officially today to have convinced members of the board that, while it might make for some economy in expenditures, there would be a material sacrifice of mobility and therefore of efficiency. Since the time element is considered by both army and navy experts to be a vital factor in any scheme of national defense, it was added, any move which would hamper an opportunity for early victory in a war will have their united opposition.

The Joint Board at present includes General Pershing, chief of staff; Maj. Gen. John L. Hines, deputy chief of staff; Maj. Gen. B. H. Wells, chief of the Army War Plans Division; Admiral E. W. Eberle, chief of naval operations; Rear Admiral R. H. Jackson, assistant chief, and Rear Admiral W. R. Shoemaker, director of war plans in the Navy Department.

The proposed consolidation was said to have almost an exact parallel in the project put forward during President Washington's Administration, when responsibility for the navy was vested in the War Department. The result was so unsatisfactory, according to a study made by a Joint Board, that in 1798 a committee of Congress recommended that the consolidation be discontinued and the Secretary of War concurred, recommending the separation of the two establishments.

FLIES BABY PLANE CHEAPLY.

LYMPNE, England, Oct. 10.—In an effort to reach the ideal of one hundred miles on a gallon of petrol, which is the goal several pilots in the motor glider competition here have set for themselves, one competitor today flew ninety and a half miles in a baby plane using only a gallon of fuel. The cost of the flight was less than one farthing per mile.

The feature of the trials thus far appears to be the reliability of the little machines, which are doing all sorts of stunts and long distance flights even in the face of high winds. One exploit arousing comment was that of a pilot who made a low-speed flight at an average of 33 miles an hour, with his machine at all times under perfect control.

Increase in Denatured Alcohol.

Production of denatured alcohol has increased from 3,312,478 wine gallons in 1907-8 to 33,290,166 in 1922, according to the American Chemical Society. Of the 117 formulas for denaturing alcohol which have come into existence since 1906, more than half have been devised since the World War, largely since prohibition, a survey by the society disclosed.

For the man who looks ahead

OF late you hear less enthusiasm for the "man of quick decisions." Business is more involved and on a bigger scale than ever before. Snap judgments are unsafe.

In making decisions which shape the future of your business, you need all the light you can get on the road ahead. The condition of business six months from today is determined by economic and business forces now at work.

Signals for those who can read them

A scientific method for analyzing and interpreting these forces has been worked out by the economists of Harvard University. The system was thoroughly tested before being offered to the public under the name of the Harvard Economic Service.

For four years, leading manufacturers, bankers, merchants and professional men have availed themselves of this Service. Every important turn in business, including the acute depression of 1920, has been forecast six to ten months in advance.

In your own case

It should be worth your while to look into the value of the Harvard Economic Service to you and to learn what other men you know of think of it.

Write us for our descriptive booklet and samples of the weekly bulletins. We shall send them to you without cost or obligation.

MAJESTIC ARRIVES, DELAYED BY A GALE

SENATOR COUZENS ABOARD

Even More a Foe of Prohibition, and Thinks Congressmen Are Overpaid.

When the White Star liner Majestic arrived yesterday from Southampton and Cherbourg with 1,828 passengers, 7,000 sacks of mail and $2,500,000 gold specie on board, Captain Sir Bertram Hayes, D. S. O., R. N. R., made what he called a ferryboat docking. He had the big liner made fast at pier 59 North River without once touching the pier.

The ship was twenty-four hours late through having had to wait outside Cherbourg harbor while a gale blew at 70 miles and sent great seas over the breakwater.

Among the 761 first cabin passengers were 52 passengers from the Cunarder Scythia which was in collision on Sunday, Sept. 30, with the White Star liner Cedric outside Queenstown and had to return to Liverpool with a large hole in her starboard side forward. The passengers said they put lifebelts on and mustered at the lifeboats, but there was no panic.

Two British subjects in the first cabin were detained because the British quota was exhausted. Mrs. Peggy Shadd, wife of the chief engineer of the West Wann, who is an American, could not land because she was English born and had been married only six months. The other was Miss E. M. Keen, an attractive young English girl who came over to marry Charles R. Stewart, manager of the MacPherson Steel Pipe Manufacturing Company of Fort Worth, Texas. The cases of both the young women will be decided by Commissioner Curran today. In the meantime they will remain on the Majestic.

Among the passengers was United States Senator James Couzens, Republican, of Michigan, who returned from Europe, where he has been on a Congressional Forestation Committee since July. He is still against Prohibition, as he was when he sailed from this side, because he claims it is unsound and cannot be enforced. He is a friend of Henry Ford and said if Ford was nominated for President on any ticket he would be elected.

"The liquor question is not settled," said Senator Couzens. "My secretary assembled for me voluminous material on alcoholic contents of wine and beer while we were abroad. The principal reason we cannot enforce prohibition is that the people do not want it. The trouble is that we have too many Congressmen who think more of their jobs than they do of the welfare of their country."

The Senator did not think that Congressmen should receive more pay. In his opinion they were well paid now. Nearly every one in Europe, he said, knew that Stinnes was bargaining with the French industrialists over the head of the German Government. He said he thought that the United States should take a sympathetic stand in European affairs, but not enter the World Court.

Another passenger was Dudley Field Malone, former Collector of the Port and now a lawyer in Paris, returned with Mrs. Malone to spend two months here.

Gordon Selfridge, the American-born British merchant, arrived on a business visit and said that one of the best signs of the times was the better feeling now existing between the United States and England.

Jesse Livermore, stock broker, was another passenger, as was Francis M. Pickett, an English capitalist, who said the Governments of England, France and Belgium [illegible] after the war. He said his firm already had broken up 6,000,000 tons of munitions.

The Countess of Granard arrived with her four children and was met at the pier by her father, Ogden Mills. Percy Chubb, marine insurance broker; Judge Francis Kernochan, Pendleton and Dr. J. A. Hartwell, Professor of Surgery at Cornell Medical College, also were on board. The Majestic had 761 first, 650 second and 417 third class passengers.

RECORD HEAVY EARTHQUAKE

TORONTO, Oct. 10.—Distinct earthquake tremors, approximately 3,000 miles distant in a southwesterly direction, were recorded on the seismograph at the observatory here early today.

Commencing at 2:18 o'clock, the greatest intensity was reached between 2:22 and 2:40, with slight tremors continuing until 3:46.

WEST BROMWICH, England, Oct. 10.—The seismograph instrument here registered an earthquake shock at 2:18 o'clock this morning. The tremors lasted several seconds.

DUBLIN, Oct. 10.—A severe earthshock was registered on the seismograph of the Jesuit Fathers' Home in Saint Katharine's Castle at 7:30 o'clock this morning. It was estimated that the distance was 1,200 miles, the location being possibly in Italy or the Azores.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Earth tremors of pronounced intensity were recorded early today on the seismograph at the Georgetown University observatory. Beginning at 2:20 A. M., the tremors reached a maximum intensity about thirty minutes later and continued until 3:48 A. M.

TALK OF INFLATION TO AID BRITISH TRADE

Several Proposals Are Under Discussion, but Government Action Is Unlikely.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Among many rumored methods for a revival of trade which the Government is said to be considering is a certain measure of inflation of the currency, or at any rate a cessation of the process of deflation. If there is any foundation for this report it is certain that the Government has not yet got beyond the stage of examining such ideas.

Sir Montague Barlow, Minister of Labor, in a speech at Stoke Bardolph, Nottingham, stated that one of the leading bankers of London was about to father a scheme for inflation of the currency by £100,000,000, but the banker named today denied this absolutely.

It is, however, true that certain eminent banking authorities, including Reginald McKenna, former Chancellor of the Exchequer and now chairman of the London Joint City and Midland Bank, think that deflation has gone on since the armistice more quickly than is health, but on the other hand all that has happened on the continent since peace has confirmed banking circles in their strong opposition to any meddling with the British currency.

The number of failures of financial concerns which has been due to deflation and the rapid fall in the nominal value of industrial issues has acted as an object lesson to Lombard Street, and if the Treasury was inclined to depart from the straight path of sound finance, of which at present there is no evidence, it would be likely to find itself strongly opposed by the City of London.

Another announcement of Sir Montague Barlow might have an important but indirect effect on the money market. He stated that the Government was likely to lend its credit for the acceleration of a number of schemes to provide work for the unemployed, even though they were likely at present to be unremunerative. The extent to which this aid to local authorities will be forthcoming is still under consideration by the Cabinet Committee on Unemployment.

CORN EQUALS WHEAT IN RISING MARKETS

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Unusual shifting of grain values today made corn and wheat almost identical in value. No. 2 yellow corn in Chicago was worth $1.10 a bushel at the close of trading and No. 2 hard wheat ranged from $1.10 to $1.14¾.

Corn sells ordinarily about 25 cents a bushel under wheat, but the supply of corn has been nearly used up before the new crop is ready. As a result, cornmeal is actually quoted higher than some good grades of wheat flour.

The lowest prices were made at the start and the highest toward the close, with wheat 1¾@2 cents and corn 1¾@2 cents higher at the last, while oats were up ½@¾ cent and rye 1¼@1½ cents, the latter two grains reflecting the action of the two major cereals.

Eastern reports that Germany had secured a gold loan from some country and a belief that Secretary of Agriculture Wallace might give an outline of the Government's policy on agricultural relief at Kansas City tonight were factors in inducing buying.

Northwest dispatches called attention to the fact that less than 100,000,000 bushels bread Spring wheat had been raised in the four big States and backed its opinion with buying orders. There have been rumors in circulation for several days that wheat prices were to be advanced to $1.25 per bushel regardless of the news, and today's sharp upturn led to their revival.

No. 2 hard Winter in store sold at 2½ cents under December, or about $1.07½, based on the close of the future, while No. 2 yellow corn on spot was $1.10 at the last, the latter grain going to a premium for the first time under normal conditions in many years.

Old cash corn has become almost sensationally scarce and prices were up 4 cents at the last, with October $1.01½, a net gain of 4¾ cents, at St. Louis. No. 2 white sold at $1.14, or within 1 cent of No. 1 hard, and, with the exception of Kansas City, all cash corn markets reported sales at $1 or better during the day. Cash handlers expect that within a few days corn will be selling above wheat on track here.

Futures acted tight throughout the day, the surplus being taken out of the pit early by commission houses. New No. 4 yellow sold at 88 cents, track Chicago, for October shipment early in the day. Indianapolis had a car of new sample grade in from East Central Illinois which sold at 88 cents, testing 26.3 per cent. moisture.

Primary arrivals of wheat today were 1,390,000 bushels; week ago, 1,370,000; last year, 1,582,000. Shipments were 857,000 bushels; week ago, 585,000; last year, 1,091,000.

Corn receipts were 531,000 bushels; week ago, 536,000; last year, 1,240,000. Shipments, 239,000 bushels; week ago, 366,000; last year, 1,006,000.

TELL OF CROP CONDITIONS.

Federal Bank Presidents Say Reports Have Been Exaggerated.

Statements of Federal Reserve Land Bank Presidents in twelve districts indicate that reports of agricultural conditions have been exaggerated on the unfavorable side, according to a compilation of such reports prepared yesterday. The returns show that in six districts conditions are good to excellent, while in the others, with only one exception, crop conditions are described as mixed or fair or improving.

Interest in the report is particularly great at this time, because a new bond issue of approximately $50,000,000 will be brought out next week by the Federal Land Bank. The bonds, it is understood, will bear 4½ per cent. coupon rates and will be offered at slightly above par.

RAILMEN ASK MORE WAGES.

Conductors' and Brakemen's Brotherhoods Want 15 to 89 Per Cent.

Formal demands for increases in wages amounting to from 15 to 89 per cent. were made on the Eastern railroads yesterday by the Conductors' and the Brakemen's Brotherhoods. They request that the railroads grant them an answer by November 10.

These are the last of the demands of the Big Four Brotherhoods to be served on the railroads, in which increases averaging approximately 12½ per cent. are requested. Personnel officials of the roads are planning conferences with the employes, although no dates have been decided upon.

Foreign Investment Buying.

An understandable relationship between the securities of England and the United States and between the banks and bankers through whom they are handled, is one of the outstanding needs in London, according to Melvin J. Woodworth, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the New York News Bureau, who returned yesterday on the Majestic. Mr. Woodworth said that London bankers expressed the opinion that American investors soon would absorb British securities on a broader scale than before the war and that British stockholders would again become active factors in American securities.

BUYING OF COTTON BROADENS GREATLY

Prices 40 to 58 Points Higher in Market Which Easily Absorbs Offered Contracts.

The character of trading in cotton changed materially yesterday, bringing a decided improvement in prices. Following an extensive decline the last two weeks, values reached a level where a broader demand for contracts developed than could be readily supplied. Resistance to selling pressure became sufficiently pronounced to encourage many operators to replace lines sold out at higher levels, and at the same time outside business increased in volume. The buying movement proved quite general and not confined to any particular quarter nor based on new developments. Prices gained 40 to 58 points.

Action of the market during the previous afternoon in recovering sharply after two pronounced sinking spells exerted a definitely favorable influence on sentiment. Prices had reacted nearly 3 cents since the advance culminated about a month ago, bringing late months around 26½ cents. In view of uncertainties surrounding both factors in the supply and demand problem, the readjustment occurring the past few weeks had put the three large contract markets in a better position. Since it is still too early in the season for definite ideas as to the size of this year's yield or just what the world will require for the coming season, a considerable number of operators were more inclined to take cotton. So many contracts have been absorbed the past few days, owing to the extensive process of trade calling since December first sold below 28 cents that an increased commission house and professional demand steadied prices. During the first few moments of the day considerable hesitancy prevailed as a result of Liverpool's losing all the morning advance. But certain spot houses bought so freely in January, March and May that all cotton for sale disappeared around closing prices of the previous day.

Later in the morning Liverpool recovered 20 American points in distant positions, thus widening the difference between the two markets. More demand from sources outside the Exchange started an upturn that carried late months around 27½ cents. Several lines of December contracts were taken from the ring around midday, one block of 5,000 bales being purchased at 27.75. It was evident as the day advanced that efforts to secure any quantity of cotton necessitated an advance in quotations. While weather remained generally favorable, the weekly summary failed to reflect any substantial increase in the top crop resulting from satisfactory growing conditions.

Rotting of bolls in sections west of the river was reported, with picking nearing completion in portions of several States. This attracted attention and during the afternoon the whole list strengthened under an increased volume of business. Commission house buying made its appearance on the most substantial scale in some time and a rush of orders disclosed only a limited amount of cotton for sale. Lines taken from the ring earlier in the day failed to come back on the market so that prices rose more easily, once the advance got under way. New Orleans rushed up so rapidly that buying came from that quarter the last hour. December sold above 28 cents, with both March and May over 27½ cents, a gain of a cent from low figures of the week.

REPUDIATES NOTES WHICH M'CRAY USED

GRAND JURY IS AT WORK

One Witness Willing to Sign Any Paper "If It Would Do the Governor Any Good."

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 10. — Governor Warren T. McCray of Indiana, whose financial difficulties have resulted in an investigation by the Marion County Grand Jury, the filing of numerous civil suits against him at his home at Kentland, the appointment of a creditors' committee to operate his holdings, and the institution of bankruptcy proceedings for him in the Federal Court by three Fort Wayne (Ind.) banking institutions, was ordered today to appear at Fort Wayne Oct. 29 in connection with the last-named action.

The Grand Jury investigation, which was begun last week but adjourned in order that more witnesses might be summoned, was resumed today.

At Kentland associates of the Governor were called for a preliminary hearing as to their knowledge of notes bearing their names and negotiated by McCray. Alva E. Herriman and Henry A. Reinhart denied under oath knowledge of certain notes which placed obligations on the firms of A. E. Herriman & Co. and H. A. Reinhart & Co., with which they are connected. The Herriman concern engages in road construction, while the Reinhart company deals in farm implements.

Frank Henderson, a farm employe of the Governor, who is involved in litigation because of a signature on a note held by the People's Trust and Savings Bank of La Porte, appeared at the Kentland hearing and denied signing a note which is alleged to have borne his signature as manager of the Hickory Island Stock Farms. In the cross-examination of Henderson it was brought out that Governor McCray on Aug. 27 asked him to sign some papers. Henderson said he did not know the contents of the papers but was willing to sign them if it "would do the Governor any good."

STEEL MERGER EXPECTED.

Acme Goods and Inland Companies May Consolidate.

J. E. MacMurray, President of the Acme Steel Goods Company, yesterday made known the plan for merging that company with the Inland Steel Company. He sent notices to shareholders of his company urging them to accept an offer made by the Inland Company. Under the terms of an agreement between the two companies, Mr. MacMurray said, the Inland Company is to give two shares of its common stock and $5 cash for each share of common stock of the Acme Company.

Holders of more than 75 per cent. of the stock of the Acme Company have already endorsed the merger plans, according to Mr. MacMurray.

Under the plan of consolidation, Mr. MacMurray stated, his company is to retain its name, business and personnel intact for the present. He said the company was forced to take the step by the need for ensuring a constant supply of low-priced steel for manufacturers of barrel hoops, bale ties, bucket hoops, metal boxes and straps.

Total assets of the Acme Company are estimated at $4,000,000, and there is outstanding in addition to $570,000 in preferred stock, 42,000 shares of common stock.

BUFFALO BROKERS ACCUSED

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Charged with fraud and misrepresentation in a stock transaction with Mrs. Emma J. McCartney of Fairport, A. L. Fink and Henry Ellis, Buffalo stock brokers, were arraigned before Judge Gillette in County Court here today. Mrs. McCartney claims they induced her to give them valuable railroad stocks in return for securities of doubtful value.

Assistant District Attorney Fowler objected to bail being set as low at $5,000 each and the brokers were sent to jail.

According to Mr. Fowler, Fink and Ellis, stock representatives of the Allied Gas and Oil Company, Ltd., a Canadian corporation, secured from Mrs. McCartney 600 shares of Great Northern Railroad stock having a value of $65,000, in exchange for 3,000 shares of the Canadian stock with a market value of $10 a share.

Several Rochester men are listed as officers and directors of the oil concern, which is capitalized at $1,000,000.

SMITH AT TROOPER'S BIER.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Governor Smith went tonight to the bier in Troy of Roy A. Donivan, the State trooper who was shot in a battle with whisky bandits early Monday morning between Saratoga and Glens Falls. He told the widow that all the machinery of the State was in motion to bring the guilty ones to justice.

Donivan's body will be buried at Phoenicia tomorrow.

The authorities learned today that the third man suspected of being in the auto from which Donivan was shot is William King, a former railroad trainman. Search for him is being pressed. State troopers aiding the police of Troy, Watervliet, Cohoes and Albany. King, it is believed, was shot during the battle, and the theory is that he is being hidden by friends.

Evidence against George Haupt of Albany will be presented to the Saratoga County Grand Jury next Monday. Matthew Salvinski, who is held by the police on an open charge, also may have his case considered then.

INVITES JURORS TO CELLAR.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 10.—Returning to Baltimore today after a vacation in Long Island, on the eve of a proposed effort to indict him for making fruit juices that have turned to wine, the first act of Representative John Philip Hill was to extend an invitation to District Attorney Woodcock and members of the Federal Grand Jury to meet him in his cellar at 3 West Franklin Street.

Mr. Hill says he will do everything in his power to aid in returning the indictment. Mr. Woodcock said he did not intend to accept the invitation.

Ford Lends $2,000,000 to Detroit.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Oct. 10.—The Ford Motor Company again came to the financial aid of the city today when it agreed to advance $2,000,000 to take care of street railway extensions and to meet payments on sewer work already contracted for. The money loaned today brings the city's debt to the Ford Company up to $3,000,000, all of which has been loaned at 4 per cent. interest, believed to be at least 1 per cent. lower than the New York market would ask.

97,468 MARRIAGES IN THE STATE IN 1922

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The Department of Commerce announces that, according to returns received, there were in New York, for the calendar year 1922, 97,468 marriages performed and 4,238 divorces granted. For the calendar year 1916, the last year for which these statistics were collected by the Bureau of the Census, 97,454 marriages and 3,269 divorces were reported.

The number of marriages for 1922 is more than the number shown for New York in the report for the United States issued October 5, due to the inclusion of complete returns for two counties, for which additional reports have been received since that date.

The statistics of marriages for 1922 were furnished by the State Department of Health and those of divorces for the same year by the County Clerks and other county officials. The figures for some of the counties are:

INDIANS COMPLAIN OF TREATMENT ABROAD

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ALLAHABAD, India, Oct. 10.—The Allahabad municipality, in which the majority are non-co-operators, discussed a resolution proposing as retaliation for the Kenya decision the doubling of local municipal taxes upon Englishmen and Americans. It was also proposed they should be refused land for residential or other purposes.

It was pointed out that the resolution could not be made effective and an amendment was carried denouncing deprivation of Indians of their rights in America and insulting treatment of Indians in British colonies and dominions. The true remedy, it was declared in the amendment, lay in attainment of freedom by India.

FIGHT FOR SMITH IN IOWA.

Special to The New York Times.

DES MOINES, Oct. 10.—A struggle between Democrats favoring McAdoo and those supporting Governor Smith of New York will mark the selection of the Iowa delegation to the party's national convention, according to present indications.

National Committeeman Marsh and the old guard of Iowa Democrats, who are mainly "wet," are booming Smith and making plans to capture the delegation for the New York Governor in the manner in which they delivered the votes to Palmer and then to Cox in the 1920 convention. A revolt against domination by Marsh and his lieutenants has been started by Clyde L. Herring, Democratic nominee for Governor in 1920 and Senator in 1922, and former Secretary of Agriculture Meredith, who are organizing the State for McAdoo, apparently with considerable success.

The contest is also one for control of the party machinery in the State. If the McAdoo faction wins, Marsh, who is bitterly opposed to the former Secretary of the Treasury, doubtless will be dethroned. Herring will be his logical successor. The McAdoo campaign for President is far advanced in Iowa and bears evidence of careful management.

PELL DEFENDS SMITH.

Speaking before the School of Democracy of the Women's Democratic Committee, at the Hotel Commodore last night, Herbert C. Pell Jr., Democratic State Chairman, answered charges against Governor Smith's Administration recently put forward by the Republican Women's State Executive Committee. As to the charge that the Governor had "doubled the tax rate and added to the payrolls 525 new jobs for Tammany henchmen and raised the pay of 1,961 Tammanyites," Mr. Pell said:

"So far as the statement that he has doubled the tax rate is concerned, this is obviously untrue and its falsity is apparent to any person who pays $1 tax throughout this State. Have the taxes that you pay to the State been increased? If so, by how much?

"The 525 new jobs have been largely inspectors for the Department of Labor to insure the enforcement of laws designed to protect the workers of the State and new attendants in the hospitals for the sick and the demented."

JUSTICES' BALLOTS READY.

Marsh Will Head Republican List and Hatting the Democratic.

Robert McC. Marsh will head the list of Republican candidates for Justices of the Supreme Court on the official ballot, according to a special drawing held yesterday by the Board of Elections. The order in which the names of the Republican candidates will appear is as follows:

Robert McC. Marsh, Gustave Hartman(Herbert R. Limburg, Michael J. Horan, William J. Miller, Charles B. Buchner, John J. Freschi, Frederick W. Spiegelberg, Edward J. Gavegan and Nathan Bijur.

The Democratic candidates did not draw for position. Instead, the Tammany organization asked permission to be allowed to have the candidates named in the following order: Peter A. Hatting, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, Joseph Proskauer, Salvatore A. Cotillo, Charles D. Donohue, Phoenix Ingraham, Edward J. Glennon, Aaron J. Levy, Edward J. Gavegan and Nathan Bijur.

In asking permission to make up its own order of position Tammany leaders are said to have played politics, especially in according first place on the ballot to Peter J. Hatting. Tammany's strategy is said to lie in the fact that Mr. Hatting is considered the weakest candidate on the Democratic ticket, and by having him first place on the ballot he is surer of election than if his name was further down on the list.

Protest Coal Rates to Iowa.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—A complaint against the present railroad rates on coal from Illinois, Indiana and Kentucky to Iowa cities was filed today with the Interstate Commerce Commission by the Iowa Board of Railroad Commissioners. The commission was asked to institute an investigation to fix a fair rate level.

PIERRE MALLI'S WILL.

The will of Pierre Mali, of 8 Fifth Avenue, for many years Belgium Consul in this city, who died in Plainfield, N. J., Oct. 4, was filed for probate yesterday in the Surrogates' Court. The document, dated March 20 last, leaves to the widow, Frances J. Mali of 8 Fifth Avenue, all his personal property other than money and securities. It was her desire, he says, that he leave such personal property to their children, and for the father reason that his wife "has independent means of her own."

The residue of the estate is left in trust equally for the children, J. Johnston of 116 East Seventy-ninth Street, Henry J. Mali of 8 Fifth Avenue, Gertrude M. Moffat of 66 East Eighty-sixth Street and Eva M. Noyes of 19 East Seventy-fifth Street.

The value of the estate is given at $5,000 in real and over $5,000 in personal property.

HARVEY WILL RETURN BEFORE THANKSGIVING

LONDON, Oct. 10 (Associated Press).—Ambassador George Harvey plans to say farewell to the royalty at the Court of St. James's in time to eat Thanksgiving turkey and pumpkin pie at Peacham, Vt., his home town. His sailing date depends upon the time of King George's return to London, but otherwise the retiring Ambassador is winding up his affairs preparatory to his homegoing.

Yesterday, in accordance with custom, his portrait, painted by Howard Chandler Christy, was hung in a prominent place in the embassy along with those of his predecessors. Mr. Harvey's picture, which is placed between those of the late Joseph H. Choate and the late Whitelaw Reid, is unique in that it is the embassy's first canvas of an Ambassador done by an American artist.

Its dashing modern style is also distinctive, showing the Ambassador in a lounging pose with his familiar heavily rimmed spectacles, soft turned-down collar and with a briar pipe in his hand. This is in striking contrast to the more formal oils of his predecessors with their stiff shirt fronts and wing collars or ruffles and stock ties.

After visiting his home folks Mr. Harvey says he will take a long holiday. When asked about his future political activities the Ambassador replied that he would give consideration to all such matters during his holiday.

BRITAIN EXTENDS PREFERENCE IDEA

TO STUDY PURCHASING POOL

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—It was announced today at the Imperial Economic Conference by Sir Philip Lloyd-Graeme, President of the Board of Trade, that the British Government is prepared to lend its credit in order to accelerate schemes for the development of the smaller British colonies. This would not apply in a general way to the large Dominions, because they have ample financial strength of their own to raise all the capital they need.

Sir Philip began by explaining to the Dominion representatives that the British Government has a plan by which it assists local governing bodies and public utility corporations in Great Britain, by advancing capital and guaranteeing a part of the interest for a period of years. He said the Government considered that the same plan might be extended to the colonies.

This, he said, was not a piece of philanthropy, but was founded upon the soundest business motives. It had been found that the problems of the empire were all bound together, and this was one way of finding a solution. Many of the British colonies now have development schemes which are hanging fire, but which, if completed, not only would benefit the colonies themselves but would attract settlers and would provide a new outlet for British manufacturers.

The British Government believes that it would pay it to guarantee the capital needed and part of the interest for a period of years in order to accelerate the undertaking of these development plans. The conditions under which such arrangements should be made, Sir Philip suggested, ought to be, first, that advances could be made as in England, to public utility concerns; secondly, that advances should result unquestionably in an acceleration of operations; thirdly, that British communities should be set to work as far as possible, to be employed in the work; fourthly, that some form of joint responsibility should be accepted by the Government of the colonies concerned.

In the discussion which followed, the Dominion representatives heartily welcomed the British suggestion, and Henry Burton, South African Minister of Finance, mentioned in particular that there were large districts in Natal well fitted for cotton production which the British suggestion might help.

The economic conference also discussed today a grant of preference in public contracts to British goods. All departments of the home Government, it was explained, in making contracts accepted British goods even if foreign goods were cheaper by a certain percentage, which was not, indeed, absolutely fixed, but it was large enough to be of real assistance to the British producers.

The Dominion representatives cordially recognized the value of this, and undertook to follow the practice in their respective country in this matter as far as possible.

Sailors Want Only Our Tobacco.

The British seaman will smoke only American tobacco, and cannot be put off with anything else. The Imperial economic conference learned this today with great surprise. It had just heard that the British Navy bought 99 per cent. of its supplies, with the trifling exception of oil, within the British Empire, when L. S. Amery, First Lord of the Admiralty, arose and made a confession.

"I have tried to persuade the bluejackets to smoke Empire-grown tobacco," he said, "but they won't. They are too conservative. They want what they know and insist on getting it."

C. C. Graham, Canadian Minister of Railways, listened in silence and then said, with some dignity, that Canada was now producing tobacco equal to the finest Virginian leaf.

The rest of the Dominion representatives said nothing, and passed to pleasanter subjects.

Copyright, 1923, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Further plans were laid today by the Imperial Economic Conference for the fitting of the British Empire into an economic union and for giving all parts of the Empire the preference over foreigners in trade.

The subjects discussed today were schemes for insuring empire preference on public contracts and for hastening the development of outlying parts of the empire with the help of British money, for the double purpose of hailing the colonies' growth and providing an immediate market for British manufactured wares and the employment of British labor.

At the beginning of the session a committee was appointed to consider the scheme put forward by Premier Bruce of Australia for a purchasing pool of empire food and raw materials and a distribution plan for Great Britain.

The debate this morning over a reference to public contracts was opened by Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who said that it had been the British policy since 1919 to give preference wherever possible to empire and dominion, and that the policy would be continued now and even enlarged.

He said there had been an investigation recently to see if a regular percentage of preference could not be fixed, but it was decided that this would be unwise, as it would defeat its own end by warning foreigners of the competition they had to meet and encourage the formation of rich combines.

Mr. Chamberlain said it had been decided, therefore, to leave the percentage of preference to the departments letting each contract, with the instruction that all possible business was to be placed within the empire.

Replying to the results of this policy, Mr. Chamberlain asserted that the Air Board last year had bought no foreign supplies; the navy none but oil for fuel, and only 1 per cent. of that abroad; while the War Office had bought from abroad only specialties and foreign foodstuffs when the latter could not be obtained from the empire either in time or the quantity desired.

He said the post office specified that all its oil and other supplies whenever possible should be purchased within the empire.

FINDS GREAT CHANGE IN RUSSIAN OUTLOOK

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

RIGA, Oct. 8.—Professor Pilp, ex-Minister for Foreign Affairs of Esthonia and now editor of The Waba Maa, has returned from Russia, where he visited Moscow, Petrograd and Nizni Novgorod. On his return Professor Pilp, who was a lecturer at Petrograd University before the revolution, gave the following views on the present conditions of life in Soviet Russia:

"Russia has passed through a very severe crisis with her experiment in social revolution. The experiment has failed and Russia has changed her course, having abandoned the essential features of this experiment. Life has proved stronger than theory and economic laws have demonstrated their immutability.

"Financial and economic experiments have forced the Bolshevists to change their course and their new direction has given us the so-called new economic policy. The Bolshevists certainly will not and cannot go back, life will force them further and further in the direction of economic concession and parallel with this the economic reconstruction of Russia is becoming a fact. The progress of reconstruction, it is true, is as slow as the movements of a tortoise, but it is impossible not to notice and futile to deny that it has begun.

"At the present moment many former owners of factories have resumed work though they have, it is true, only received a lease of their factories, but re-establishing the right of ownership is now only a question of time. For tactical reasons the Government may for a long time hold on to remnants of its Communist program, but this is merely the final convulsion.

"In Russia at the present time there is no Communism. Of this there can be no two opinions. The general voice of Russia today says that life has become better. Conditions cannot be compared with those of 1917-1918, thanks to the relaxation of administrative guardianship in matters of trade and industry.

"The country has begun to awaken. There has been a great psychological change in the masses. It is evident that the Russian people have left the period of anarchial freedom behind them. The Soviet Government has studied the temper of the people, recognized their weariness of disorder, and life is now being regulated by certain rules. Strict responsibilities have been introduced for the use of tramcars, the railways, &c.

Professor Pilp was himself obliged to pay a fine of 50,000,000 rubles for boarding a tramcar when it was in motion. For throwing cigarette ends on the floor at railway stations or spitting out the husks of sunflower seeds there is a fine up to 500 gold rubles.

In reply to questions, Professor Pilp stated he did not believe in a new Russian revolution.

"Reconstruction of Russia's economic life is the Alpha and Omega of any Russian Government," he said. "The Bolshevists understand this now, and like real politicians, to accomplish this they have sacrificed all their theoretical doctrines. Aggressive ardor at the present moment is recognized as out of place, and it has accordingly disappeared, leaving behind it no trace. Bolshevists don't want to, and indeed cannot, wage war, for war would certainly destroy all they have begun toward economic reconstruction, but the Bolshevists don't want to, and indeed can example, a Communist revolution should occur in Germany, Russian Bolshevists would stake everything on utilizing it to the full for the purposes of their party."

CLOSE BANK, HOLD CASHIER.

ERIE, Pa., Oct. 10.—The Citizens' Bank of Albion, Erie County, the oldest banking institution in that city, was closed by State bank examiners today. They reported that they had discovered a shortage of $67,000. R. J. Griswold, the cashier, was arrested and charged with falsifying the bank's accounts. He was admitted to $15,000 bail for a hearing.

When it became known that the bank had been closed by the examiners, the First National Bank of Erie offered to take over the accounts of the Albion bank. Stockholders of the Albion institution offered to make good any shortage.

A statement issued this morning showed that the Albion bank had approximately $87,000 to cover the losses. The capital stock was $50,000, surplus $17,000, the cashier's surety bond $10,000, and undivided profits $9,606.

WOMAN GUILTY OF FORGERY.

Miss Celia H. Lehrman, 28 years old, who described herself as a model and gave her address as 272 West 126th Street, was convicted of forgery yesterday by a jury in Judge Mulqueen's part of General Sessions, and was remanded to the Tombs for sentence on Oct. 19. Evidence showed that a year ago she obtained two fur coats, valued at $1,500, from two furriers on the same afternoon, after having presented forged certified checks in payment.

In her defense the young woman said that she received the checks from a man known to her as Joseph Jogos, a broker, whose name was signed to them, and presented them to the furriers in good faith. The complainants against the young women were Slossel Brothers & Greene, at 114 West Twenty-sixth Street, and Morris Heller, at 23 West Twenty-first Street.

Cloches Lead in Millinery.

Cloches continue to be the most popular shapes in millinery, and the news that Descat has introduced some variations has served to intensify the interest shown. Their success, according to the Millinery Bulletin, has been such that the type is bound to be given every possible style twist. Those with double brims are doing very well, and other irregularities are adding to the charm of the cloche. Backs are coming into more prominence, this development occurring both in the trimming placements and the brim treatments. When the larger shapes are wanted, the fitted mushroom types are in growing vogue for dressy wear and they develop into picture hats of various kinds. Crowns are likewise receiving more attention, the sectional ones being stiffened and made higher.

Burlap Prices Are Firm.

Trading in burlaps continues on a firm basis of values, with bidders showing sustained interest in goods afloat, and the Calcutta market yesterday reported higher. Quotations on goods afloat were 6.40 cents for "lights" and 7.70 cents for the "heavies." On spot, the market was 6.60 cents for the former and 7.70 cents for the latter. For October shipment the basis was, respectively, 6.55 and 7.55 cents, while for November-December it was 6.60 and 7.10 cents. For January-March shipments business could be done at 6.50 cents for the "lights" and 6.95 cents for the heavy goods. Shipments to Atlantic Coast ports during September, according to C. E. Rockstroh & Co., Inc., were 75,000,000 yards, while those to the Pacific Coast were 6,000,000 yards.

Silk Deliveries Must Be Made.

The Raw Silk Trade Council, in accordance with the recent action of the Silk Association of America, has cabled to Japanese and foreign exporters in Yokohama its refusal to accept cancellations of contracts. The message sent reads: "Referring to cable sent Silk Association of America, we wish to point out that the laws of the United States must govern, even though Japanese law permits cancellation. September contracts must be filled, subject to reasonable delay, but cancellation is not permitted." Silk Association's reply to the exporters' request also demanded the fulfillment of all contracts, and declared that the time necessary for delayed deliveries in individual cases might be settled by mutual agreement or arbitration.

Turning Point Reached Soon?

While sellers here are still confronted by considerable uncertainty owing to the slack demand for men's wear piece goods, the belief seems to be growing that the turning point is not quite so far off as some imagine. It is true, the more optimistic say, that quite a few mills are working on part time, but that this condition will become worse is not as seriously considered by leaders in the trade as it was a few weeks ago. Good retail clothing business for Fall, for which the stage is all set, would, it is pointed out, give a much healthier aspect, and liquidation of outstanding accounts would begin to react favorably. Elimination of a considerable volume of Spring mill production, through curtailment, will also limit supplies, so that the prospect of a shortage is declared not an impossible one.

Gray Goods Were Quiet.

Trading in gray goods here yesterday was very limited, with the printcloths in most demand. Despite the slight upward movement in cotton, the business done in small lots of the standard constructions was at slightly easier prices. Sales were reported on second hands of 38½-inch 64-60s at 9⅜ cents, although first hands were asking up to 10¼ cents for them. There were also small transactions in 39-inch 68-72s at 11¾ cents, while first hands' quotations on these were a quarter of a cent higher. There was no feature to trading in sheetings, which remained quiet on the nominal basis of 13 cents by first hands and 11⅝ cents by seconds for 37-inch 48-square goods. For 39-inch 68-68s first hands quoted 13¼ cents.

Style of Children's Dresses.

More activity in the demand for children's dresses is shown with the coming of cooler weather. A leading type, according to one of the largest manufacturers, is the combination dress of French crêpe and twill-back velvet, the brown, green and tan shades being in favor with buyers. The better grades of merchandise generally, said this wholesaler yesterday, have been in demand. The serges and the jersey dresses have been in strong request, but for later season wear these are not stressed. Lines of holiday dresses are being prepared and will be shown to the trade shortly. Preparations for Spring are proceeding and men will be out for the initial road trip about the first of next month.

Increased activity lately in the furniture trade has resulted in a strong revival of the demand for mohair velvet for upholstery purposes, according to one of the leading sellers of these fabrics. The concern's mills are now running to capacity on them, and the indications are that this will continue for some time to come. The neutral shades, particularly the taupes and browns, are those mostly favored owing to the current tastes in interior decoration. Blues come next, but the interest in them is said not to be as strong as it was. Velours or cotton velvets for hangings are selling well, particularly to the metropolitan trade. The stores make these up in regulation length and width, with the French edgings being in strong favor.

Sport Skirts in Demand.

Sports skirts of rough weave are receiving by far the greater amount of buyers' attention at the moment. The silks, according to one of the most prominent wholesalers, are not being accorded the favor that was anticipated earlier. The demand is largely concentrated on those of camel's hair cloths, in either plain or novelty weaves, the wrap-around style or variations of it being most desired. The velour or homespun skirts and others with shaggy surfaces are also sought by buyers. Colors such as the wood stones that match or contrast harmonizingly with the favored blouses are liked most. The vogue of the jacquette has helped the skirt demand considerably, and about four weeks in the models for the resort season will be ready for the trade.

Getting Start on Spring Season.

Although garment manufacturers here figure on five or six weeks more of active demand for Fall merchandise, indications of early preparations for Spring are noted. Model collections are being assembled for style guidance, and some of the early ones are being shown or will be shortly. The strongest influence that will shape the tendencies for the coming season is the sports vogue, and all indications are said to point to the Spring as one of the biggest seasons for both sports weave and styling. The trade will give first attention to garments for resort wear, and the trends here will demonstrate the main tendencies for the later season. Men will start on the road for first trips with the new showings fairly early.

National Biscuit Profits.

The National Biscuit Company reports for the nine months ended Sept. 30, last, a net profit after expenses and Federal taxes, of $9,071,091, comparing with $5,223,956 for the corresponding period of last year. The company's 1923 earnings were equivalent after Preferred dividends to $3.79 a share on the 961,163,000 of $25 par value common, as against $13.41 a share for the corresponding period of last year on the $29,238,000 of outstanding $100 par common.

WARNS OF OIL REGULATION.

E. W. Marland Urges Industry to Take Action to Obviate This.

TULSA, Okla., Oct. 10 (Associated Press).—Warning oil men that State regulation of their business is imminent because of present wasteful production methods, E. W. Marland, President of the Marland Refining Company, suggested today before the International Petroleum Exposition and Congress here that leaders in the industry immediately take steps intelligently to conserve the nation's oil resources.

"I fear that we must face the possibility of State control of production," he said. "The landowners of Oklahoma and other producing States probably will not long continue to permit such foolish waste of their property by their lessees as has been the case in the past."

Declaring that overproduction in every new field is a natural result of the present system of unregulated competition among operators, Mr. Marland said he believes that one approach to the solution is "intelligent and uniform proration of purchases from flowing wells," and to that end he suggested legislation permitting purchasers and carriers to enter into agreements regarding proration during periods of overproduction."

Bargain Crowd Wrecks Window.

Crowds of women arriving yesterday an hour before the time for the doors to open at a Woolworth's store at 181st Street and Third Avenue, where a special sale had been advertised, leaned so heavily against the large plate glass window on the Third Avenue side that it gave way. Women, children and merchandise were piled together until incarcerated by two policemen. No one was reported injured and the two patrolmen maintained order until the doors were opened at 9 A. M.

Investing Corporation Buys $270,000 Apartment House.

The property was held at $270,000. The buyers contemplate extensive alterations to modernize the property. James B. Fisher & Co. were the brokers.

B. J. Sforza sold for the estate of Sophie M. Meyer the two houses and private garage on plot 100 by 100, situate northeast corner of Fourteenth Avenue and Sixtieth Street.

Frank A. Seaver & Co. sold a plot 100 by 100, on the south side of Bay Ridge Avenue, 118 feet west of Ridge Boulevard, for Mrs. Perry to a client for improvement.

Builders Acquire Two Houses on Block Front.

The Walt-Marcy Building Corporation, represented by Gettinger & Weinman, purchased the entire front block of East 171st Street and Wythe Place and Walton Avenue, being a plot of 150 by 200, which plot they will improve with two five and a half story buildings at a cost of about $900,000.

Walter E. Brown sold for Mrs. E. V. C. Hawkes the half block consisting of eleven lots situate at the southeast corner of East 169th Street and Webster Avenue, being in size 274 by 100, to a client who intends erecting a garage and stores.

Astor Village Purchase.

The Laconia Avenue Realty Company, Inc. (Alteri Brothers) purchased from Louis Gold and his associates the Astor Village property occupying the triangular block bounded by the Esplanade, Astor and Laconia Avenues for improvement with detached houses, to cost $12,500 to $18,000 each; also the block bounded by Yates, Astor and Waring Avenues and the Esplanade for improvement with thirty houses of similar character.

Astor Village immediately adjoins on the west the 498 Bronx and Pelham Parkway lots to be sold at auction by Joseph P. Day, auctioneer, on Columbus Day.

Buys Sanitarium Site.

The Houghton Company sold for T. Chambers Reid the five-story-and-basement building 371 Central Park West, northwest corner of Ninety-seventh Street, on a lot 25.11 by 100 feet. This building was built for and occupied by the Pasteur Institute.

We've Told You So
NOW It's Up To You To Make It So!

We have told you about Astor foresight. They saw the future of upper New York City and bought land along what is today the 400-ft. wide.

Bronx and Pelham Parkway

We have told you about Gould foresight—he followed the lead of the Astors and bought land beyond the Astor lots along the 400-ft. wide Bronx and Pelham Parkway—where today Colonel Edwin Gould is building houses in beautiful Pelham Parkway Gardens.

We have told you how prominent builders, James F. Meehan and others, are building hundreds of houses in the residential Park known as Astor Village, adjoining the 498 Bronx and Pelham Parkway lots that I will sell at Auction tomorrow, Columbus Day.

We have told you of the opportunities on the Bronx and Pelham Parkway that exist for "little speculators"—and asked you to go and look at the Grand Boulevard and Concourse, with new apartment houses going up all the time—and to think of the money made during the past few years by the lucky buyers of lots along the Concourse.

Now, think of YOUR possibilities in buying lots on and near the 400-ft. wide Bronx and Pelham Parkway—A logical location for the next great building movement in the Bronx.

We have told you about these two great "Roads of Destiny" that lead to your Land of Opportunity—to the 498 Bronx and Pelham Parkway lots that I will sell tomorrow at Absolute Auction.

We have told you about the tremendous increase in the values of Concourse and Boulevard plots.

And finally we have asked you to think what the 498 lots on the 400-ft. wide Bronx and Pelham Parkway and adjoining streets and avenues, 80 and 100-ft. Boulevards, Williamsbridge Road, Esplande, Astor, Mace and adjacent avenues, will be worth a few years from now.

But—most important of all—remember that you can buy these 498 Bronx and Pelham Parkway lots separately for whatever you wish to pay—no matter what they bring, at

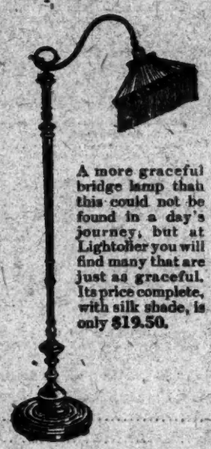
You cannot afford to overlook Lightolier when making your selection

Tables, tables, tables—Lightolier has tables for the hall, for the dining-room, for the side wall and for the bridge game—and they are all distinctive, not only as to style, but as to their most reasonable prices.

An infinite variety of the much-sought-for small reading lamps, with attractive hand-painted opalescent glass shades and convenient handles for carrying, are on display at the Lightolier Galleries.

Candle shades and shields of silk or parchment to add to the attractiveness of your home, are to be found in our showrooms in splendid profusion.



A more graceful bridge lamp than this could not be found in a day's journey, but at Lightolier you will find many that are just as graceful. Its price complete, with silk shade, is only $19.50.

This combination humidor and cellarette reflects the spirit of the times and protects your own spirits. The sliding top has a secret combination lock. Only $21.50; another of many desirable opportunities in desirable furniture.

For here, the dreams of artistic fantasy are wrought into innumerable lamps of exquisite design and form. And yet, while sheer beauty is ever preserved, mere cost is not forgotten.

For Lightolier customers have long since discovered that here, attractiveness includes both the things you buy and the prices you pay.
